WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS AND THE GREAT ADVERTISING MEDIA.

Cardiff Times

AND

SOUTH WALES WEEKLY NEWS.

72 Columns. Published every Friday Morning (Second Edition on Saturday Morning). Price 2d.

THE CARDIFF TIMES AND SOUTH WALES WEEKLY NEWS has for upwards of a quarter of a century been the recognized head of the Weekly Press of Wales. It consists of 72 long columns, and is one of the LARGEST NEWS-SHEETS in the KINGDOM. It has a very large and continually increasing circulation, and is published throughout the same extensive district as the DAILY NEWS.

THE CARDIFF TIMES is universally regarded as the GREAT WEEKLY NEWSPAPER FOR WALES AND THE WEST OF ENGLAND, and as a GENERAL ADVERTISING MEDIUM it is equalled by few provincial weekly papers.

Both papers are pre-eminent alike as News and Advertising Journals. No expense is spared in the Literary management, and every exertion is made to maintain the high position which these Papers occupy amongst provincial Journals.

THE GRAND DUCHY OF LUXEMBURG.

[Situated on the southeast border of Belgium and northeast of France.]

This State, although nominally a part of the Kingdom of the Netherlands, is really independent. The King of the Netherlands is Grand Duke of Luxemburg. Population, 197,528. Capital, Luxemburg. Area, 1,592 square miles. The German language prevails, and Luxemburg continues to be a member of the Germanic Zollverein (Commercial Union). With one exception (French) all its newspapers are in the German language.

In the subjoined list the usual abbreviations are made use of.

GRAND DUCHÉ DE LUXEMBOURG.

Cet Etat quoique faisant nominalement partie du Royaume de Hollande, est réellement indépendant. Le Roi de Hollande est Grand Duc de Luxemburg. Population, 197,528. Capitale, Luxemburg. Etendue, 1,592 milles carrés. L'Allemand est la langue du pays et le Luxemburg continue à faire partie du Zollverein (Union Commerciale). Tous les journaux sont en Allemand, avec une seule exception en Français.

Dans la liste suivante les abréviations ordinaires sont employées.

DAS GROSSHERZOGTHUM LUXEMBURG.

[An der südöstlichen Grenze Belgiens gelegen, nordöstlich von Frankreich.]

Obleich dieser Staat nominell ein Theil des Königreichs der Niederlande est, so ist er doch in Wirklichkeit unabhängig. Der König der Niederlande ist Grossherzog von Luxemburg. Bevölkerung, 197,528. Hauptstadt, Luxemburg. Flächeninhalt, 1,572 Quadrat-Meilen. Die deutsche Sprache ist vorherrschend, und Luxemburg gehört zum deutschen Zollverein. Mit Ausnahme von einer Zeitung in französischer sind alle andern in deutscher Sprache.

Die gewöhnlichen Abkürzungen sind gebraucht in der beifolgenden Liste.

THE PRINCIPALITY OF MONACO.

[Situated on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea, near the southeast point of France, within a few miles of Italy. Its area is six square miles, and its population about 7,000. It is celebrated as a resort for pleasure-seekers, its situation being romantic and picturesque, its climate delightful and salubrious, its sea view magnificent, and its social attractions famous. It enjoys a quasi-independence, but really is a dependency of France.]

PRINCIPAUTÉ DE MONACO.

DAS FÜRSTENTHUM MONACO.

UN FAIT D'IMPORTANCE.

L'agence Internationale des Journaux; H. P. Hubbard, propriétaire, New Haven, Conn., E. U. de l'A., se charge des insertions et abonnements, aux prix les plus bas du publieur, pour tous les journaux et feuilles périodiques du monde. Par nomination directe et spéciale le seul agent autorisé en Amérique pour tous les principaux journaux en Europe, Asie, Afrique, Australie et en Amérique du Sud. Des relations spécialement intimes et cordiales avec tous les journaux Américains dans lesquels des annonces sont insérées comme leur Agent spécial.

 Correspondents et Traducteurs en toutes les langues modernes.

THE KINGDOM OF SWEDEN.

OSCAR II., Reigning King. Population, 4,568,900. Capital, Stockholm.

In the following list all publications are in the Swedish language, except those where the language is stated immediately following the name.

Abbreviations—The following abbreviations are used to denote the various periods of publication: D., daily; 4 t.W., 4 times a week; T.W., 3 times a week; S.W., twice a week; W. & S.W., 1 and 2 times a week; W., once a week; S.M., twice a month; 20 t.Y., 20 times a year; M. & S.M., once and twice a month; M., once a month; M. & S.Quar., monthly and twice every 3 months; 10 t.Y., 10 times a year; 7 & 8 t.Y., 7 and 8 times a year; 7 t.Y., 7 times a year; B.M., once every 2 months; Quar., once every 3 months; 3 t.Y., 3 times a year; S.Y., twice a year; Occl., at uncertain intervals.

Sweden comprises 22 provinces or "Landskap," which are divided into 25 governments or "Län," including that of the city of Stockholm, the capital of Sweden. Thus it will be understood that the boundaries of the provinces and the governments do not quite correspond. The governments frequently have two names, one derived from the seat of the government, the other usually from the old division of the provinces.

Ecclesiastically, Sweden is divided into 12 bishoprics, which are named after the place of residence of the bishop.

For article descriptive of Sweden, together with map, list of banks and tables of money values, see Index and other departments of this work.

KONUNGARIKET SVERIGE.

OSCAR II., regerande Konung. Befolkning, 4,568,900. Hufvudstad, Stockholm.

Alla i följande förteckning upptagne tidskrifter och tidningar äro på svenska, om ej annorlunda angifves omedelbart efter titeln.

Förkortningar—För att angifva huru ofta de utkomma äro följande förkortningar använde: D., dagligen; 4 t.W., 4 gånger i veckan; T.W., tre gånger i veckan; S.W., 2 gånger i veckan; W. & S.W., 1 och 2 gånger i veckan; W., 1 gång i veckan; S.M., 2 gånger i månaden; 20 t.Y., 20 gånger om året; M. & S.M., 1 och 2 gånger i månaden; M., 1 gång i månaden; M. & S. Quar., månatligen eller 2 gånger i kvartalet; 10 t.Y., 10 gånger om året; 7 & 8 t.Y., 7 och 8 gånger om året; 7 t.Y., 7 gånger om året; B.M., en gång hvarannan månad; Quar., 1 gång i kvartalet; 3 t.Y., 3 gånger om året; S.Y., 2 gånger om året; Occl., på obestämda.

Sverige omfattar 22 landskap (provinces), hvilka äro indelade i 25 landshöfdingedömen eller län (governments), Stockholms Öfverståthållareskap inberäknadt. Häraf synes att länens och landskapens gränser ej fullkomligt sammanfalla med hvarandra. Länen hafva ofta två namn, det ena hämtadt från landshöfdingesätet, det andra från den gamla landskapsindelningen.

I kyrkligt hänseende är Sverige indeladt i 12 biskopsdömen, som alla hafva sitt namn efter biskopens residensplats.

För beskrifning öfver Sverige och karta, äfvensom för förteckning på banker och mynt-tabell, se registret och andra afdelningar af detta verk.

LE ROYAUME DE SUEDE.

OSCAR II., Roi régnant. Population, 4,568,900. Capitale, Stockholm.

Dans la liste suivante toutes les publications sont en langue Suédoise, excepté celles où la langue est donnée immédiatement après les nom.

Abbreviations—Les abréviations suivantes sont employées pour décrire les différents périodes de publication: D., quotidien; 4 t.W., 4 fois par semaine; T.W., 3 fois par semaine; S.W., 2 fois par semaine; W. & S.W., 1 et 2 fois par semaine; W., 1 fois par semaine; S.M., 2 fois par mois; 20 t.Y., 20 fois par an; M. & S.M., 1 et 2 fois par mois; M., 1 fois par mois; M. & S.Quar., 1 fois par mois et 2 fois par trimestre; 10 t.Y., 10 fois par an; 7 & 8 t.Y., 7 et 8 fois par an; 7 t.Y., 7 fois par an; B.M., 1 fois tous les 2 mois; Quar., 1 fois par trimestre; 3 t.Y., 3 fois par an; S.Y., 2 fois par an; Occl., à temps incertain.

La Suède comprend 22 provinces ou "Landskap," qui sont divisées en 25 gouvernemens ou "Län," y compris celui de la ville de Stockholm, capitale de la Suède. Ainsi il sera entendu que les lignes de séparation des provinces et celles des gouvernemens ne correspondent pas exactement. Les gouvernemens sont fréquemment deux noms; l'un dérivé du siège du gouvernement, l'autre généralement de l'ancienne division des provinces.

Ecclesiastiquement la Suède est divisée en 12 évêchés, qui sont nommés d'après le lieu de la résidence de l'évêque.

DAS KÖNIGREICH SCHWEDEN.

OSKAR II., Regierender König. Bevölkerung, 4,568,900. Hauptstadt, Stockholm.

In der folgenden Liste sind alle Publikationen in der schwedischen Sprache, ausgenommen diejenigen hinter welchen eine andere Sprache angegeben ist.

Abkürzungen: Die folgenden Abkürzungen sind gebraucht um die Zeit des Erscheinens einer jeden Publikation anzugeben: D., täglich; 4 t. W., viermal wöchentlich; T. W., dreimal wöchentlich; S. W., zweimal wöchentlich; W. & S. W., ein- und zweimal wöchentlich; W., wöchentlich; S. M., zweimal monatlich; 20 t. Y., zwanzigmal jährlich; M. & S. M., ein- und zweimal monatlich; M., monatlich; M. & S. Quar., monatlich und zweimal alle drei Monate; 10 t. Y., zehnmal jährlich; 7 & 8 t. Y., sieben- und achtmal jährlich; 7 t. Y., siebenmal jährlich; B. M., einmal alle zwei Monate; Quar., vierteljährlich; 3 t. Y., dreimal jährlich; S. Y., zweimal jährlich; Occl., in unbestimmten Zeiträumen.

Schweden enthält 22 Provinzen oder „Landskap“, welche in 25 Distrikte oder „Län“ eingetheilt sind, einschliesslich der Stadt Stockholm, Hauptstadt Schwedens. Aus diesem wird man ersehen dass die Grenzlinien der Provinzen und Distrikte nicht immer übereinstimmen. Die Distrikte haben oft zwei Namen, einen der vom Sitz der Regierung genommen ist, und den andern von der früheren Eintheilung der Distrikte.

In kirchlicher Beziehung ist Schweden in 12 Bisthümer eingetheilt, welche ihren Namen von dem Wohnsitz des Bischofs erhalten.

Wegen beschreibenden Artikel, sowie Karte, Liste der Banken und Geld-Tabelle von Schweden, siehe Inhaltsverzeichniss und andere Theile dieses Werkes.

AN EXPLANATORY LETTER FROM THE UNITED STATES CONSUL.

The following extracts from an interesting letter written by the Hon. ERNEST L. OPPENHEIM, late Consul at Gothenburg, accompanying the foregoing list of Swedish newspapers, convey so much timely and appropriate information in relation to the language and publications of Sweden that their reproduction seems called for in this connection:

UNITED STATES CONSULATE, GOTHENBURG, December 22, 1880.

Mr. H. P. Hubbard, New Haven:

DEAR SIR—I enclose herewith a complete list of the newspapers and periodicals of Sweden. The list has been prepared with great care and does, in all important particulars, come as near to complete accuracy as could fairly be expected. I have had the advice and counsel of several active members of the press here, and for some information not to be had here, I applied to Stockholm. As far as the number of copies of each paper is concerned, it is of course impossible in many cases to give anything but fair approximations. This applies specially to the small country sheets. I have adopted the alphabetic system used in your specimen page (Turkey) in making up the list. An apparent irregularity in the alphabetic arrangement needs explanation: The vowels with phonetic signs over them, å, ä and ö, are considered as independent characters, and are put at the end of the Swedish alphabet in the order mentioned. This has been adhered to in the list, and you will therefore find the town "Åmål" after "Ystad," etc. The å sounds almost like a in "ball," the ä nearly like a in "have," and the ö nearly like i in "sir." The ring (ö) over the å, however, you are not likely to find in American type cases,* and I may therefore mention that publishers in England when using Swedish words in an English text,

*The Publisher of this Directory is happy in saying that American enterprise is equal to the demand of even Swedish typography. He has had the required type with peculiar marks of accentuation specially cast for this work.

frequently use the letter o for the Swedish å. This much for typography. The column for "field of circulation" I have not used as intended, as all these papers are almost exclusively circulated in Sweden, chiefly in the districts and towns where published. The dailies are only published on working-days. The papers are without exception, published in the Swedish language. The great majority of the publications have a geographical noun in their title. Where a province is known by several names (of which there are a number of instances), the one officially used has been chosen. Sweden is divided for administrative purposes into twenty-four provinces (Län), and a special division comprising the city of Stockholm and vicinity. The Swedish name for the latter is "Öfverståthållareskap," and cannot be rendered into English save by turning it into a long phrase; I therefore suggest the expression "Metropolitan District." Please remember, however, that Stockholm is not in Stockholm's Län. The often-recurring "General Promulgations" is an official sheet issued by the different provincial governments, which is sent gratis to the different civil officers of the district. Copies, however, are for public sale also. The "Stift" journals are a sort of ecclesiastical bulletin issued from the Diocese headquarters, and are sent free to the clergy of the Diocese. Their circulation amongst the public is next to nothing. Both classes of these sheets would not be styled newspapers in the United States. The most proper designation would be "official circulars," yet they had better be kept in the list, as in some of the sparsely-populated districts, as the extreme north, such sheets are the only vehicle of news to the common people. Where the column for political complexion is left blank it means that the sheet pays no special attention to political affairs, which is the case with the vast majority of the country papers; they are simply local advertising media, and what editorials they have are "gained at the scissors' point." Where a paper is mentioned as "religious, unsectarian," it means that it is a Protestant paper, not championing or representing any particular denomination. The terms "liberal" and "conservative" may, in a rough way, be looked upon as equivalent to the same terms used in English politics. In reality the political lines are not very distinctly drawn in Sweden; the one question on which the greatest divergence of views prevails is the issue between Protection and Free Trade, and I have therefore laid special stress upon the attitude of the leading sheets upon that point. The sheets devoted to novels are simply a publishing-house edition of popular novels, gotten up cheaply and issued at regular intervals, yet having a title they are looked upon in a certain sense as periodical.

I remain, my dear sir, very respectfully yours,

ERNEST L. OPPENHEIM, U. S. Consul.

For beskrivende Artikkel over Norge, saavel som Kort, Liste af Banker, og Penge-Værdi-Tabel, se Registret og andre Dele af dette Værk.

N. B.—"Amt" betyder i Norge saavel som i Danmark en Deel af Landet, der med Hensyn til Regjeringen svarer til "County" i England og de Forenede Stater. Norge deles i 20 Amter.

LE ROYAUME DE LA NORVEGE.

[Partie intégrante du Royaume de Suède et de Norvège.]

Population, 1,806,900. Capitale, Christiania.

Il faut entendre que dans les listes suivantes toutes les publications sont en langue Norvégienne si le contraire n'est marqué vis-à-vis le nom de la publication qui fait exception.

Abbreviations.—Les abréviations suivantes sont employées pour marquer les différents périodes de publication: D., quotidien; 5 t. W., 5 fois par semaine; 4 t. W., 4 fois par semaine; T. W., 3 fois par semaine; S. W., 2 fois par semaine; W., 1 fois par semaine; S. M., 2 fois par mois; M., 1 fois par mois; Quar., 1 fois par trimestre.

Pour l'article descriptif de la Norvège, aussi bien que pour la carte, le catalogue des banques et la table de la valeur des monnaies, voir l'Index et les autres départements de cet ouvrage.

N. B.—"Amt" signifie en Norvège, aussi bien qu'au Danemark, une juridiction administrative, correspondant à peu près à un comté en Angleterre ou aux Etats-Unis. La Norvège est divisée en 20 amter or amts.

DAS KÖNIGREICH NORWEGEN.

[Ein Theil des Königreichs Schweden und Norwegen.]

(Wegen Regierenden König siehe Schweden.)

Bevölkerung, 1,806,900. Hauptstadt, Christiania.

Es ist verstanden dass alle Publikationen in der folgenden in Liste in der norwegischen Sprache sind, ausser wenn besonders bemerkt hinter dem Namen der Publikation einer andern Sprache.

Abkürzungen.—Die folgenden Abkürzungen sind gebraucht um die Zeit des Erscheinens einer jeden Publikation anzugeben: D., täglich; 5 t. W., fünfmal wöchentlich; 4 t. W., viermal wöchentlich; T. W., dreimal wöchentlich; S. W., zweimal wöchentlich; W., wöchentlich; S. M., zweimal monatlich; M., monatlich; Quar., alle drei Monate.

Wegen beschreibenden Artikel, sowie Karte, Liste der Banken und Geld-Tabelle von Norwegen, siehe Inhaltsverzeichnis und andere Theile dieses Werkes.

NOTIZ.—"Amt" bezeichnet in Norwegen, sowohl als in Dänemark, einen Theil des Landes in Bezug auf die Regierung, ähnlich einem County in England oder den Vereinigten Staaten. Norwegen ist eingetheilt in 20 Amter.

THE BRITISH POSSESSION OF GIBRALTAR.

[This famous stronghold, belonging to Great Britain, is situated upon the most southern point of land upon the coasts of Southwestern Spain, and occupies a rocky peninsula jutting into the sea, which in size is about three miles long by three-quarters of a mile wide. It is accounted thoroughly impregnable to military assault,—the strongest fortification in the world. The central rock rises to a height of 1,439 feet above sea level. The town of Gibraltar is built upon a margin of level ground between the water's edge west of the peninsula and the foot of the hill. It has one broad street half a mile in length, and contains a population of about 17,000 (exclusive of the military forces)—"a motley agglomeration of English, Spaniards, Jews and Moors." The regular garrison numbers, in time of peace, about 7,000 men. Various languages are spoken, Spanish being predominant. The entire civil and military authority of the possession is vested in the governor, who is appointed by the British Crown. The following list embraces all newspapers published within Gibraltar, the usual abbreviations being used.]

POSSESSION ANGLAISE DE GIBRALTAR.

[Cette fameuse forteresse, appartenant à la Grande Bretagne, est située sur la pointe de terre la plus méridionale sur les côtes sud ouest de l'Espagne, et occupe une péninsule rocheuse d'une étendue d'environ 3 milles de long sur $\frac{3}{4}$ de mille de large. On croit qu'elle est tout à fait imprenable d'assaut; c'est la plus formidable fortification du monde. Le rocher du centre s'élève à une hauteur de 1,439 pieds au-dessus du niveau de la mer. La ville de Gibraltar est bâtie sur un terrain plat entre le bord de l'eau à l'ouest de la péninsule et le pied de la colline. Elle a une large rue d'un demi-mille de long, et contient une population d'environ 17,000 âmes (non compris les forces militaires), "assemblage confus d'anglais, d'espagnols, de Juifs et de Maures." La garrison régulière en temps de paix consiste d'environ 7,000 hommes. Diverses langues sont en usage, dont la principale est l'Espagnol. L'autorité civile et militaire entière est confiée au gouverneur qui est nommé par la couronne Britannique. La liste suivante embrasse tous les journaux publiés à Gibraltar. Les abréviations accoutumées sont employées.]

POSESION INGLESA DE GIBRALTAR.

[Esta famosa fortaleza que pertenece á Inglaterra, es situada en la punta de tierra mas meridional sobre las costas suroeste de la España, y ocupa una península peñascosa cerca de 3 millas de largo y $\frac{3}{4}$ de milla de ancho. Se cree que no se puede tomar por asalto; es la mas tremenda fortaleza en el mundo. La roca del centro se levanta á unos 1,439 pies mas alto que el llano del mar. La ciudad de Gibraltar es construída sobre una llanura, entre el margen del mar al suroeste de la península y el pie de la colina. Tiene una calle anchà calle de $\frac{1}{2}$ milla de largo, y contiene una poblacion de cerca de 17,000 almas (sin contar las fuerzas de la guarnicion), "multitud confusa de Ingleses, Españoles, Judios y Moros." La guarnicion regular en tiempo de paz consiste de cerca de 7,000 hombres. Varios idiomas se usan el principal es el Español. La autoridad entera, civil y militar, es entregada al gobernador, nombrado por el gobierno Ingles. La lista siguiente contiene todos los periodicos publicados en Gibraltar. THE TURKISH EMPIRE.

[Exclusive of possessions in Africa.]

ABDUL HAMID II., Reigning Sultan. Population of Turkey in Europe (by estimates of 1879), 4,275,000; in Asia, 15,715,000; total, 19,990,000. Capital, Constantinople.

For the purpose of unity it has been deemed appropriate to incorporate the journals of Turkey in Europe and of Turkey in Asia, in immediately consecutive lists, since their separation by continents would detract from the importance of the Turkish press as a whole. The publications of Egypt, which is, at best, but a nominal dependency of the Ottoman Empire, appear within the catalogue of the newspapers of Africa. The other Turkish possessions in Africa (Tunis and Tripoli) have no journals worthy of mention in this connection.

In the following lists the language in which each publication appears, except in a few instances, is stated immediately after its name.

Abbreviations—The following abbreviations are made use of to denote the various periods of publication: D., daily; T.W., 3 times a week; S.W., twice a week; W., once a week; S.M., twice a month; M., once a month.

☞ For articles descriptive of Turkey in Europe and Asia, and for maps, lists of banks and tables of money values, see Index and other departments of this work.

L'EMPIRE DE TURQUIE.

[Exclusif des possessions d'Afrique.]

ABDUL HAMID II., Sultan régnant. Population de la Turquie d'Europe (par estimation 1879), 4,275,000; en Asie, 15,715,000; total, 19,990,00. Capitale, Constantinople.

Pour plus d'unité on a jugé à propos d'incorporer les journaux de la Turquie d'Europe avec ceux de la Turquie d'Asie, dans des listes immédiatement consécutives, puisque leur séparation par continent diminuerait l'importance de la presse Turque dans son ensemble. Les publications de l'Egypte, qui n'est, après tout, qu'une dépendance nominale de l'empire Ottoman, paraissent dans le catalogue des journaux de l'Afrique. Les autres possessions Turques en Afrique (Tunis et Tripoli), n'ont point de journaux dignes d'être mentionnés dans ce dictionnaire.

Dans les listes suivantes la langue dans laquelle paraît chaque publication, excepté dans quelques instances, est mentionnée immédiatement après le nom.

Abbreviations—Les abréviations suivantes sont employées pour marquer les différents périodes de publication: D., quotidien; T.W., 3 fois par semaine; S.W., 2 fois par semaine; W., 1 fois par semaine; S.M., 2 fois par mois; M., 1 fois par mois.

DAS TÜRKISCHE KAISERREICH.

[Ausschliesslich der Besitzungen in Afrika.]

ABDUL HAMID II., Regierender Sultan. Bevölkerung der Türkei in Europa (nach Veranschlagung in 1879), 4,275,000; in Asien, 15,715,000; im Ganzen, 19,990,000. Hauptstadt, Constantinopel.

Es wurde als zweckmässig betrachtet die Publikationen der europäischen wie die der asiatischen Türkei in zwei auf einander folgenden Listen zu publiciren, indem durch eine Theilung nach den Welttheilen die Liste der Türkei in Bezug auf Wichtigkeit zu viel verloren hätte. Die Publikationen Egyptens, welches Land am Ende doch nur dem Namen nach mit dem Türkischen Reiche verbunden ist, werden gegeben in der Liste Afrikas. Die andern Türkischen Besitzungen in Afrika (Tunis und Tripolis) haben keine Journale die wichtig genug wären hier beachtet zu werden.

In der folgenden Liste ist es gleich hinter den Namen der Zeitungen bemerkt in welcher Sprache dieselben erscheinen, ausgenommen in einigen Fällen.

Abkürzungen—Die folgenden Abkürzungen sind gebraucht um die Zeit des Erscheinens einer jeden Publikation anzugeben: D., täglich; T.W., dreimal wöchentlich; S.W., zweimal wöchentlich; W., wöchentlich; S.M., zweimal monatlich; M., monatlich.

☞ Wegen beschreibenden Artikel, sowie Karten, Liste der Banken und Geld-Tabellen der Europäischen und Asiatischen Türkei, siehe Inhaltsverzeichniss und andere Theile dieses Werkes.

THE ISLAND OF ICELAND.

[Situated in the North Atlantic Ocean, its northern limits touching the Arctic Circle. It lies about 700 miles west of Norway and 500 northwest of the north point of Scotland, and is, in general terms, 1,700 miles nearer the North Pole than is the city of New York, or about 1,000 nearer than the city of London. Belonging to Denmark, it nevertheless enjoys a large measure of local independence. The island is, in general terms, 300 miles long and 200 broad, and is distinguished for its great volcanoes, its wonderful geysers (hot springs), and its immense glaciers; but not more so for these than for the rare intellectual culture that exists among its people. Population of the island, 69,763. Capital, Reykjavik.]

That an island isolated from the great continents of civilization, subject to the rigors of an Arctic winter, and to the buffeting of the frozen seas of the extreme North; out of the track of commerce, and away from the warming influences of the great currents of the world's life, and with such dreary and inhospitable shores, where at best it would seem to strain life's work to maintain even a mere existence in the face of such natural embarrassments—should be found to have as great a number of newspapers in existence as are printed in the vernacular tongue of the Empire of China proper, that nation of four hundred millions of people, must be regarded as one of the rare phenomena of civilization that sets at naught all the reasonable calculations of the human mind. It may be added that the newspapers of Iceland are published at a point farther north than the place of publication of any other journals in existence.

In the following list it will be understood that all publications are in the Icelandic language, (the old Norwegian), preserved in nearly its ancient purity. The following abbreviations are used to denote the various periods of publication: S.M., twice a month; M., once a month; Quar., once every 3 months; Y., once a year.

☞ For article descriptive of Iceland, map, etc., see Index and other departments of this work.

ILE DE L'ISLANDE.

[Située dans le Nord de l'Atlantique; la limite septentrionale touche le cercle polaire Arctique. Elle se trouve à 700 milles ouest de la Norvège et à 500 milles au nord-ouest de la pointe septentrionale de l'Ecosse, et, en termes généraux, elle est à 1,700 milles plus près du Pôle du Nord que la ville de New-York ou environ 1,000 milles plus près que la ville de Londres. Quoiqu'elle appartienne au Danemark elle jouit cependant d'une grande indépendance locale. L'île a, en termes généraux, 300 milles de long sur 200 de large; elle est remarquable par ses volcans, ses étonnantes geysers (ou sources brûlantes) et ses immenses glaciers; mais pas plus pour toutes ces choses que pour la rare culture intellectuelle de ses habitants. Population de l'île, 69,763. Capitale, Reykjavik.]

Qu'une île si isolée des grands centres de la civilisation, sujette à la rigueur des hivers arctiques et aux tourmentes des mers glaciales de l'extrême nord; hors des voies du commerce et loin de l'influence réchauffante des grands courants de la vie du monde, et sur des rivages tristes et inhospitaliers où il paraîtrait difficile, au mieux, de maintenir la vie par des efforts continuels, en face de tant de difficultés naturelles; qu'ici, disons nous, nous trouvons qu'il existe un aussi grand nombre de journaux que dans l'empire de la Chine proprement dit, dans la langue naturelle de cette nation de 400,000,000 d'âmes; il faut regarder cela comme un des rares phénomènes de la civilisation qui met à néant tous les calculs raisonnables de l'esprit humain. On peut ajouter, en passant, que les journaux de l'Islande sont publiés à un point plus au nord que le lieu de publication d'aucun autre journal en existence.

On comprendra que, dans la liste suivante, toutes les publications sont en langue Islandaise, l'ancien Norvégien, préservé presque dans sa pureté primitive.

Les abréviations suivantes sont employées pour marquer les différentes périodes de publication: S.M., 2 fois par mois; M., 1 fois par mois; Quar., 1 fois par trimestre; Y., 1 fois par an.

DIE INSEL ISLAND.

[Im Nördlichen Atlantischen Ocean gelegen und an das Nördliche Eismeer grenzend. Sie liegt ungefähr 700 Meilen westlich von Norwegen, 500 Meilen nordwestlich von der nördlichen Spitze Schottlands, und ist, allgemein geredet, 1,700 Meilen näher dem Nordpol als die Stadt New York, oder ungefähr 1,000 Meilen näher als die Stadt London. Obgleich sie zu Dänemark gehört so ist sie doch in grossem Maasse unabhängig. Durchschnittlich ist die Insel 300 Meilen lang und 200 Meilen breit. Sie ist berühmt wegen ihrer grossen Vulkane, ihrer wunderbaren Geysers (heisse Quellen) und ihrer mächtigen Gletscher, aber auch eben so wegen der besonderen geistigen Bildung, die sich unter ihren Bewohnern findet. Bevölkerung der Insel, 69,763. Hauptstadt, Raikjavik.]

Dass eine Insel, abgeschnitten von den grossen Centralpunkten der Civilisation, der Kälte des arktischen Winters und den Stürmen der Eismeeere des äussersten Nordens ausgesetzt, entfernt von den Wegen des Verkehrs und den erwärmenden Einflüssen des Lebens der Welt, und mit solchen kahlen und unbewohnbaren Küsten, wo, wie es scheint, es alle Lebenskraft nimmt nur seine Existenz zu fristen gegenüber solchen Schwierigkeiten—dass wir hier eine solch grosse Anzahl von Zeitungen antreffen als in dem grossen Chinesischen Reiche, mit vier Millionen Einwohnern, in der Landessprache gedruckt werden, dies muss betrachtet werden als eine jener merkwürdigen Erscheinungen, welche alle menschliche Beurtheilung übertreffen. Wir mögen noch hinzusetzen dass die Zeitungen Islands weiter nördlich gedruckt werden als irgendwelche andere Publikationen in Existenz.

Es ist verstanden dass alle Publikationen in der nachfolgenden Liste in der isländischen Sprache sind. Diese Sprache ist die alte norwegische Sprache, in beinahe ihrer ganzen Reinheit. Die folgenden Abkürzungen sind gebraucht um die Zeit des Erscheinens der Publikationen anzugeben: S.M., zweimal monatlich; M., monatlich; Quar., vierteljährlich; Y., jährlich.

THE CHINESE EMPIRE.

(Chung Kwo—"The Middle Kingdom.")

TS'AI-T'EN (surnamed KWANGSU), Reigning Emperor (Hwangti.) The Chinese Emperor is officially known as T'ien-tze ("Son of Heaven"), and is described as feng t'ien ming (one who has received a Divine Commission as Emperor). The population of the Chinese Empire, including its dependencies and territorial possessions, is variously estimated at from 360,000,000 to 400,000,000. Capital, Peking.

In proportion to its vast population, China has a smaller number of newspapers than any other portion of the globe—interior Africa (where there are none) alone excepted. It will be seen by an examination of the subjoined list that the proportion of newspapers to population is in the ratio of about one journal to two million inhabitants—equivalent to one newspaper (of very limited circulation) for the whole of New York, Brooklyn and Jersey City, or two publications for the entire Metropolitan Police District of the city of London, with fully four millions of people. The Chinese Empire proper contains but twenty-two periodicals, of which twelve are in Chinese, nine in English, and one in the French language. This does not include the publications of Hong Kong, which are grouped under the head of that island as a British colony, although the Chinese and Anglo-Chinese newspapers there published may be said, in some sense, to belong to the Empire. With the exception of the Pekin Gazette (the government organ), the circulations of the Chinese (native) publications are phenomenally small, and indicate that, as a rule, the newspaper is unknown to the Chinese masses. An examination of the map will reveal the fact that the newspapers of China are, with three exceptions, clustered near together in the ports of Shanghai, Ningpo, Amoy and Foochow, all upon a coast line not exceeding six hundred miles in length. Of the entire twenty-two publications of the empire, fifteen are in Shanghai. The three exceptions are the Gazette at Peking, and two journals at Hankow, on the great river Yang-tsi-Kiang, seven hundred miles inland from its mouth. To the countless millions of population in the interior the newspaper is an unheard-of thing. Even Canton, near to Hong Kong, with a population of one and a half millions, has not within it a publication of any sort. This seems the more inexplicable since, in a certain sense, the Chinese justly pride themselves upon their educational institutions and upon the general intelligence of their people. Indeed, it is rare to meet with a Chinaman, even in the humbler walks of life, unable to read and write his native tongue with comparative ease. Their hereditary antipathy to the introduction of foreign innovations and ideas can alone account for this successful rejection of the newspaper after it has won its way into the very heart of Japan and throughout the body of India.

In the following list the language in which each publication appears is stated (in parentheses) immediately after the name.

Abbreviations—The following abbreviations are used to denote the several periods of publication: D., daily; W., weekly; M., monthly; B.M., once every two months.

For articles descriptive of China, as well as for map, list of banks and table of money values, see Index and other departments of this work.

EMPIRE DE LA CHINE.

(Chung Kwo—"Le Royaume du Milieu.")

TS'AI-T'EN (surnommé KWANGSU), Empereur régnant (Hwangti.) L'Empereur de la Chine est connu officiellement comme T'ien-tze ("Fils du Ciel.") et est décrit comme feng t'ien ming (celui qui a reçu une commission Divine comme Empereur.) La population de l'Empire de la Chine, y-compris les dépendances et les possessions territoriales, est estimée comme variant de 360,000,000 à 400,000,000. Capitale, Pékin.

En proportion de sa population la Chine a un plus petit nombre de journaux qu'aucune autre partie du globe, excepté seulement l'intérieur de l'Afrique, où il n'y en a aucun. On verra en examinant les listes ci-dessous que la proportion des journaux est à raison d'environ un journal pour deux millions d'habitants—équivalent à un journal, de circulation très limitée, pour les populations de la ville entière de New York, de Brooklyn et de Jersey City, ou deux publications pour le district entier de la Police Métropolitaine de la ville de Londres, avec au moins quatre millions d'habitants. L'Empire de la Chine proprement dit ne contient que vingt-deux journaux, dont 12 sont en Chinois, 9 en Anglais et 1 en Français. Ceci ne comprend pas les publications de Hong Kong, qui sont groupées sous le chapitre de cette île comme colonie Anglaise, quoique les journaux Chinois et Anglo-Chinois qui y sont publiés puissent être considérés, en quelque sens, comme appartenant à l'Empire. A l'exception de la Gazette de Peking (organe du gouvernement), les circulations des publications vraiment Chinoises sont extraordinairement petites, ce qui indique que, en règle générale, le journal n'est pas connu parmi les masses en Chine. Un examen de la carte géographique révélera le fait que les journaux de la Chine, à l'exception de trois, sont groupés les uns près des autres dans les ports de Shanghai, de Ningpo, d'Amoy et de Foochow, tous sur une ligne de côte n'excédant pas 600 milles en longueur. Des 22 publications de l'empire, 15 sont à Shanghai. Les trois exceptions sont la Gazette à Peking et deux journaux à Hankow, sur la grande rivière Yang-tsi-Kiang, dans l'intérieur à 700 milles de son embouchure. Quant aux innombrables millions de la population de l'intérieur le journal leur est complètement inconnu. Même Canton, près de Hong Kong, avec une population d'un million et demi, n'a pas un seul journal. Ceci peut paraître d'autant plus inexplicable que les Chinois se flattent, avec justice, de ne rencontrer un Chinois, même de la plus basse classe, incapable de lire et d'écrire sa langue natale avec une facilité remarquable. Leur antipathie héréditaire à l'introduction des idées et des innovations étrangères peut seule expliquer cette réjection continuée des journaux qui ont maintenant trouvé un accès libre au centre même du Japon et dans le corps entier de l'Inde.

Dans la liste suivante la langue dans laquelle paraît chaque publication est donnée (entre parenthèse) immédiatement après le nom.

Abbreviations—Les abréviations suivantes sont employées pour marquer les périodes différents de publication: D., quotidien; W., hebdomadaire; M., 1 fois par mois; B.M., 1 fois tous les deux mois.

Pour les articles descriptifs de la Chine, ainsi que pour la carte géographique, la liste des banques, et les tables de la valeur des monnaies, voir l'Index et les autres départements de cet ouvrage.

DAS KAISERREICH CHINA.

(Chung Kwo—"Das Reich der Mitte.")

TS'AI-T'EN (mit dem Zunamen KWANGSU), Regierender Kaiser (Hwangti.) Der Kaiser von China ist offiziell bekannt als T'ien-tze („Sohn des Himmels"), und wird bezeichnet als feng t'ien ming (einer der einen gött-lichen Auftrag als Kaiser erhalten hat.) Die Bevölkerung des Chinesischen Reiches, mit Einschluss seiner abhängigen Länder, wird geschätzt auf von 360,000,000 bis 400,000,000. Hauptstadt, Peking.

Im Verhältniss zu seiner grossen Einwohnerzahl hat China eine geringere Anzahl von Publikationen als irgend ein anderes Land der Welt, (ausgenommen das mittlere Afrika, wo gar keine Zeitungen sind.) Bei einer Prüfung der beigefügten Liste wird man sehen dass das Verhältniss der Zeitungen ungefähr das von einer Zeitung für zwei Millionen Einwohner ist—oder gleichwie eine Zeitung mit sehr geringer Auflage für die ganze Stadt New York, sammt Brooklyn und Jersey City, oder gleichwie zwei Zeitungen für den ganzen städtischen Polizei-Distrikt der Stadt London, mit vollkommen vier Millionen Einwohnern. Das eigentliche Chinesische Kaiserreich hat nur zweiundzwanzig Publikationen, davon sind 12 in chinesisches, 9 in englischer, und 1 in französischer Sprache. Dies schliesst nicht die Publikationen von Hong Kong ein, welche besonders gegeben sind in der Liste dieser Insel als eine Britische Kolonie, obgleich man die chinesischen und anglo-chinesischen Zeitungen wohl betrachten mag in einem Sinne als zu denen des Kaiserreichs gehörend. Mit Ausnahme der Peking Gazette (das Organ der Regierung), ist die Circulation der Chinesischen Zeitungen auffallend gering, und dieses zeigt das im allgemeinen die Zeitung den Massen des Volkes unbekannt ist. Ein Blick auf die Karte wird die Thatsache darstellen dass die Zeitungen China's, mit Ausnahme von dreien, alle nahe beisammen sind, in den Hafenstädten Shanghai, Ningpo, Amoy und Foochow, alle der Küste entlang, für etwa sechshundert Meilen. Von den ganzen 22 Publikationen des Reiches sind 15 in Shanghai. Die 3 Ausnahmen sind die Gazette in Peking, und zwei Journale in Hankow, an dem grossen Flusse Yang-tsi-Kiang, 700 Meilen landeinwärts von dessen Mündung. Den unzähligen Millionen im Innern des Landes ist die Zeitung ein völlig unbekanntes Ding. Selbst Canton, nahe bei Hong Kong, mit einer Bevölkerung von einer und einer halben Million, hat nicht eine einzige Zeitung irgend welcher Art. Dies ist um so viel mehr unerklärlich, da doch die Chinesen sich, und in einem Sinne nicht mit Unrecht, ihrer Erziehungsanstalten und der allgemeinen Bildung ihres Volkes rühmen. Es ist in der That selten dass man einen Chinesen trifft, selbst unter den geringsten Ständen, der nicht seine Sprache mit verhältnissmässiger Fertigkeit lesen und schreiben kann. Ihre bekannte Aneignung gegen die Einführung einer ausländischen Neuerung oder Idee kan allein die erfolgreiche Verwerfung der Zeitung erklären, da doch dieselbe ihren Weg gefunden hat in das Allerinnerste von Japan und das ganze Indien.

In der folgenden Liste ist es hinter jeder Publikation (in Klammern) bemerkt in welcher Sprache dieselbe erscheint.

Abkürzungen—Die folgenden Abkürzungen sind gebraucht um die Zeit des Erscheinens jeder Publikation anzugeben: D., täglich; W., wöchentlich; M., monatlich; B.M., alle zwei Monate.

[This official publication is said, with evidence of truth, to be the oldest periodical publication in existence, having been established over one thousand years ago. It is now published in the style and of the size adopted in its first issues. It is pamphlet-like in shape, printed upon very soft, thin paper, the leaves being about ten inches long by four wide. Each issue contains from fifteen to twenty leaves, printed on one side only, in Chinese characters, commencing at the right-hand (or what to Americans and Europeans would be the last page of the issue), and progressing left-ward to its end. Each number is enclosed in a thin, yellow cover of slazy paper, the cover and leaves being tightly stitched together at the back. The edges being untrimmed, the appearance of the paper as it goes to the public, creates an impression of unfinished shagginess not altogether consistent with Western ideas of neatness. It contains only imperial edicts and official information.]

THE BRITISH COLONY OF HONG KONG.

[Situated upon an island near to the southeast coast of China, and includes a small portion of the main land opposite, the whole embracing an area of about 35 square miles. The island is eleven miles long, by 4 or 5 wide, and is separated from the continent by a narrow strait varying in width from half a mile to 4 miles. It is 75 miles distant from Canton, and 1,400 miles almost due south of Peking by an air line, or over 2,000 miles by the ordinary routes of travel.]

Hon. JOHN POPE HENNESSY, C.M.G., Governor of the Colony, (appointed by the British Crown.) Capital, Victoria, (commonly called Hong Kong.) Population of the Colony (official estimate 1876), 139,144, of which only about 6,000 were Americans and Europeans.

In the subjoined list the language in which each publication appears is stated (in parentheses) immediately after the name.

The following abbreviations are used to denote the several periods of publication: D., daily; W., weekly; B.W., once every 2 weeks; B.M., once every 2 months; Y., once a year.

THE EMPIRE OF BRITISH INDIA.

[Including British India, the Feudatory or Protected States and Dependencies, together with Assam and British Burmah.]

Her Majesty, VICTORIA, Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, and Empress of India, Ruling Sovereign. Rt. Hon. GEORGE FREDERICK SAMUEL ROBINSON, Governor-General. Population of the entire territory 191,096,603. Capital, Calcutta.

In the subjoined lists the language in which each publication appears is stated (in parentheses) immediately following the name, except in a few cases where the language is not ascertained. For convenience and distinctness the publications of the province of Assam and those of British Burmah are grouped separately immediately after the main division. It is said that the publications of India, and especially those in the native tongues, are more thoroughly read or circulated, in proportion to the number of copies issued, than those of any other country in the world. Not infrequently a single copy of a newspaper will be read by a whole village, going the rounds from house to house until, even with the tenderest handling, it is completely worn out. This to some extent compensates for the smallness of the circulations of the Indian journals in comparison with the immense population to be supplied.

It will be observed that in these lists all cities, towns and villages are arranged alphabetically, without reference to their size, location or importance, and not by provinces or other subdivisions, (except as above stated in relation to Assam and British Burmah.)

Abbreviations—The following abbreviations are used to denote the various periods of publication: D., daily; T.W., 3 times a week; S.W., twice a week; W., once a week; T.M., 3 times a month; B.W., once every 2 weeks; S.M., twice a month; M., once a month; B.M., once every 2 months; Quar., once every 3 months.

For articles descriptive of India, Assam and Burmah, as well as for maps, lists of banks, tables of money values, etc., see Index and other departments of this work.

EMPIRE DE L'INDE ANGLAISE.

[Comprenant l'Inde Anglaise, les Etats et dépendances feudataires et protégés, ainsi que l'Assam et le Burmah Britannique.]

Sa Majesté VICTORIA, Reine de la Grande Bretagne et de l'Irlande et Impératrice de l'Inde, souveraine gouvernante. Le très-Hon. GEORGE FREDÉRIC SAMUEL ROBINSON, Gouverneur Général. Population du territoire entier, 191,096,603. Capitale, Calcutta.

Dans les listes ci-dessous la langue dans laquelle paraît chaque publication est donnée (entre parenthèse) immédiatement après le nom, excepté dans quelques cas rares où elle n'a pu être déterminée. Pour plus de convenance et de clarté les publications de la province d'Assam et celles du Burmah Anglais sont groupées séparément immédiatement après la division principale. On dit que les publications de l'Inde et spécialement celles en langues du pays, sont plus généralement lues et circulées en proportion de leur tirage que celles d'aucun autre pays du monde. Fréquemment une seule copie de journal sera lue par un village entier passant de maison en maison jusqu'à ce qu'elle soit complètement usée quoique managée avec le plus grand soin. Ceci compense, jusqu'à un certain point, pour la faible circulation des journaux de l'Inde comparée à l'immense population.

Il faudra observer que dans ces listes toutes les villes, bourgs et villages sont arrangés alphabétiquement sans égard à la grandeur, à la location ou à l'importance, et non par province ou autres subdivisions, (excepté, comme nous l'avons dit plus haut, pour l'Assam et le Burmah Anglais.)

Abbreviations—Les abbreviations suivantes sont employées pour marquer les périodes différents de publication: D., quotidien; T.W., 3 fois par semaine; S.W., 2 fois par semaine; W., 1 fois par semaine; T.M., 3 fois par mois; B.W., toutes les quinzeaines; S.M., 2 fois par mois; M., 1 fois par mois; B.M., 1 fois tous les deux mois; Quar., 1 fois par trimestre.

Pour les articles descriptifs de l'Inde, de l'Assam et du Burmah, aussi bien que pour les cartes géographiques, les listes des banques, les tables des valeurs des monnaies, etc., voir l'Index et les autres départements de ce livre.

DAS KAISERREICH BRITISCH-INDIEN.

Ihre Majestät VICTORIA, Königin von Grossbritannien und Irland und Kaiserin von Indien, Regierendes Oberhaupt. Rt. Hon. GEORGE FREDERICK SAMUEL ROBINSON, General-Gouverneur. Bevölkerung des ganzen Landstrichs, 191,096,603. Hauptstadt, Calcutta.

In der folgenden Liste ist hinter jeder Publikation bemerkt (in Klammern) in welcher Sprache dieselbe erscheint, ausgenommen in einigen Fällen, wo die Sprache nicht ausgefunden wurde. Zur Bequemlichkeit und Deutlichkeit geben wir die Publikationen der Provinzen Assam und British Birmah in separaten Listen, sogleich nach der Haupt-Abtheilung. Es wird gesagt dass die Publikationen Indiens, besonders die in der Landessprache, mehr gelesen und verbreitet werden als die irgend eines andern Landes der Welt. Nicht selten wird ein einziges Exemplar einer Zeitung gelesen von den Einwohnern eines ganzen Dorfes, bis dasselbe zuletzt, selbst bei aller Sorgfalt, ganz zerrissen ist. Hieraus erklärt es sich zum Theil weshalb die Auflagen der indischen Zeitungen klein sind gegenüber der sehr grossen Einwohnerzahl.

Man wird bemerken dass in dieser Liste alle Städte und Dörfer alphabetisch geordnet sind, ohne Rücksicht auf ihre Grösse, Lage oder Wichtigkeit, und auch nicht nach Provinzen oder anderen Abtheilungen, (ausser in den oben angegebenen Fällen von Assam und British Birmah.)

Abkürzungen—Die folgenden Abkürzungen sind gebraucht um die Zeit des Erscheinens der Publikationen anzugeben: D., täglich; T.W., dreimal wöchentlich; S.W., zweimal wöchentlich; W., wöchentlich; T.M., dreimal monatlich; B.W., alle zwei Wochen; S.M., zweimal monatlich; M., monatlich; B.M., alle zwei Monate; Quar., vierteljährlich.

Wegen beschreibende Artikel über Indien, Assam und Birmah, als auch Karten, Listen der Banken, Geld-Tabellen, etc., siehe Inhaltsverzeichniss und andere Theile dieses Werkes.

THE EMPIRE OF JAPAN.

[Mutsu Hiro, Reigning Emperor (Mikado). Population 34,338,304. Capital, Tokio, or Tokoi, (formerly called Teddo, or Yedo).

The rapid progress of Japan in the adoption of the civilization of the West is conspicuous in nothing more than in the establishment of a Native Press, whose circulation and influence have already a firm and undisputed hold upon the masses. In this as in other respects, Japan is in marked contrast with China.

As to circulations of individual journals, it has been found impracticable to obtain even a fair estimate; so that the Publisher of this Directory is denied the pleasure of presenting this data in connection with the subjoined list. Circulations are, in general, believed to range from 500 to 1,000 copies per issue for journals outside the larger cities, within which cities circulations are estimated to range from 1,000 to 5,000 copies per issue.

In consequence of a peculiarity in the reports received from Japan, the following lists give, instead of the Field of Circulation, the names of the publishers of the several periodicals described. It may be added that Japan journals circulate almost exclusively within the immediate localities of their publication—but few, if any, having attained to a national or general importance. Those of the Capital, perhaps, come most nearly to an exceptional character in this respect; but even these, it is believed, are not generally diffused among the masses beyond the limits of Tokio.

The only newspapers published in Japan in languages other than that of the country, appear to be four in English and two in French, issued at Yokohama, the usual residence of the foreign population, 17 miles distant from the Capital.

In the subjoined Catalogue it will be understood that all publications are in the Japanese language and characters, except the six publications in English and French, in Yokohama, above referred to.

Abbreviations—The following abbreviations are made use of in designating the various periods of publication: D., daily; 15 T.M., 15 times a month; T.W., 3 times a week; 10 t.M., 10 times a month; 8 t.M., 8 times a month; 6 t.M., 6 times a month; 5 t.M., 5 times a month; W., once a week; 4 t.M., 4 times a month; T.M., 3 times a month; S.M., twice a month; M., once a month; B.M., once in every 2 months.

EMPIRE DU JAPON.

[Mutsu Hiro, Empereur Régnant, (Mikado). Population, 34,338,304. Capitale, Tokio ou Tokei, (autrefois appelée Jeddo ou Yedo).

Le progrès rapide du Japon à adopter la civilisation de l'occident n'est remarquable en rien plus que l'établissement d'une presse du pays, dont la publication et l'influence ont déjà une prise ferme et incontestable sur les masses. Sous cet aspect comme sous beaucoup d'autres le Japon forme un contraste frappant avec la Chine. Quant à la circulation de chaque journal particulier il a été impossible d'en obtenir même une évaluation approximative, de sorte que l'éditeur de ce Dictionnaire ne peut avoir le plaisir de présenter ces données dans la liste ci-dessous.

On croit que'en général, la circulation des journaux hors des grandes villes varie de 500 à 1,000 copies par livraison, et dans les grandes villes, on pense qu'elle varie de 1,000 à 5,000 copies.

En conséquence d'une erreur étrange dans les rapports reçus du Japon, les listes suivantes donnent les noms des éditeurs au lieu du champ de la circulation des différents journaux décrits. On peut ajouter que les journaux du Japon circulent presque exclusivement dans la localité immédiate de la publication. Ceux de la capitale viennent le plus près, peut être, de former exception à cet égard; mais même ceux-ci, à ce que l'on suppose, ne sont pas généralement répandus dans les masses hors des limites de Tokio.

Les seuls journaux au Japon, en langue autre que celle du pays, paraissent être 4 en Anglais et 2 en français, publiés à Yokohama, la résidence ordinaire de la population étrangère, à 17 milles de distance de la Capitale.

Dans le catalogue suivant il est bien entendu que toutes les publications sont en langue et en caractères Japonais excepté les six en Anglais et en français à Yokohama nommés plus haut.

Abbreviations—Les abréviations suivantes sont employées pour désigner les périodes différents de publication: D., quotidien; 15 T.M., 15 fois par mois; T.W., 3 fois par semaine; 10 t.M., 10 fois par mois; 8 t.M., 8 fois par mois; 6 t.M., 6 fois par mois; 5 t.M., 5 fois par mois; W., 1 fois par semaine; 4 t.M., 4 fois par mois; T.M., 3 fois par mois; S.M., 2 fois par mois; M., 1 fois par mois; B.M., tous les deux mois.

DAS KAISERREICH JAPAN.

[Mutsu Hiro, Regierender Kaiser, (Mikado). Bevölkerung 34,348,304. Hauptstadt, Tokio, oder Tokei (früher Teddo, oder Yedo).

Der schnelle Fortschritt Japans in der Annahme der Civilisation des Westens zeigt sich in nichts mehr als in der Etablierung einer einheimischen Literatur, die in ihrem Einflusse und in ihrer Ausdehnung schon einen kräftigen Halt genommen hat unter den Volksmassen. In dieser wie in anderer Beziehung ist ein grosser Unterschied zwischen Japan und China. Bezüglich der Auflagen der einzelnen Zeitungen war es ganz und gar unmöglich genaue Auskunft zu erhalten, so dass es dem Herausgeber dieses Werkes nicht vergönnt ist dieselbe zu geben in der nachfolgenden Liste. Man nimmt im Allgemeinen an dass die Zeitungen ausserhalb der grösseren Städte eine Auflage von 500-1,000 Exemplaren haben, die in den grösseren Städten dagegen von 1,000-5,000 Exemplaren.

In Folge einer Eigenthümlichkeit in den von Japan erhaltenen Berichten werden in der folgenden Liste die Namen der Verleger an der Stelle des Verbreitungsgebietes gegeben. Es mag noch bemerkt werden dass die japanesischen Zeitungen beinahe ausschliesslich in der Nähe des Ortes der Publikation derselben verbreitet sind, da nur einige wenige eine nationale oder allgemeine Wichtigkeit erlangt haben. Die Zeitungen der Hauptstadt machen vielleicht in dieser Hinsicht eine Ausnahme, doch selbst diese sind nicht allgemein unter dem Volke verbreitet, sondern mehr in der Nähe Tokio's.

Die einzigen Zeitungen in fremden Sprachen welche in Japan publicirt werden sind vier in englischer und zwei in französischer Sprache, alle in der Stadt Yokohama, 17 Meilen von der Hauptstadt entfernt, woselbst die meisten Ausländer wohnen.

Es ist verstanden dass alle Publikationen in der nachfolgenden Liste in der japanesischen Sprache und Schrift sind, ausgenommen die oben erwähnten sechs Zeitungen in englisch und französisch, in der Stadt Yokohama.

Abkürzungen—Die folgenden Abkürzungen sind gebraucht um die Zeit des Erscheinens des Publikationen anzugeben: D., täglich; 15 t.M., fünfzehnmal monatlich; T.W., dreimal wöchentlich; 10 t.M., zehn- mal monatlich; 8 t.M., achtmal monatlich; 6 t.M., sechsmal monatlich; 5 t.M., fünfmal monatlich; W., wöchentlich; 4 t.M., viermal monatlich; T.M., dreimal monatlich; S.M., zweimal monatlich; M., monatlich; B.M., alle zwei Monate.

THE MALAY OR INDIAN ARCHIPELAGO, SOMETIMES CALLED MALASIA.

[The Malay Archipelago includes the largest and most important group of islands in the world, among which are Java, Sumatra, Borneo, Celebes, the Philippine Islands, the Molucca or Spice islands, and other congeries of less renown. The Archipelago lies off the southeast coasts of Asia, largely filling in the wide expanse between the Asiatic Continent and Australia. It covers an area of land and sea fully equal to that of Europe, and has a population roughly estimated at about 38,000,000—one-half of which is found upon the island of Java. The ownership of a large part of these islands is vested in several European nations—chiefly in the Netherlands and Spain, the interests of Great Britain and Portugal being comparatively small. The Netherlands hold and control the trade of by far the largest share, including the islands of Java and Celebes, large portions of Borneo and Sumatra, the Spice islands and Papua, besides others of lesser note. In the subjoined lists of newspapers, the islands upon which publications are found are arranged alphabetically, commencing with Borneo. Although the Archipelago embraces in all many thousands of islands, a large proportion of which are inhabited, yet it is believed that newspapers are published only upon the seven named in the following lists.]

For articles describing the various islands of the Archipelago, as well as for map, list of banks, etc., see Index and other departments of this work.

In all the following lists the usual abbreviations are used to denote the various periods of publication.

ARCHIPEL MALAISIE OU INDIEN.

(Quelquefois appelé Malaisie.)

[L'Archipel Malaisien renferme le groupe le plus grand et le plus important des Iles du monde parmi lesquelles se trouvent Java, Sumatra, Bornéo, Célèbes, les Philippines, les Moluques ou îles des épices, et autres assemblages de moindre renommée. L'Archipel est situé au large de la côte S. E. de l'Asie, et remplit la grande étendue entre les continents de l'Asie et de l'Australie. Il couvre une étendue de terre et de mer tout-à-fait égale à celle de l'Europe et contient une population estimée à environ 38,000,000 dont la moitié se trouve sur l'île de Java. Plusieurs nations de l'Europe, principalement les Pays-Bas et l'Espagne, réclament la possession de ces îles. Les intérêts de la Grande Bretagne et du Portugal étant peu de chose en comparaison. Les Pays-Bas occupent et contrôlent la plus grande partie du commerce, y compris les îles de Java, et de Célèbes, les plus grandes parties de Bornéo et de Sumatra, les îles des Epices et Papua, outre plusieurs de moindre importance. Quoique l'Archipel embrasse en tout plusieurs milliers d'îles, dont une grande partie est habitée, on croit qu'il n'y a de journaux publiés que dans les sept nommées dans les listes suivantes.]

Dans toutes les listes suivantes les abréviations accoutumées sont employées pour marquer les divers périodes de publication.

DER MALAYISCHE ODER INDISCHE ARCHIPEL.

[Der Malayische Archipel schliesst in sich die grösste und wichtigste Inselgruppe der Welt, als z. B. die Insel Java, Sumatra, Borneo, Celebes, die Philippinen-Inseln, die Molucca- oder Spice-Inseln, und andere, die weniger berühmt sind. Der Archipel liegt abwärts von der süd-östlichen Küste von Asien, und füllt beinahe die grosse Fläche zwischen dem Asiatischen Festlande und Australien aus. Er bedeckt einen Flächenraum von Land und Meer völlig so gross wie Europa, und hat eine Bevölkerung von ungefähr 38,000,000, wovon die Hälfte auf der Insel Java wohnt. Ein grosser Theil dieser Inseln ist unter der Herrschaft europäischer Nationen, besonders Spanien und die Niederlande. Grossbritannien und Portugal haben dort nicht viele Besitzungen. Die Niederlande halten bei Weitem den grössten Handel der Inseln mit Einschluss von Java und Celebes, grosse Theile von Borneo, Sumatra, die Spice Inseln und Papua, nebst manchen anderen von geringerer Wichtigkeit, in Händen, und kontrolliren denselben. In der folgenden Liste sind die Inseln auf welchen Zeitungen publicirt werden in alphabetischer Reihenfolge gegeben, anfangend mit Borneo. Obgleich der Archipel viele tausend Inseln einschliesst wovon die meisten bewohnt sind, so werden doch nur Zeitungen herausgegeben auf den sieben in der Liste angegebenen Inseln.]

In den folgenden Listen sind die gebräuchlichen Abkürzungen angewendet, um die Zeit des Erscheinens der Publikationen zu bezeichnen.

THE KINGDOM OF EGYPT.

[Embracing, with its dependencies and conquered territories, an area of 1,406,250 square miles, equal in extent to about one-half of the United States.]

MOHAMED TEWFIC, reigning Khedive (Khdiv-el-Misir—King of Egypt). Population of Egypt proper, 5,517,627; of its annexed and conquered territory, 11,434,373—total, 16,952,000. Capital, Cairo.

[NOTE.—The practical independence of Egypt from interference with its affairs by the Ottoman Porte; the regularity of the succession of its Khedives—the crown passing from father to son by the law of the realm—and not by appointment of the Porte; the significance of the title of its reigning sovereign; and its power to make treaties, maintain armies, wage war, conclude peace, and exercise all the ordinary acts of perfect sovereignty, over a territory larger than that of any European monarchy, save Russia, certainly entitle it to be denominated a Kingdom, in every sense of the word.]

In the subjoined list, the language in which the several publications appear, is stated immediately following the name of each.

Abbreviations.—The following abbreviations are used to indicate the various periods of publication: D., daily; 5 t.W., 5 times a week; W., once a week; B.W., once every two weeks; M., once a month; B.M., once every 2 months.

For articles descriptive of Egypt, Nubia and other provinces and districts belonging to Egypt, as well as for map, list of Banks and tables of money values, see Index and other departments of this work.

ROYAUME D'EGYPTE.

[Embrassant, avec ses dépendances et le territoire conquis, une étendue de 1,406,250 milles carrés, égale à environ la moitié des Etats-Unis.]

MOHAMED TEWFIC, Khédive Régnant. (Khdivé l'Misir, King of Egypt.) Population de l'Egypte proprement dite: 5,517,627, et des provinces annexées et territoire conquis: 11,434,373, ensemble 16,952,000. Capitale: Le Caire.

Dans la liste suivante la langue dans laquelle paraissent les diverses publications est donnée immédiatement après le nom de chacune.

Abbreviations.—Las abreviaciones siguientes son empleadas para indicar los períodos diferentes de publicación: D., quotidien; 5 t.W., 5 fois par semaine; W., 1 fois par semaine; B.W., 1 fois toutes les quinzaines; M., 1 fois par mois; B.M., 1 fois tous les 2 mois.

DAS KÖNIGREICH EGYPTEN.

[Enthält mit seinen abhängigen und unterworfenen Staaten einen Flächeninhalt von 1,406,250 Quadrat-Meilen; ist ungefähr halb so gross als die Vereinigten Staaten.]

MOHAMED TEWFIC, Regierender Khadive (Khdiv-el-Misir—König von Egypten). Bevölkerung des eigentlichen Egyptens 5,517,627; der abhängigen und unterworfenen Staaten 11,434,373; im Ganzen 16,952,000. Hauptstadt, Cairo.

THE EMPIRE OF MOROCCO.

MULEY-HASSAN, Reigning Sultan. Population, estimated at 2,500,000 to 8,000,000. Capitals, Fez (population 100,000) and Morocco (population 40,000).

[NOTE.—No publications of any character are issued in the Empire. Neither are there telegraphs, railways, post-offices (except those under foreign control in a few seaports), nor banks. Hope is expressed that a newspaper may be established soon, an Englishman having recently ordered a printing press from a Philadelphia type-foundry. For further particulars, see article on Morocco, and map, in this work.]

EMPIRE DU MAROC.

MULEY-HASSAN, Sultan Régnaant. Population estimée de 2,500,000 à 8,000,000. Capitales, Fez, (population 100,000) et Maroc (population 40,000).

DAS KAISERREICH MAROKKO.

MULEY-HASSAN, Regierender Sultan. Bevölkerung, veranschlagt auf von 2,500,000 bis 8,000,000. Hauptstädte, Fiz (100,000 Einwohner) und Marokko (40,000 Einwohner).

[Bemerkung.—Keine Publikation irgend welcher Art wird im diesem Reiche herausgegeben. Auch giebt es daselbst keine Telegraphen, Eisenbahnen, Postämter (ausser solche unter auswärtiger Controle in einigen Hafenstädten) und keine Banken. Man hofft, dass bald eine Zeitung etablirt wird, da ein Engländer kürzlich eine Druckerpresse bei einer Schriftgiesserei in Philadelphia bestellt hat. Wegen weiterer Auskunft siehe den Artikel über Marokko und die Karte, in diesem Werke.]

THE BARBARY STATE OF TUNIS.

[Nominally a dependency of the Turkish Empire, practically a Territory of France.]

SIDI MOHAMED-EL-SADOK, Reigning Bey. Population, 2,100,000. Capital, Tunis.

For article descriptive of Tunis, map, list of banks, etc., see Index and other departments of this work.

There is no newspaper published in the regency. Now and then there is published at the Bardo, the Bey's palace, an official bulletin, containing all recent orders, decrees, decisions and appointments, and this is sent to all government officials and employes throughout the regency; and this is all there is in the country that in any way represents a newspaper. These bulletins are published in the Arabic language only. Sometimes one of these appears every month, at other times once in three months, and then again only once in six months, as changes in the service seem to demand."—Extract from Report.

Pour Article descriptif de Tunis, la carte géographique, la liste des banques, etc., voir l'Index et les autres départements de cet ouvrage.

Il n'y a point de journal dans la régence. De temps à autre on publie au Bardo, palais du Bey, un bulletin officiel, contenant tous les ordres récents, les décrets, les décisions et les nominations; on l'envoie à tous les officiers du gouvernement de la régence; voilà tout ce qui représente dans le pays un journal d'aucune espèce. Ces bulletins sont publiés en langue Arabe seulement. Quelquefois il en paraît un tous les mois, quelquefois une fois tous les trois mois, et quelquefois seulement tous les six mois. Selon que les changements du gouvernement semblent l'exiger.—Extrait du rapport.

Es wird keine Zeitung im Staate herausgegeben. Gelegentlich wird im Bardo, dem Palaste des Beys, ein offizielles Blättchen, welches die neueren Verordnungen und Bestimmungen enthält publicirt, und wird dasselbe an alle Regierungsbeamte des Staates geschickt. Dies ist alles in jenem Lande welches irgendwie die Stelle einer Zeitung einnimmt. Dies Blatt wird nur in arabischer Sprache gedruckt. Zuweilen erscheint eins jeden Monat, dann wieder einmal in drei Monaten, oder auch nur einmal in sechs Monaten, je nach dem es nothwendig erscheint."—Auszug aus dem Bericht.

THE COLONY OF THE CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

[A British Colony occupying the extreme south portion of the Continent of Africa. It is divided into 48 districts, corresponding somewhat to counties in the United States, though several of them are as large as States of medium size. It is to these districts that reference is made below, under head of Field of Circulation.]

Governor of the Colony (appointed by the British Crown), Right Hon. Sir HERCULES GEORGE ROBERT ROBINSON, G.C.M.G. Population of the Colony proper, 720,984; of the outlying districts, 399,178. Total, 1,120,162. Capital, Cape Town.

In the subjoined lists, it will be understood that all publications are in the English language, except such as have another language indicated (in parentheses) immediately after their names.

Abbreviations.—The following abbreviations are used to denote the various periods of publication: D., daily; T.W., 3 times a week; S.W., twice a week; W., once a week.

For article descriptive of Cape Colony and other divisions of South Africa, as well as for map, list of banks, etc., see Index and other departments of this work.

THE REPUBLIC OF THE TRANSVAAL.

[Situated in the interior of South Africa, north of Orange River Free State Republic, its eastern boundary lying from 75 to 250 miles distant from the Indian Ocean coast.]

This country became an independent Republic in the year 1840, and so continued until 1877, when it was seized by the British and annexed to the Colony of the Cape of Good Hope. In 1880-'81 the inhabitants rose in arms against their conquerors, and after a brief campaign, in which the latter were sharply rebuked, if not badly beaten, the Boers (the original settlers of the country and founders of the Republic) constrained the British Government to restore to them their independence. The population of the Republic is estimated at about 300,000, of which 30,000 are of European descent, (including many of English blood), the remainder being natives. Area of the Republic, 112,000 square miles. Capital, Pretoria.

RÉPUBLIQUE DU TRANSVAAL.

[Située dans l'intérieur de l'Afrique méridionale, au Nord de la République de l'Etat libre de la Rivière Orange, sa limite orientale se trouvant de 75 à 250 milles de distance de l'Océan Indien.]

Cette contrée devint une République Indépendante en l'an 1840, et resta ainsi jusqu'en 1877, époque où les Anglais s'en emparèrent et l'annexèrent à la Colonie du Cap de Bonne Espérance. En 1880-'81 les habitants se soulevèrent en armes contre leurs conquérants et après une courte campagne ceux-ci furent fort malmenés sans complètement battus, les Boers (colons primitifs du pays et fondateurs de la République) contraignirent le Gouvernement Britannique à leur rendre leur indépendance. La population de la République est estimée à environ 300,000, dont 30,000 sont de descendance Européenne y compris plusieurs d'extraction Anglaise, le reste étant naturels du pays. L'étendue de la république est de 112,000 milles carrés.

THE TRANSVAAL REPUBLIC.

DIE TRANSVAAL'SCHE REPUBLIK.

[Im Innern Süd-Afrika's, nördlich von der Oranje-Rivier-Freie-Staat-Republik gelegen. Ihre östliche Grenze ist von 75-250 Meilen von der Küste des Indischen Oceans entfernt.]

Dies Land wurde eine freie Republik im Jahre 1840, und blieb in dieser Verfassung bis 1877. Dann wurde es von den Engländern eingenommen und der Kolonie Kap der Guten Hoffnung einverleibt. In 1880-81 empörten sich die Einwohner gegen ihre Ueberwinder, und nach einem kurzen Kriege, wobei die Letzteren grosse Verluste erlitten, wenn sie nicht gar geschlagen wurden, wurde die Britische Regierung von den Boers (die ersten Ansiedler und Gründer der Republik) gezwungen ihnen ihre Unabhängigkeit wieder zu geben. Die Bevölkerung der Republik wird veranschlagt auf ungefähr 300,000, wovon 30,000 von europäischer Abkunft, die übrigen (einschliesslich vieler von englischer Abkunft) Eingeborene sind. Flächeninhalt der Republik, 112,000 Quadrat-Meilen. Hauptstadt, Pretoria.

THE KINGDOM OF ANGOLA.

[Situatd on the west coast of Africa, south of the equator.]

This country is under a native king, but is nominally controlled by the Portuguese, who have several settlements along the coast. The capital, St. Paul de Loando, is held by the Portuguese. The only two newspapers there published are in the language of that nation. The population of the country is variously estimated at from 200,000 to 2,000,000. St. Paul de Loando possesses considerable civilization, and enjoys a lucrative trade with Europe.

☞ For article descriptive of Angola, map, etc., see Index and other departments of this work.

ROYAUME D'ANGOLA.

[Situé sur la côte occidentale de l'Afrique, au sud de l'Equateur.]

Il est sous la domination d'un roi né dans le pays, mais contrôlé titulaireirement par les Portugais qui ont plusieurs établissements sur les côtes. La capitale, St. Paul de Loando, est tenue par les portugais. Les deux seuls journaux qui y sont publiés sont dans la langue de la nation. La population du pays est diversement estimée de 200,000 à 2,000,000. St. Paul de Loando possède une civilisation considérable et jouit d'un commerce lucratif avec l'Europe.

DAS KÖNIGREICH ANGOLA.

[An der Westküste Afrika's, südlich vom Aequator, gelegen.]

Dies Land hat einen eingeborenen König, wird aber nominell von den Portugiesen regiert, welche verschiedene Ansiedlungen an der Küste entlang haben. Die Hauptstadt, St. Paul de Loando, steht unter portugiesischer Herrschaft. Die zwei Zeitungen welche dort herausgegeben werden sind in portugiesischer Sprache. Die Bevölkerung des Landes wird verschieden veranschlagt von 200,000-2,000,000. St. Paul de Loando erfreut sich einer ziemlichen Civilisation und hat einen blühenden Handel mit Europa.

[*The "Gazety Malagassy" was a newspaper of general information published by the English missionaries in 1875, but which after nine publications was suppressed by the Prime Minister of Madagascar on account of improper criticisms on native politics and customs. The La Cloche was a small paper started in October, 1880, by a Frenchman in Tamatave, but after three publications was suppressed by M. E. Cassas, the French Consul for Madagascar. The reasons for suppressing this paper have never been known, and nothing in the subject matter has ever been able to give a clue to this arbitrary act. This publication was followed the very next week by one edited by a British subject, and similar in every respect, except the name, which was changed to "The Bee." It is a small paper of sixteen pages foolscap, printed from the American polygraph with caricatures, and is a curious illustration of a struggling civilization.]

THE BRITISH COLONY OF MAURITIUS.

[Occupying the island of Mauritius (or "Isle of France"), situated in the South Indian Ocean, about five hundred miles east of Madagascar.]

Governor of the colony (appointed by the British crown), Sir GEORGE FERGUSON BOWEN, G.C.M.G. Population, about 330,000. Capital, Port Louis.

The French language is the prevailing one among the business and trading classes, although the bulk of the inhabitants are Malays, Malagasseys, Chinese, etc. Of the eight newspapers published here, all, except one, are in French. The island is densely populated and well civilized, with banks, railways, theatres, colleges, and a heavy foreign trade. All the newspapers, except one weekly, are published daily.

For article descriptive of Mauritius, as well as for map, list of banks, etc., see Index and other departments of this work.

Gouverneur de la colonie (nommé par la couronne Britannique), Sir GEORGE FERGUSON BOWEN, G.C.M.G. Population, environ 330,000. Capitale, Port Louis.

La langue française se parle généralement entre les hommes d'affaires et les classes marchandes quoique la plus grande partie des habitants soient des Malais, des Malagasses, des Chinois, etc. Les huit journaux publiés ici sont tous en Français excepté un. La population de l'île est très compacte, et bien civilisée, avec des banques, des chemins de fer, des théâtres, des collèges, et un commerce étranger très animé. Tous les journaux sont quotidiens, excepté un hebdomadaire.

THE WEST INDIA ISLANDS.

[Commonly called the West Indies.]

[An extensive archipelago, embracing several thousands of islands and islets, occupying a wide area intervening between North and South America, north of the latter and southeast of the former. Next to the Malay, or East Indian, Archipelago, this is the largest, most populous and most important system of islands upon the globe. The aggregate area of the archipelago is 94,822 square miles, and the total population about 4,500,000.]

In the following lists the arrangement is alphabetical by islands; the cities and towns upon each island being also alphabetically grouped within their respective islands. Few, comparatively, of the whole number of islands in the archipelago have newspapers or other publications. It will be understood, therefore, that islands which are not included within the subjoined lists have no such publications.

For article descriptive of the West Indies, as well as for lists of banks, map, etc., see Index and other departments of this work.

Abbreviations—The following abbreviations are used to denote the various periods of publication: D., daily; T.W., 3 times a week; S.W., twice a week; 6 t.M., 6 times a month; W., once a week; B.W., once every two weeks; S.M., twice a month; M., once a month; B.M., once every 2 months; Y., once a year.

LAS ANTILLAS.

Generalmente llamadas, las Indias Occidentales.

[Vasto Archipelago conteniente muchos millares de islas é isletas, ocupando una ancha area interpuesta entre las Americas del norte y del sud, al norte de esta y al sud-este de aquella. Despues del Archipelago del Oceano Indio, este es el mas grande, el mas poblado y mas importante sistema de islas en el globo. La area entera del archipelago es de 94,822 millas cuadradas, y la poblacion total a cerca de 4,500,000.]

En la lista siguiente el orden de las Islas es alfabetico; las ciudades y villas en cada isla se hallan tambien agrupadas alfabeticamente en su propia isla. Pocas de las islas de aquel archipelago tienen periodicos u otras publicaciones. Se entendera entonces que las islas que no se hallan en la lista de abajo, no tienen tales publicaciones.

Por el articulo descriptivo de las Antillas como tambien por las listas de bancos, mapas, etc., veanse el Indice y otros departamentos de esta obra.

Abreviaciones—Las abreviaciones siguientes se usan para marcar los varios periodos de publicacion: D., diariamente; T.W., 3 veces á la semana; S.W., 2 veces á la semana; 6 t.M., 6 veces al mes; W., 1 vez á la semana; B.W., 1 vez en la quincena; S.M., 2 veces al mes; M., mensualmente; B.M., 1 vez en dos meses; Y., anualmente.

DIE WESTINDISCHEN INSELN.

In der folgenden Liste sind die Zeitungen alphabetisch nach den Inseln geordnet; ebenfalls sind auch die Städte auf jeder Insel in alphabetischer Reihenfolge gegeben. Verhältnissmässig wenige der vielen Inseln haben Zeitungen oder irgendwelche Publikationen. Es ist deshalb verstanden, dass solche Inseln, welche keine Zeitungen haben, in dieser Liste nicht angeführt sind.

Wegen beschreibenden Artikel über Westindien, sowohl als Karte, Liste der Banken, etc., siehe Inhaltsverzeichnis und andere Theile dieses Werkes.

THE ISLAND OF CUBA.

[This, by far the largest, most populous and most important of the West Indies, belongs to Spain, being more valuable than any other colonial possession of that nation. It is over 750 miles in length, with an average breadth of 50 miles. Its area (45,700 square miles) is a little less than that of the State of New York. Its population in 1872 was 1,370,211—of which a little more than one-half were whites. Its population in 1880 had reached 1,508,761. The island is immensely productive, and its trade with the United States is very large. Havana, its chief city, is elegant, opulent and aristocratic. With the exception of one English journal in Ha-

ISLA DE CUBA.

ILE DE CUBA.

THE ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

General ROCA, President. Population, about 2,500,000, including Indians. Capital, Buenos Ayres.

The Spanish language is spoken by the people and used by the publications of this country. It will therefore be understood that all newspapers in the subjoined list are printed in Spanish, unless the contrary is specified.

Abbreviations.—The following abbreviations are used to denote the various periods of publication: D., daily; T.W., 3 times a week; S.W., twice a week; W., once a week; S.M., twice a month.

For article descriptive of the Argentine Republic, as well as for map, list of banks, and table of money values, see Index and other departments of this work.

[NOTE.—The editor seriously regrets the incomplete condition of the report of the publications of the capital city of the Republic. Several times he applied to the United States Consul (Mr. Baker) at Buenos Ayres, for full details concerning the publications of that city; but for reasons best known to that gentleman no attention appears to have been paid to these requests. The editor has recently sought the desired particulars through other channels, and hopes to receive information which will perfect the list in a subsequent edition.]

REPUBLICA ARGENTINA.

El general Roca, presidente. Poblacion: cerca de 2,500,000, incluyendo los Indios. Capital: Buenos Ayres.

La poblacion habla el Español y los periodicos se publican en el mismo idioma. Se debe entender entonces que en la lista siguiente todos los periodicos son escritos en español á no ser que se mencione el contrario.

Abreviaciones.—Las abreviaciones siguientes son empleadas para designar los varios periodos de publicacion: D., diario; T.W., 3 veces por semana; S.W., 2 veces por semana; W., 1 vez por semana; S.M., 2 veces al mes.

Por el articulo descriptivo de la Republica Argentina, como tambien por el mapa, la lista de bancos, y la tabla del valor de las monedas, veanse el Indice y los otros departamentos de esta obra.

[NOTA.—El Editor siente seriamente la condicion incompleta de la relacion de las publicaciones de la capital de la Republica. Se hicieron varias aplicaciones al consul de los Estados Unidos (el Señor Baker) por detalles minuciosos sobre las publicaciones de aquella ciudad; pero por razones conocidas á ese caballero no parece que dió la minima atencion á sus preguntas. El Editor ha recientemente buscado esos particulares por otros medios y espera recibir tal informacion que perfeccionara la lista en una edicion subsecuente.]

DIE ARGENTINISCHE REPUBLIK.

General Roca, Präsident. Bevölkerung, ungefähr 2,500,000, einschliesslich der Indianer. Hauptstadt, Buenos Ayres.

Die spanische Sprache wird vom Volke gesprochen und von der Presse dieses Landes gebraucht. Es ist desshalb verstanden dass alle Zeitungen in der beifolgenden Liste in der spanischen Sprache sind, ausser wenn das Gegentheil bemerkt ist.

Abkürzungen.—Die folgenden Abkürzungen sind gebraucht um die Zeit des Erscheinens einer jeden Publikation anzugeben: D., täglich; T.W., dreimal wöchentlich; S.W., zweimal wöchentlich; W., wöchentlich; S.M., zweimal monatlich.

Wegen beschreibenden Artikel über die Argentinische Republik, als auch Karte, Liste der Banken und Geld-Tabelle, siehe das Inhaltsverzeichnis und andere Theile dieses Werkes.

[BEMERKUNG.—Der Herausgeber bedauert sehr die Unvollständigkeit des Berichts über die Publikationen der Hauptstadt der Republik. Mehrere Male wandten wir uns an den Consul der Vereinigten Staaten (Mr. Baker) in Buenos Ayres, wegen Auskunft über die Publikationen der Stadt, aber aus Gründen die ihm selber bekannt sind, scheint er unsern Ersuchen keine Aufmerksamkeit geschenkt zu haben. Wir haben kürzlich versucht die gewünschte Auskunft auf anderem Wege zu erhalten und hoffen wir dass wir Mittheilung empfangen werden um in einer späteren Auflage die Liste vollkommen zu machen.]

THE REPUBLIC OF PERU.

General PIEROLA, President and Dictator, (but driven from the Capital and practically from office by the victorious invading armies of Chili). Population of the Republic, about 2,700,000. Capital, Lima.

The Spanish language is used by the people of Peru, and in it are printed all its public journals, except one (in English) at Callao.

Abbreviations.—The following abbreviations are used to indicate the various periods of publication: D. daily; S.W., twice a week; W., once a week; M., once a month.

In the capital city of each of the 21 departments into which the Republic is divided, is an "Official Register," published by the government, and similar in character to the Peruvian, of Lima.

For article descriptive of Peru, as also for map of South America, list of banks, etc., see Index and other departments of this work.

[NOTE.—In consequence of the existence of war in Peru, and the unsettled condition of affairs attendant thereupon, it has been impossible to gather full and reliable details concerning the press of this country, although the Editor and Publisher of this Directory has made every effort to do so. It is feared that some of the information given in the subjoined lists (which comes through indirect sources) is not so trustworthy as could be desired; but since it embraces all that could under the circumstances be obtained, it is given for what it is worth.]

REPUBLICA DEL PERU.

El General PIEROLA, Presidente y Dictador, (pero echado fuera de la capital y practicamente de su oficio por los ejercitos victoriosos de Chile). La poblacion de la Republica, cerca de 2,700,000. La capital, Lima.

El Español es la lengua del pueblo y todos los periodicos se publican en el mismo con exception de uno, en Ingles, en Callao.

Abreviaciones.—Los abreviaciones siguientes se usan para indicar los varios periodos de publicacion: D., diariamente; S.W., 2 veces a la semana; W., 1 vez a la semana; M., 1 vez al mes.

En la capital de cada de los 21 departamentos en que se ha dividido la Republica hay un "Registro oficial," publicado por el Gobierno, y semeiante en su caracter al "Peruviano," de Lima.

Por el articulo descriptivo del Peru, como tambien por el mapa del America del Sur, la lista de Bancos, etc., veanse el Indice y otros departamentos de esta obra.

[NOTE.—En consecuencia de la existencia de la guerra en Peru, y la condicion inquieta de los negocios, ha sido imposible de reunir detalles llenos y dignos de confianza sobre los periodicos del pais, aunque el Editor y publicador de este Directorio haya tentado todos sus esfuerzos para obtenerlos. Se ha de temer que algunas informaciones expresadas en las listas siguientes, obtenidas de fuentes indirectas no sean tan dignas de confianza como se desearia pero pues abraza todo lo que se pudo obtener; lo damos por lo que vale.]

DIE REPUBLIK PERU.

GENERAL PIEROLA, Präsident und Dictator (aber von der Hauptstadt und thatsächlich auch von seinem Amte vertrieben von den siegreichen und besitznehmenden Armeen Chili's). Bevölkerung der Republik, ungefähr 2,700,000. Hauptstadt, Lima.

Die spanische Sprache wird in Peru von dem Volke gebraucht und in derselben werden alle Publikationen für das Volk gedruckt, mit Ausnahme einer englischen Zeitung in Callao.

THE REPUBLIC OF PERU.

Abkürzungen—Die folgenden Abkürzungen sind gebraucht um die Zeit des Erscheinens der Publikationen anzugeben: D., täglich; S.W., zweimal wöchentlich; W., wöchentlich; M., monatlich.

In der Hauptstadt eines jeden der 21 Distrikte, in welche die Republik getheilt ist, befindet sich ein „Officielles Register“ herausgegeben von der Regierung, ähnlichen Charakters wie der „Peruvianer“ in Lima. Wegen beschreibenden Artikel über Peru, als auch Karte von Süd-Amerika, Liste der Banken, etc., siehe Inhaltsverzeichnis und andere Theile dieses Werkes.

[BEMERKUNG—In Folge des Krieges in Peru und den daraus entstehenden zerrütteten Verhältnissen war es unmöglich vollkommene und zuverlässige Auskunft über die Publikationen jenes Landes zu erhalten, trotzdem der Redacteur und Verleger dieses Werkes alle Anstrengung machte, solche zu bekommen. Es ist zu befürchten dass die Auskunft, welche wir in der beifolgenden Liste geben, und die wir auf indirektem Wege erhielten, nicht so zuverlässig ist, als es gewünscht werden könnte. Doch, da Alles gegeben ist, was unter diesen Verhältnissen erlangt werden konnte, so müssen wir uns damit begnügen lassen.]

THE CONTINENT OF AUSTRALIA.

[Including the British colonies of New South Wales, Queensland, South Australia, Victoria and Western Australia.]

Population of the Continent (1881), 2,743,256.

The publications of the several colonies above named are classified and given in lists subjoined to this, separately by colonies in the order above stated.

[NOTE.—In explanation of the meagerness of details concerning the publications of Australia, the Editor and Publisher of this Directory begs to say, that having been recommended to apply to a certain advertising agency in that country for information concerning the Australian Press, with assurances that its managers were both able and willing to furnish the same fully and correctly, he found himself, when too late to procure the desired data from other sources, wholly disappointed and chagrined. At the end of a long and fruitless correspondence he is compelled to put this work to press feeling that the Australian Press has good reason to complain of unfair treatment from those who should not have allowed jealousy to interfere with a creditable representation of the journalistic power and influence of that great continent, destined in the future to contain a powerful and influential nation. The Publisher of this Directory has taken steps to gather from other sources, for a later edition, those details which he greatly regrets not being able to give herewith. He may further say that he has secured, through indirect sources, statements of the circulations of most of the Australian Press, together with some other details, but since he esteems much of it of doubtful correctness, he deems it most suitable to await further advices, or corroboratory information, before using the same.]

LE CONTINENT DE L'AUSTRALIE.

Population du continent (1881), 2,743,256.

Les publications des diverses colonies ci-dessus sont classifiées, séparément par colonies, dans l'ordre donné.

[N. B.—Pour expliquer la pauvreté des détails des publications de l'Australie, l'éditeur de ce dictionnaire doit établir qu'on lui donna l'avis de s'adresser à une certaine agence du pays pour toutes les informations concernant la presse d'Australie, avec assurance que les directeurs avaient le pouvoir et la bonne volonté de fournir tous les détails pleinement et correctement, mais lorsqu'il était déjà trop tard de se les procurer à d'autres sources, il se trouva complètement déçu à son grand chagrin. Après une longue correspondance inutile il se voit forcé de mettre son ouvrage sous presse sentant que la presse Australienne a une juste raison de se plaindre d'un traitement si mesquin de la part de ceux que n'auraient pas dû permettre à leur jalousie d'empêcher une représentation respectable au pouvoir et à l'influence des journaux de ce grand continent, destiné à devenir dans un futur peu éloigné une nation d'une puissante influence. L'éditeur de ce dictionnaire a pris des mesures pour rassembler d'autres sources, pour une édition ultérieure, les détails qu'il regrette infiniment de ne pouvoir donner dans celle-ci. Il peut dire aussi qu'il s'est procuré par des moyens indirects des états de la circulation de la plupart des journaux Australiens ainsi que d'autres détails, mais comme il a lieu de craindre qu'une grande partie ne vien ne de source douteuse, il pense qu'il vaut mieux attendre des avis ultérieurs et des informations corroboratives avant d'en faire usage.]

DAS FESTLAND AUSTRALIEN.

[Bestehend aus den Britischen Kolonien Neu-Süd-Wales, Queensland, Süd Australien, Victoria und West Australien.]

Bevölkerung des Festlandes (1881), 2,743,256.

Die Publikationen der verschiedenen obengenannten Kolonien sind demgemäss classificirt wie sie auf einander folgen.

POLYNESIA AND MICRONESIA.

[A vast system of islands, many thousands in number, including twenty or more distinct and well-defined groups, and stretching from the Continent of Australia eastward and northward through eighty degrees of latitude—more than 5,000 miles. It is estimated that the population inhabiting this wide-spread expanse of oceanic territory numbers fully one and a half millions, who speak varying dialects of a language common to all. Many of these islands are exceedingly fertile, and blessed with a delightful and salubrious climate. In some, civilization has made substantial advance, while in others cannibalism is still extant. In but few of them are newspapers found. The following lists (the Hawaiian, the Fiji and the Society groups, and New Caledonia) are believed to embrace all the periodical publications of this interesting field. For further particulars, see article upon the Hawaiian Islands, and other groups, in this work.]

POLYNÉSIE ET MICRONÉSIE.

POLINESIEN UND MICRONESIEN.

THE BRITISH COLONY OF FIJI ISLANDS.

[This group lies in the South Pacific ocean, 2,000 miles east of Australia. It includes over 300 islands, nearly one-third of which are inhabited. The aggregate area of the group is 8,034 square miles. Christianity and civilization have advanced extensively, and the people generally are educated. The climate is delightful and the productions tropical and luxuriant.]

THE SOCIETY ISLANDS.

[A group situated in the South Pacific ocean, 4,000 miles east of Australia and 5,000 miles southwest from San Francisco. The group consists of one hundred and twenty islands, many of them small and of no commercial importance. The principal ones are but thirteen in number, ten of which are under French domination, the remaining three being independent of foreign control. The largest and most important island of the group is Tahiti, (formerly called Otaheiti,) which is 32 miles in length and 120 in circumference. Its climate is salubrious and genial, and its productions embrace every variety of tropical fruits and vegetables in great abundance. Population of the island, about 10,000; of the group, 33,000. Christianity and civilization generally prevail. Capital, Papéiti, which has a fine harbor, a palace, cathedral, etc., and is the center of the trade of Southeastern Polynesia. For further particulars see article descriptive of Tahiti, in this work.]

THE AUSTRO-HUNGARIAN MONARCHY.

BY JOHN C. TALCOTT, LL.B.

German—Oesterreich-Ungarn. Danish—Osterrike-Ungern. French—Autriche Hongrie. Russian—Austria-Vengria, or, Avstro-Ungaria. Italian—Austria-Ungheria. Spanish—Austria-Hungria. Portuguese—Austria-Hungria. Swedish—Osterrike-Ungern. Chinese and Japanese—Ao Kwo. Turkish—Avstéria-Magiar.

Position, etc.—The Austro-Hungarian Monarchy is an empire in the south-eastern part of central Europe. Since 1867 this Monarchy has formed a dual state, consisting of a German Monarchy (Austria), and a Magyar kingdom (Hungary.) It is second in size and fourth in population of the European states. In form it is nearly a rectangle, touching the Adriatic Sea on the south-west. It is bounded on the north by Germany and Russia, on the east by Russia and Roumania, on the south by Roumania, Servia and Montenegro, and on the West by the Adriatic, Italy, Switzerland and Germany. The greater part of the country is included between 44° and 51° north latitude, and between 12° and 26° longitude east from Greenwich. Its area is 240,348 square miles, of which Austria proper contains 115,908 and Hungary 124,440 square miles.

Population.—The total population of the empire is 35,911,077, according to the census of 1876. This makes the average population per square mile about 145, Austria proper supporting 174, and Hungary only 124 to the same space. The following table shows the principal subdivisions, with the population as given in the census of 1869, and the official estimate of 1878 made by adding the average per cent. of increase to the number found in the preceding census. Austria proper contains the first 14 subdivisions and Hungary the remaining 4:

* And Transylvania.

The country is most populous in the south-west, while the north-western Alpine and the rugged Carpathian regions are very thinly settled. The race of Slavs forms nearly 50 per cent. of the inhabitants, the Germans 25, and the Rumanian peoples 10, while the remainder is made up of Jews, Armenians and Bohemians or gypsies.

Topography.—Next to Switzerland, Austria-Hungary is the most mountainous country in Europe. Hungary proper is a vast plain, sloping down from the Carpathian mountains, which form its northern boundary, towards the Danube, which, with its branches traverses and drains the kingdom. The soil of this plain is in some places sandy, almost desert-like; in others, especially along the Theiss, swampy and marshy, but generally extremely fertile. The Rhaetian and Noric Alps, stretching from Switzerland to the Danube, reach an elevation of nearly 13,000 feet, while the highest Carpathian summits are only about 8,000 feet. The chief lakes are the Platten See (400 square miles) and the Neusiedler See (100 square miles), both in Hungary, while in Austria there are great mineral springs, of which the most celebrated are those of Carlsbad and Marienbad in Bohemia, Gastein in Salzburg, Ische and Hüll in Upper Austria, and Badenbel-Wein in Lower Austria. The leading rivers are the Danube, the second river of Europe, which enters the kingdom at Passau and traverses it for 850 miles to Orsova, draining 170,000 square miles of river basin; the Theiss, Drave, Save, Dneister and Vistula. The Danube is navigable for nearly its entire length and the Dneister for 300 miles. The climate of the entire country is mild and healthful.

Subdivisions.—The empire comprises 5 kingdoms—Hungary, Bohemia, Galicia, Illyria and Dalmatia; 1 archduchy—Austria; 1 principality—Transylvania; 1 duchy—Styria; 1 margraviate—Moravia, and one county—Tyrol. The entire country is divided, for political purposes, into 18 provinces called crown lands, 14 being in Austria proper and represented in the Reichsrath, and 4 in Hungary. Austria proper is sometimes known as Cisleithania, Hungary as Transleithania.

Cities.—In 1875 Vienna, the capital of Austria, had a population of 1,001,999, and Buda-Pesth, the capital of Hungary, 309,208. Prague, the chief city of Bohemia had, in 1800, 189,949 inhabitants. There were 7 cities having between 50,000 and 100,000, 42 cities between 20,000 and 50,000, and 90 between 10,000 and 20,000 inhabitants.

Climate.—The vast extent of the monarchy is the cause of considerable differences in the climate. The winters are often severe and protracted in the highest portions, in others the summers are very hot. Droughts and destructive hail storms prevail. The mean annual temperature varies from 57° in the south to 39° F. at Marienbad in the north. At Vienna the average temperature is 50°, the highest 94° and the lowest 2°. There is less rain in the east than in the west. In some parts of the Alps the rainfall is excessive, sometimes more than 60 inches. In the plains of Hungary it falls as low as 16 inches.

Flora and Fauna.—There are over 12,000 species of plants in the empire, 1/3 flowering, 2/3 flowerless. Lower Austria has about 4-9 of all, and not less than 1,700 flowering plants. There are Alpine and arctic floras, floras of plains, hills and mountains, marshes, steppes and meadows. One-third of Hungary proper is covered with splendid oak forests, in which large droves of swine are raised, and which swarm with pheasants, partridges, deer, stags, wild boars and wolves. Bears are found in the Alps and Carpathian mountains, jackals and lynxes in the same district. The wild goat is found in the highest, the chamois and white hare in the middle regions of the Carpathians. The otter and beaver haunt the streams, which, with the inland lakes, are well stocked with fish. Ninety species of mammals, 248 of birds, 377 of fishes, and 13,000 of insects have been counted. Domestic animals are not yet bred as much as is needed. Horse breeding in military studs is practiced, while sheep breeding is extensive in many parts of the empire. Goats are bred in Dalmatia, swine in Hungary. In 1866 there were 3,525,842 horses in the monarchy, 12,704,405 head of cattle, 72,000 buffaloes, 20,000,000 sheep, 1,552,000 goats, and 6,985,000 swine, chiefly in the oak or beech forests or by the distilleries.

Agriculture.—The productive land is about 87 per cent. of the whole country. Agriculture is not yet far advanced. The three-field system of Charlemagne prevails, in which the crop of winter wheat is followed by one of summer grain, and that by fallow. About 400,000,000 bushels of grain is produced annually, of which 1-5 is wheat, $\frac{1}{4}$ rye, $\frac{1}{4}$ oats, 1-7 maize, 1-7 barley, and the remainder buckwheat and millet. Many potatoes and a little rice are grown. Horticulture is carried to great perfection, the orchards of Bohemia, Austria proper, Tyrol and many parts of Hungary producing a profusion of fruit. The production of wine is nearly 680,000,000 gallons, mostly consumed by the natives, second in this respect only to France. Nearly $\frac{3}{4}$ of the inhabitants are engaged in agriculture, and there is room for development.

Manufactures and Trade.—The manufacturing interests, which are almost entirely restricted to the west half of the empire, have enormously increased in the last few years. The most important manufactures and articles of export are cotton goods, woollens, ironware, silks, leather, paper, beet sugar and chemicals. Wheat, maize and flour, olive oil, tobacco, timber and stone, sugar and coffee are also exported. The chief imports are raw cotton, cotton yarn and goods, iron, tobacco, coffee, olive oil, wheat, maize and flour. Since 1860 free trade has existed throughout the empire, but all goods imported pay a slight duty, and all monopoly articles are prohibited. A new tariff went into operation January 1, 1879. It contains not only a nominal increase of charges for the better protection of home manufactures, and in other directions for increase of revenue, but also a horizontal advance of rates by about 20 per cent. effected by the change of the standard for duties from silver to gold. The state has a monopoly of the tobacco and salt works. The 27 state establishments for manufacturing tobacco yield a revenue of over 60,000,000 florins, while the salt works yield 18,000,000 more. Austria-Hungary is unfortunately situated for commerce, and her foreign trade bears no comparison to the large inland trade between the provinces, of which Vienna is the chief seat. In 1876 the total foreign trade was as follows:

	Florins.
Imports in the customs territory of Dalmatia.....	13,800,000
Imports in the customs territory of Austria-Hungary.....	518,000,000
Imports in the customs territory of Austria-Hungary, (bullion).....	33,600,000
Total.....	565,400,000

Exports from Dalmatia.....	8,200,000
Exports from Austro-Hungary, (mdse.).....	508,600,000
Exports from Austro-Hungary, (bullion).....	31,400,000
Total.....	548,200,000

The Austrian trade was tenth in importance to the United States in the year ending June 30, 1880:

Imports from the United States.....	$1,555,007
Exports to the United States.....	2,300,829
Total trade.....	$3,861,836

Minerals.—Austria-Hungary is very rich in mineral wealth. All useful minerals except platinum are present. One hundred and fifty thousand people are engaged in the mining and smelting works. The annual value of the raw materials is estimated at over \$45,000,000 per annum. Of this amount $\frac{1}{2}$ is coal, 1-5 iron, $\frac{1}{4}$ gold and silver, and 1-10 rock salt. The salt is very abundant on both sides of the Carpathians, in Galicia, Hungary and Transylvania. The annual product is over 3,000,000 cwt. in rock salt alone, while the state salt works produce nearly as much more by evaporation. Some of the salt mines have been worked for centuries. Quite recently Russia has exceeded her in the output of gold. The mines are only partly state property. Besides the metals, building stone, marble, gypsum, chalk, graphite and sulphur are found. Precious and semi-precious stones are there, and the Hungarian opals and the Bohemian garnets are the finest in Europe. There are also many carnelians, agates, rubies, sapphires, and the topaz, beryl, jasper and amethyst.

Fisheries.—The chief sea fishing is in Dalmatia. Fish are plentiful along that coast, and abound in all the lakes and rivers. Leeches are procured in Hungary and in Moravia, where they form the subject of a considerable trade.

Government.—Austria and Hungary have separate parliaments and governments, while they are united, in the person of the hereditary sovereign, in a common army and navy, under the administration of a body called the Delegations. The Emperor Francis Joseph I., born August 18, 1830, succeeded his uncle, the Emperor Ferdinand I., who abdicated the throne December 2, 1848. The present heir apparent to the throne, Archduke Rudolphus, was born August 21, 1858. A member of the imperial family, the Archduchess Maria Christina, was married on November 29, 1879, to King Alfonso XII. of Spain. The Delegations, the common parliament of the nation, is composed of 60 members from each of the states, 20 of whom are elected by the upper houses of the Reichsrath and Reichstag, and the remaining 40 by the lower houses of the same bodies. The Delegations sit at Vienna one year and at Buda-Pesth the next. The two bodies of 60 members each vote together on the common affairs of the empire, and separately on the questions affecting the separate states. The acts of the Delegations must be confirmed by the representative assemblies of the two countries, so that they have, practically, free self-government. The Austrian Reichsrath is composed of an upper house, the Herren-haus, the life members of which are nominated by the emperor, and the lower house, the house of delegates, elected by the people. The Hungarian Reichstag consists of a house of magnates, whose president is nominated by the king, and the house of representatives, elected by the people. The rights claimed by the assemblies are: 1st, consent to all military laws; 2d, coöperation in laws concerning trade, commerce, etc. The executive of Hungary is carried on by a representative ministry in the name of the king. In Austria a council of 9 ministers assist the emperor. The upper house of the Reichsrath had 193 members in 1874, the lower house 353; the upper house of the Reichstag had 414 members, the lower house 444.

Religions.—Austria has always remained firmly attached to the Roman Catholic church. Two-thirds, or 24,000,000, of her people are members of that church. The Protestants are Lutherans in the west and Calvinists in the east. There are not over 4,000,000 Protestants in the empire. The Roman Catholic church has 950 convents, 8,500 monks, 5,700 nuns, 16 archbishops, 50 bishops and 34,000 ecclesiastics altogether. Religious freedom and freedom of the press were introduced in 1867, and non-sectarian schools were made lawful.

Army and Navy.—Since 1866 compulsory service has been introduced throughout the empire. The army of the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy, in August, 1878, was composed as follows:

	PEACE FOOTING		WAR FOOTING
	Officers	Men.	Officers	Men.
Standing army	14,710	257,207	23,637	761,929
Imperial Royal Landwehr	572	2,782	2,916	118,626
Royal Hungarian Landwehr	1,045	9,288	3,028	127,234
Staffs	136	90
Gendarmes and military police	24	1,069	24	1,069
Army studs	148	5,095	148	5,095
	16,635	275,531	24,753	1,013,953

The navy in 1878 consisted of 14 ironclads and 37 other steamers, most of the latter of small dimensions, intended for coast defence. The following statement shows the strength of the commercial marine of Austria-Hungary on January 1, 1878:

	No. of Vessels.	Tonnage.	Crews.
Sea-going steamers, (15,560 h. p.)	70	15,383	2,172
Coasting steamers, (832 h. p.)	28	1,576	181
Sailing vessels, including coasters & fishing smacks.	7,150	273,339	25,208
Total	7,248	290,298	27,651

Railways, etc.—The railway system, formerly of slow growth, is rapidly improving. On January 1, 1878, the length of railways in active operation was 17,984 kilometres (r.kil. = 0.62 miles), or 11,150 miles. Austria proper 11,211 kil., and Hungary 6,773 kil. The canals are very few, and the total length is only 200 miles. The length of the telegraph lines and wires, the number of stations and messages sent were, in 1877, as follows:

	Austria.	Hungary.	Total.
Lines	34,087 kil.	14,908 kil.	48,996 kil
Wires	87,585 "	49,943 "	137,529 "
Stations	2,418	931	3,349
Messages	5,358,318	2,667,318	8,025,862

The number of post offices in 1877 was 4,366 in Austria proper and 1,960 in Hungary.

Education.—Since 1849 the educational system has been under the care of the minister of public worship and instruction, and has been raised from a very low point to a fair degree of excellence. The Roman Catholic religion forms an essential part of the instruction in all schools, except those for special subjects. Education is in a great measure under the control of the priests, and many of the teachers are ecclesiastics. A compulsory law requires the presence of all children from 6 to 12 years of age in the common schools, but only about 76 per cent. actually attend. The following tables will show the facilities for education:

Universities.	SUMMER SEMESTER, 1878.
	Professors.	Students.
Czernowitz	39	223
Cracow	82	583
Graz	112	764
Innsbruck	82	587
Lemberg	54	941
Prague	168	1,695
Vienna*	294	3,711
Total	831	8,504

* Exclusive of the faculty of evangelical theology.
Austrian schools, 1876:

Classes of Schools.	No. of Schools.	Teachers.	Students.
Superior schools	66	1,535	14,542
Secondary schools	295	4,890	67,908
Special schools	1,042	4,401	61,497
Common schools	15,166	31,196	2,134,683
Total	16,569	42,022	2,278,630

The instruction is mostly free, being from a public fund. The results of this educational system are not what they should be because of the control of the priesthood.

Revenues.—The amount of the public revenue, as estimated in the Austrian and Hungarian budgets for 1878, is as follows, in florins, (1 florin = 48c.):

Revenue of the whole empire	13,548,196
Revenue from Austria	399,795,163.
Revenue from Hungary	219,846,019.
Total	631,189,378

The annual public expenditure for the same year was:

Expenses of Austria	423,121,704
Expenses of Hungary	240,967,435
	664,089,139
Deficit January 1, 1878	30,899,761

The common debt of the empire 411,999,868
The debt of Hungary 660,176,966
The debt of Austria, July 1, 1878 3,000,429,165
Total 4,072,605,999

The public debt of Austria proper is composed as follows, July 1, 1878, in florins:

Title of Debt.	Bearing Interest.	Bearing no Interest.	Total.
1. Consolidated debt, old.	589,582	228,697	1,818,279
Consolidated debt, new.	2,763,288,625	122,619,312	2,885,807,937
2. Floating debt.	87,830,029	995,898	88,825,927
3. Rentes for damages.	12,555,862		12,555,862
4. Rentes to Bavaria.	1,750,000		1,750,000

THE KINGDOM OF BELGIUM.

BY REV. E. EDWIN HALL.

French—La Belgique. Danish—Belgien. German—Belgien. Russian—Belgia. Italian—Belgio. Spanish—Bélgica. Portuguese—Belgica. Swedish—Belgien. Turkish—Belgica.

Location, etc.—The origin of this kingdom as a separate State dates from the year 1830. In August a revolution began at Brussels, which severed the Belgian provinces from the crown of Holland; and in December the allied powers recognized their permanent separation from the kingdom of the Netherlands. It is one of the smaller of the European States, bounded north by Holland, east by Dutch Limbourg, Luxembourg and Rhenish Prussia, south and southwest by France, and northwest by the North sea. This territory lies between 49° 50' and 51° 30' north latitude, and between 2° 32' and 6° 7' east longitude, having an area of 11,373 square miles, being about one-fourth the area of the State of Pennsylvania. The population in 1878 was 5,476,668. It is the most densely populated country in Europe, having an average of 481 inhabitants to the square mile.

Topography, etc.—The general topographical character of Belgium is that of a low and level country, having few elevations, and those rarely exceeding 2,000 feet in height. The north and west provinces, in their flatness, fertility, dikes and canals, may be regarded as a continuation of Holland. This portion of the kingdom is so densely peopled that it has the appearance of one vast continuous village. The south and east provinces, Liège, Luxembourg and Namur, present the greatest irregularities of surface, extensive forests, with tracts of marshy land and uncultivated plateaus. With the exception of these hilly districts in the south and east, the whole territory presents a series of nearly level plains, traversed by numerous streams, and meadows of brilliant verdure, enclosed by hedge-row trees, and thickly studded throughout with towns and villages. In the provinces bordering on the sea the land is so low as to require to be protected from inundation by dikes, though no part of the surface of Belgium is actually below the sea level, like that of Holland. Large districts which formerly were alluvial morasses, have been drained and embanked. The enclosures thus artificially gained from the sea and rivers are called polders, and constitute a sixtieth part of the kingdom, or 193 square miles.

Provinces, etc.—The kingdom is divided into nine provinces—Antwerp, Brabant, East Flanders, West Flanders, Hainault, Liège, Limbourg, Luxembourg and Namur. The principal towns are Brussels, the capital, with [in 1876] 183,080 inhabitants; Antwerp [in 1875], 148,814; Ghent, 128,424; Liège [1877], 118,140; Bruges, 48,113. The climate is less chilly and damp, more temperate and favorable to health than that of Holland; it is humid compared with France and Germany, and is similar to that of England, but a little colder in winter and hotter in summer. The air of the more elevated, central and south-eastern districts is clear, fresh and salubrious, but in the low northwest plains it is damp and heavy.

Flora and Fauna.—Forests and woods cover nearly one-fifth of the whole surface of the kingdom, in which are found all the common trees of Europe. The forests belonging to the State, the communes, and public institutions occupy about 450,000 acres, and are under an established system of public management. The preservation of trees is strictly enjoined; the farmer is compelled to remove all causes of injury to the trees on his premises. In some wild regions covered with dense forests are still found the wild boar, the roe-buck, the bear, and the wolf. All kinds of game, quadrupeds and birds are plentiful in the woody parts of the country.

Agriculture.—A superior council of agriculture is specially charged with the promotion and superintendence of the agricultural interests of the country. The farms are small—very few of 100 or even 50 acres; those of 20, 10 or 5 acres are very numerous. The garden has evidently been the original model of the Flemish farms; and those of 50 acres must be regarded as enlarged gardens. Of the cereal crops rye is most extensively cultivated, and is an important article of food for the working classes. The crops of wheat are uniformly fine and free from smut and mildew. Oats, barley, flax, hemp, hops, madder and chicory are common. The cultivation of beets for sugar is increasing.

Imports and Exports.—The principal exports are coal, flax, wrought iron, woolen stuffs, including cloths and carpets, raw sugar, machinery, flax and hemp stuffs, including lace, cotton yarn and cotton cloths, glass and crystal wares. The total value of exports in the year 1872 was 1,051,000,000 francs, or $210,200,000. The principal articles imported for home consumption are wool, grain of all kinds, flour, raw hides, iron ore, cast and wrought iron, cotton, resins, minerals and metals, coffee, wood for building, grease and tallow, oleaginous seeds and oils. The total value of imports for the year 1878 was $471,318.96, exports $400,834.96. The value of imports from the United States in the fiscal year 1879-80 was $34,154,180, being $18,153,779 greater than in the year 1872. The value of exports to the United States in 1879-80 was $11,791,465, being $8,991,465 greater than in 1872. The total value of trade between Belgium and the United States in the year 1879-80 was $45,945,645, an increase in seven years of over $32,000,000.

Minerals.—Belgium is rich in various kinds of minerals, as coal, iron, calamine, copper and lead. The working of mines constitutes a most important part of the national industry. In estimating the relative value of the mineral products, coal is first in order, furnishing the greatest amount of advantages to the country, amply supplying all the wants of the kingdom and being largely exported to France. All varieties are found, from anthracite to the richest gas-coal. Mines of iron are also numerous, rich and plentiful in some provinces, in quality resembling that of France, but the price is lower. Under the minister of the interior, the mines are superintended by a corps of mining engineers.

Fisheries.—Fish abound in most of the streams, where are found pike, trout, perch, tench, salmon, shad, whitebait, anchovy, etc. Off the coast and in the mouth of the Scheldt are taken skate, soles, turbot, lobsters, etc. The deep-sea fishery supplies cod and herrings, the commercial value of which is increasing under the encouragement of the government.

Government, Army, etc.—The government is a constitutional, representative and hereditary monarchy. The legislative power is vested in the King, the chamber of representatives and the senate. The judicial power is exercised by fixed tribunals, freed from all authoritative influences. The whole system of government is based on the broad principles of rational freedom and liberality. The Roman Catholic religion is professed by nearly the whole population. No state church is recognized; full liberty is guaranteed to all in matters of religion. The Belgic army consists of about 50,000 men, including officers. The civic or national guard is raised for the purpose of defending the constitutional rights of the monarchy and the people, maintaining order, upholding the laws, and preserving the territory from invasion. This guard is unequally divided into three corps, numbering altogether about 600,000 men. The government is authorized to give an active and efficient character to the whole or any part of this corps when necessary. Belgium, when separated from Holland, was left entirely without an armed navy. In 1838 she possessed only a small flotilla of gunboats. Several larger vessels have since been constructed.

Roads, etc.—There is no country on the continent of Europe in which lines of roads exist in greater number, and are kept in better condition. The extent of inland navigation by means of canals and navigable rivers amounts to 854 miles. The facilities thus afforded for the transport of heavy merchandise and agricultural products between the principal places in the kingdom is a great advantage to industrial and commercial business. Belgium is the first State in Europe in which a general system of railways has been planned and executed by the government at the public cost. These are under special administration in the interest of the government.

Education, etc.—For the general diffusion of education among the people, numerous public schools, literary and scientific institutions are supported out of communal, provincial and government funds. Every commune has a primary school, in which instruction is gratuitous for all children whose parents are unable to educate them. There are middle schools, some supported by the communes and some by the government; ten royal atheneums in which courses of study are arranged so as to occupy two and three years. For superior instruction there are four universities, in each of which are faculties of philosophy, literature, science, law and medicine. The special institutions include engineering and mining schools, academies and schools of design, painting, sculpture, and music, in many of which instruction is gratuitous. The public revenue in 1879 was 265,141,866 francs. The expenditures 259,606,765 francs. At the close of the year 1879 the public debt of Belgium amounted to 1,541,347,444 francs.

Brussels—James O. Putnam, minister resident.

" —John Wilson, consul.

" —Arthur T. Brereton, vice consul.

Antwerp—John H. Steuart, consul.

Charleroi—Charles Vander-Elst, consular agent.

Ghent—Alfred Lefebvre, vice consul.

Ostend—A. Van Iseghem, consular agent.

Verviers and Lidge—George C. Tanner, consul.

Why consult an advertising agent? Because, your business will be well done, promptly done, and cheaply done. In other words, you get the benefit of his experience and knowledge without cost to yourself, for the newspaper and not the advertiser pays the agent's commission. He has a thorough knowledge of all the different styles of papers, and is able to advise concerning the special mediums and localities which it would be especially profitable for his client to use. It is for the agent's interest to do all in his power to make advertisers' investments pay them, for by so doing he enables them by success to grow from small advertisers to large ones.

THE PRINCIPALITY OF BULGARIA.

BY JAMES Q. RICE.

Bulgarian—Bolgaria. Danish—Bulgarien. French—Bulgarie. German—Bulgarien. Russian—Bulgaria. Italian—Balgaria. Spanish—Bulgaria. Portuguese—Bulgarien. Swedish—Bulgarien. Turkish—Bulgharistan.

Location and Size.—The principality of Bulgaria, which was created by the Treaty of Berlin, in July, 1878, is a political division of European Turkey lying along the right bank of the Danube, stretching from the influx of the Timok to the Black sea. It is bounded on the south by the Balkan mountains, which separate it from Roumelia; on the west it is continuous with Servia, and on the east it is washed by the Black sea. The accurate settlement of the boundaries of the principality was left to a European congress appointed by the signatories of the Berlin treaty. It lies between 42° and 45° north latitude and 24° and 29° east longitude. The estimated area is about 30,000 square miles, and the population by the latest returns is 1,859,000.

Topography.—The country may be roughly described as a great table-land, sloping with considerable regularity toward the Danube, and having its surface broken by numerous off-shoots and spurs from the southern mountains, and furrowed by the channels of the many streams to which these mountains give rise. The country nearest the Danube is a district of fertile plain lands; these are succeeded by a hill region which is well adapted for habitation and for tillage, except upon the crests of the hills. Beyond rise the mountains. The plain lands of the valley of the Danube are well adapted to the cultivation of grain and grass, and the hill regions furnish considerable forests, and support large herds of cattle. By far the larger portion of the country belongs to the basin of the Danube, which receives during this part of its course several rivers of considerable size. A few small streams find their way into the Black sea, the only one of importance being the Kamtchik. The coast, from the southern extremity of the principality to Cape Kali-Akra, northeast of Varna, is generally high, and north of that it is low and marshy.

Subdivisions and Cities.—Under the existing provisional arrangements the principality is divided into eight provinces, namely, Widdin, Sistova, Rustschuk, Varna, Tirnova, Sofia, Shirio, and Skoblia or Uskup. The principal towns, with their estimated populations, are Sofia, which is the capital, with a population of 20,000; Tirnova, with 18,000; Widdin, with 20,000; Rustchuk, with 25,000, and Varna, with 18,000. Besides these there are from 15 to 20 small towns having from 2,000 to 3,000 each.

Climate.—The climate is mild and temperate, though in the winter the thermometer sometimes sinks to 0°, and there are heavy falls of snow. The summers are dry and the temperature ranges among the nineties, but before the harvest the wet season frequently begins, and in the spring there is an abundant fall of rain.

Agriculture.—Throughout the province the soil is excellent, and if properly cultivated could yield the richest crops. As it is, the inhabitants not only supply their own wants, but furnish a considerable quantity for export, and indeed, the province was formerly considered as one of the principal sources of grain supply for Turkey. The cereal most grown is wheat, but Indian corn is pretty common among the Mussulman farmers. Little hay is made, and turnips and potatoes are grown only in a few places. The peach, apricot, grape and many other fruits come to great perfection, and wine is manufactured, but in a very rude and careless manner. The buffalo is the animal chiefly used in agricultural labor, though horses are sufficiently common. Cows, swine and goats are kept, and sheep-farming is carried on to some extent, but the character of the various stocks is poor.

Manufactures and Trade.—Manufacturing and business enterprises were quite largely developed during the ten years preceding the Russo-Turkish war of 1877, but the most of the business centers were either destroyed or seriously crippled during that struggle, and have not yet recovered from the effects. The principal articles of export are wheat and corn, of which 1,500,000 tons are exported annually. The other articles of moment are attar of roses, wool, tallow, wine, butter, cheese, flax, hides and timber. The principal imports are textile manufactures, iron and coals. No direct trade exists with the United States.

Minerals.—The province is fairly rich in mineral deposits, iron and coal being the chief. Deposits of coal have been discovered in the neighborhood of Widdin, Travua, and between Varna and Baltchick, on the Black sea. "But," says a British consular report of the year 1877, "such has been the inattention of the government to this important subject that little, and even that amounting to nothing, has been done to develop these valuable productions of nature. In the hands of respectable companies the working of these mines would, no doubt, be attended with very favorable results."

Government.—By the Berlin treaty it was declared that Bulgaria should have a Christian government and a national militia, the Prince being elected by the people and none of the members of the reigning houses of the great European powers being eligible. In accordance with these provisions Prince Alexander of Battenberg assumed the reign in 1879.

The legislative authority is vested in a single chamber called the National Assembly of Bulgaria, whose members are elected by universal manhood suffrage at the rate of one member to every 20,000 of population, counting both sexes. The Prince has also the right of nominating a number of deputies equal to half the number returned by the popular vote. The executive power is vested, under the Prince, in a council of seven ministers.

Religions.—The bulk of the population belong to the Greek church, and the remainder, about 700,000, are Mohammedans.

Army.—The army has a peace footing of 16,120 men. There are also 80,000 men in the reserve force and a little less than that number in the Landwehr.

Railways, etc.—Bulgaria has one line of railway extending from Rustchuk to the port of Varna, about 140 English miles, and several of the principal towns are connected by telegraph lines.

Education.—There are a number of schools in the Bulgarian language scattered throughout the country, and the larger ones are provided with fine, large buildings erected specially for them. Instruction is given in all branches of a common school education free of cost. A part of the ecclesiastical revenues have been set apart for the maintenance of the schools, and in some places a special tax is laid for their benefit. Upon the establishment of the principality it was agreed that Turkey should receive a certain yearly tribute, but this has not yet been paid, nor will it be without considerable resistance on the part of the Bulgarians.

THE KINGDOM OF DENMARK.

BY GEORGE S. FULLERTON, B.A.

Danish—Danmark. French—Danemark. German—Dänemark. Russian—Dania. Italian—Danimarda. Spanish—Dinamarca. Portuguese—Dinamarca. Swedish—Danmark. Chinese and Japanese—Ta⁴ Tan¹ Kwo². Turkish—Danimarka. Dutch—Deenemerken.

Position.—Denmark, a small kingdom in the northwest of Europe, comprises the peninsula of Jutland and a group of islands in the Baltic. It is bounded north by the Skager-Rack, east by the Categat, the Sound and the Baltic; south by the Baltic, the Little Belt, and the German duchy of Schleswig; and west by the North Sea. It lies between 54° 34' and 57° 44' 52" north latitude, and between 8° 4' and 12° 34' east longitude, with the exception of the island of Bornholm, which lies between 14° 42' and 15° 10' east longitude. Its area is 14,553 English square miles. Population on February 1st, 1880, was: Of the kingdom proper, 1,940,000; but including the colonies, 2,056,588.

Topography.—The surface of Denmark is uniformly flat and low. The western coast of Jutland is sandy and dangerous to shipping; the eastern coast has several good havens. The southeastern parts of Jutland and the islands are fertile and rich in beech woods, cornfields and meadows. There are no large rivers or lakes. The territorial divisions consist of provinces, amts and parishes. The provinces are 7 and correspond to the 7 episcopal sees. Three of the provinces are in the islands.

Cities.—The only large city is Copenhagen in Zealand. This was estimated in February, 1876, to have a population of 199,000, and with its suburbs of 233,000. The next largest town is Odense, in Funen, containing 17,000. Twelve other towns contain 5,000 and upwards.

Climate.—The climate partakes of the characteristics of both eastern and western Europe. The average temperature for the year is at Copenhagen 47.18 Fahr. Storms of wind and rain are exceedingly frequent in July and August.

Flora and Fauna.—The wild animals and birds are those of central Europe. The larger quadrupeds are all extinct, even the red deer, formerly very abundant. The usual domestic animals are found in Denmark, with the exception of the goat, which is very uncommon. In her flora there is more variety than might be expected from so low and monotonous a country. The ordinary forms of the north of Europe grow luxuriantly. The Danish forests are almost exclusively made up of beech. In Bornholm the pine, birch and ash are most abundant.

Agriculture.—All the usual European varieties of cereals are grown in Denmark. The potato is largely cultivated, as also pease, clover and turnips. The usual north European fruit trees produce good crops. In relation to its size, there is no country in Europe, except Belgium and England, that can compete with Denmark as a grain producer. The principal cereals are rye, wheat, oats, barley and buckwheat. The chief exports are live stock, butter and breadstuffs, especially barley meal, rye meal and wheat flour. The principal imports are coal, coffee, glass wares, cotton manufactures, woollen manufactures, metals, both wrought and unwrought, metal ores, oils, salt, sugar and tobacco.

Trade.—Total value of exports in the years 1876, 1877 and 1878 was £35,817,806; the yearly average, £11,939,268; and of imports for same years, £20,047,623. Average for each year, £6,682,541. Imports from the United States during the year ending June 30, 1880, $3,471,204; exports to the United States for same period, $180,299.

Minerals.—The mineral products of Denmark are very unimportant. It is rich, however, in clays, of which pottery is made.

Fisheries.—The most valuable kinds of fish are the herring, cod, mackerel and salmon. The fisheries are unimportant.

Government.—The government is a hereditary constitutional monarchy. The king must confess the Evangelical Lutheran religion and give his oath to the privy council of state that he will maintain the fundamental laws. He attains his majority at the age of 18. The king appoints officers, declares war and concludes treaties of peace, alliance and trade; but he cannot alienate the territory or essentially modify the political relations of the state without the consent of the diet. The diet consists of 2 chambers, the lower house and the upper house, which assemble every year on the first Monday in October. Laws proposed by the diet must be sanctioned by the king, and taxes cannot be imposed without the consent of the diet. The highest court of the kingdom is the privy council of state, presided over by the king.

Religion.—The religion is Lutheran, but all creeds are tolerated. The national church is governed by 7 bishops, nominated by the crown. It embraces almost the whole population, and has at Copenhagen a missionary college and a seminary for students in divinity. According to the census of 1870 the Lutherans numbered 1,769,583. There are also some Jews, Baptists, Mormons and Roman Catholics.

Army and Navy.—The Danish army is regulated according to the principles fixed by the law of July 6th, 1867. Conscription is practiced. The service begins at the age of 22, and continues 8 years for the line and reserve. One who has served out his time is liable to be enrolled for a second term of service. The regular army consists of 35,975 rank and file, and 1,031 officers. The navy comprised at the commencement of September, 1875, 6 iron-clads, 12 unarmored vessels, 7 gunboats and 5 paddle steamers—the whole carrying a total of 286 guns.

Railways, etc.—The principal railroad line runs from Copenhagen to Korsör, on the Great Belt; another goes through the island of Fünen; and there are several lines in Jutland, running from Aalborg to the frontier of Schleswig, with branches. The total length of railroads is about 900 miles. There are over 1,750 miles of telegraph in operation. The only canal is a short one in the north of Jutland. Great attention is paid by government to education. Every village has at least 1 school, and there are 22 gymnasias and 7 normal seminaries. There are asylums for the deaf and dumb, and scientific institutions of various kinds are established throughout the country. Every child between the ages of 7 and 14 is obliged by law to attend some school. The university of Copenhagen has 40 professors and more than 1,100 students. There are colleges in all the large towns, besides 2,940 public schools. The number of periodicals is large. The estimates contained in the budget of 1879-1880 were: Receipts, calculated at £2,586,528, and expenditures, £2,280,522. The national debt amounted in 1878 to £9,710,108. For maps, lists of newspapers and value of money, see other departments of this work. The resident representatives of the United States are as follows:

Copenhagen—Henry B. Ryder, consul.

Elsinore—Regner L. Ulstrup, consular agent.

Ronne—Charles Bistrup, consular agent.

About forty miles from London a schoolmaster has had such success with boys as there are almost forty ministers and schoolmasters that were his scholars. His wife also teaches girls lace-making, plain work, raising paste, sauces, and cookery to a degree of exactness. His price is £10 or £11 the year, with a pair of sheets and one spoon, to be returned if desired; coaches and other conveniences pass every day within half a mile of the house, and 'tis but an easy journey to or from London.—Advertisement from the London Postman, July, 1700.

In 1806 the Hartford, Connecticut Courant contained the following, which gives an unpleasant idea of what many wives might say in reply to the warning advertisements of desperate husbands if they only thought it worth while, or rather if they thought of it at all:

EAST WINDSOR, U. S.

Thomas Hutchins has advertised, that I have absented myself from his bed and board, and forbid all persons trusting me on his account, and cautioned all persons against making me any payment on his account. I now advertise the public, that the same Thomas Hutchins came as a fortune-teller into this town about a year ago, with a recommendation, which, with some artful falsehoods, induced me to marry him. Of the four wives he had before me, the last he quarrelled away; how the other three came by their deaths, he can best inform the public: but I caution all widows and maidens against marrying him, be their desire for matrimony ever so strong. Should he make his advances under a feigned name, they may look out for a little, strutting, talkative, feeble, meagre, hatchet-faced fellow, with spindle shanks, and a little warped in the back.

THANKFUL HUTCHINS.

THE REPUBLIC OF FRANCE.

BY JOHN A. AMUNDSON, B.A.

French—La France. Danish—Frankrige. German—Frankreich. Russian—Frantzia. Italian—Francia. Spanish—Francia. Portuguese—Franca. Swedish—Frankrike. Chinese and Japanese—Fa Kwo. Turkish—Fransa. Dutch—Frankryk.

Position.—France lies in the southwestern part of the continent of Europe, and is bounded north-west and north by the English channel and the Straits of Dover; northeast by Belgium and Germany; east by Germany, Switzerland and Italy, from which countries respectively it is divided by the Vosges, Jura, and Alps mountains; south by the Mediterranean sea and Spain, being separated from the latter by the Pyrenées mountains; and west by the Bay of Biscay and the Atlantic ocean. In latitude it lies between 42° 20' north and 5° 5' north, and in longitude from Greenwich between 4° 54' west to 7° 45' east. Its greatest length measured from north to south is about 620 miles, and its greatest breadth, east to west, is about 550 miles. Its total area, including the Savoy provinces and the island of Corsica, is 204,091 square miles.

Population.—Its population, December 31, 1876, was 36,905,788, or an average of about 180 inhabitants to the square mile. From France there is scarcely any emigration.

Topography.—In general outline France may be said to be a six-sided figure, but each side is quite irregular. Three sides face large bodies of water and are indented with bays and harbors. On the southern side are the Pyrenées, one of the great mountain chains of France, attaining a maximum height of 10,994 feet. On the eastern side are the French Alps, containing Mont Blanc, 15,744 feet high; Mont Iserau, 13,272 feet, and Mont Cenis, 11,457 feet. The northeastern side faces Belgium and Germany, with no natural line of separation. In the eastern part of France there is a range of mountains extending from near the Pyrenées in a northeasterly direction across the country, receiving different names in different parts, as the Black mountains, Cévennes, Côte d'Or, and Vosges. This range (attaining a maximum height of about 7,000 feet) is the great watershed of France. From it flow four large rivers: the Rhine into the Mediterranean, the Garonne and Loire into the Bay of Biscay, and the Seine into the English Channel. France has a river navigation 5,500 miles in extent. The western part, including the lower basins of the Garonne, Loire and Seine, consists of plains. Large plains are also found in Burgundy in the east.

Subdivisions.—France is divided by the government into 87 departments or districts, the average size of which may be stated at about 2,000 English square miles.

Cities.—Paris is the capital of France, and had a population, March 31, 1876, of 1,988,806. At the same date 23 other cities had above 50,000—among them, Lyons, with 342,815; Marseilles, with 318,868; Bordeaux, with 215,140; Lille, with 162,775; Toulouse, with 131,642; St. Etienne, with 126,019; Nantes, with 122,247, and Rouen, with 104,902.

Climate.—France possesses a very fine climate, but varied in different parts of the country, owing to differences in physical characteristics and latitude. There are four quite well-defined regions, each having a peculiar climatic character, and each, also, a special production. First, beginning at the north, comes the region of cereals; second, south of that, the region of the vine; then a region of maize cultivation; and last, the region of the olive, in the southeastern part. The climate is, on the whole, temperate, the mean annual temperature, according to Humboldt, being 62° Fahrenheit at Toulon, 59.5° at Marseilles, 56° at Bordeaux, 55.2° at Nantes, 51.2° at Paris, and 50.5° at Dunkirk. The greatest annual rainfall—30 inches—is in the Rhone valley, as against 20 inches on the Atlantic slope. Destructive winds prevail at times in the Mediterranean district, the most dreaded being called the mistral.

Fauna.—The wild animals of France are fast diminishing, being driven and confined more and more to the mountain fastnesses and the denser woods. In the higher Alps and Pyrenées, the black bear, chamois and wild goat are found, and at times the lynx. Wolves still abound in the mountain districts of the interior, and the wild-boar, roebuck, fox, squirrel, polecat, marten, weasel, hedgehog, and other small animals are common in the woods. Red and fallow deer are diminishing. Hares and rabbits are numerous, and game generally. Reptiles are few, but birds numerous. Among the latter are eagles, falcons and vultures. The wanton destruction of small birds is being stringently forbidden, as conducive to the increase of noxious insects. The statistics as to domestic animals in 1872 were as follows: 2,880,000 horses, 500,000 asses, 300,000 mules, 11,000,000 horned cattle, 25,000,000 sheep, 5,000,000 swine, and 2,250,000 dogs. There were also 2,390,000 hives of bees. The best breeds of cattle are found in Auvergne and Gascony; of sheep, in Berry; of swine, in Lorraine and the Pyrenées; of horses, in Limousin, Brittany, Perche and Normandy; and of mules, in Poitou. In 1870 there were 58,000,000 domestic fowls, which, together with eggs and feathers, yielded about 80,000,000 francs, or $16,000,000.

Flora.—The flora of France comprises about 800 genera and 6,000 species. Six per cent. of its territory is covered with wood, the principal forest trees being chestnut and beech on the central mountains, the oak and cork tree in the Pyrenées, and the fir in Gascony. Means have been taken to check the destruction of forests, which has been very great during the last two hundred years, and also to plant wood. The vegetable products of France are abundant and various, including the cereals, the vine, chestnuts, olives, culinary fruits and vegetables, hops, beet-root, tobacco, madder, chicory, flax, etc. The mean annual yield of several staple products is estimated as follows: Wheat, 73,000,000 hectoliters; rye, 22,000,000 hectoliters; barley, and oats, 40,000,000 hectoliters; maize, 9,100,000 hectoliters; potatoes, 95,000,000 hectoliters. (The hectoliter equals 2.75 bushels.) A leading industry in the north and east is the manufacture of sugar from beet-root, and in 1873 there were 415,204 kilograms of sugar produced from this source. (The kilogram equals 2.2 pounds avoirdupois.) Hemp and flax are grown in large quantities, but not enough to satisfy the home consumption. Great attention is given in the south and southeast to the cultivation of the mulberry-tree, because of its value in relation to the production of silk. Besides what was required for an enormous home manufacture, $20,000,000 worth of raw silk was exported in 1873. France leads Europe in the growth of the vine, and the average annual yield of its vineyards is estimated at 1,000,000 gallons. There are very few large land owners in France. Of the 5,550,000 distinct properties into which the cultivated land of the country is divided, 5,000,000 average less than 6 acres each; 500,000 average 60 acres, and 50,000 average 600 acres.

Trade.—In extent of trade France stands third, being exceeded only by England and the United States—and in the production of certain articles she is without a rival. For taste and elegance in manufacture the world looks to France, and the word "French" as describing certain commodities is synonymous with the best made, as, for example, French wines, French silks, French laces and shawls, French fine flannels and woollens, French leather, French mirrors, French philosophical and surgical instruments, French china and glass, etc. France leads the fashionable and æsthetic world. In addition to the above articles of export may be named joiners' and cabinetmakers' wares, bronze, steel and iron wares, paper and refined sugar. The imports consist of all kinds of produce, cotton, wool, sugar, coffee, spices, dyestuffs, raw silk, woolen, hemp, flax, coal, copper, cattle, hides, etc. Paris, Lyons, St. Etienne, Lille, Rheims, Nîmes, Toulouse, St. Quentin, Orleans, Avignon and Montpellier are the great emporiums of trade, and the chief ports are Marseilles, Cette, Havre, Bordeaux, Nantes, Rouen, Calais, Dunkirk, Boulogne and Dieppe. The gross total value of the exports of home production to all nations during the year 1879 was 4,820,000,000 francs, or $960,000,000. The gross total value of the imports for home consumption from all nations for the year 1879 was 4,350,000,000 francs, or $870,000,000. The value of imports from the United States for the year ending June 30, 1880, was $100,063,044. The value of the exports to the United States for the same period was $69,344,412. The total trade ($169,407,456) was 11.26 per cent. of the entire commerce of the United States for the year stated.

Minerals.—Among the mineral endowments of France the chief are coal and iron, but not enough of them is produced to meet the home demand. Hence it has to import them both to some extent. The iron mines yield annually about 700,000 tons, and the coal mines about 2,000,000 tons. 250,000 men were employed in these mines in 1868. The mines are distributed in nearly all parts of the country. From the salt mines and salt marshes more than 1,000,000,000 pounds are annually produced. Lead abounds in the mountainous districts, especially in Brittany, and copper in the Pyrenées, Alps and Vosges. Zinc, cobalt and manganese are also found. Quarries for marble, porphyry, granite, slate and building stone of many kinds are numerous. Alabaster and crystals also abound. There are nearly 900 mineral springs—hot and cold, ferruginous, gaseous, sulphurous and salt-water. Gold and silver are found in small quantities.

Fisheries.—A great source of wealth in France are the fisheries, the most important being the pilchard fishery on the shores of Brittany and Normandy. 8,000 barrels of salted pilchards are yearly sent to market. Mackerel abounds on the same coasts. There are extensive oyster and muscle beds on the western coasts, and tunny and anchovy fisheries on the Mediterranean. In 1870, in the cod and herring fisheries, 22,898 men and 1,342 ships were employed, while 603,691 quintals were produced (a quintal being equal to 1.97 cwt.)

Government.—The government of France, at present, is that of a republic, and began with the downfall of Napoleon III., September 4, 1870. A constitution was voted by the National Assembly, February 25, 1875. The legislative power is vested in an assembly composed of two houses, the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate. The chief executive power is vested in a magistrate called President of the Republic. France is divided into 86 departments, comprising 362 arrondissements, 2,865 cantons, and 35,985 communes. The members of the Chamber of Deputies are elected by universal suffrage, each arrondissement being entitled to at least one, and if its population be in excess of 100,000 it is entitled to an additional deputy for each 100,000 or fraction thereof. The only qualification required in a voter is that he be a citizen and 21 years of age. A deputy needs only to be a citizen and 25 years of age. The Chamber of Deputies is composed of 532 members. In the Senate there are 300 members, 225 of whom are elected by the departments and colonies, and 75 (who are life members) who were, in the first instance, nominated by the National Assembly and then elected by the Senate. To be a senator the only necessary qualification is to be a Frenchman and 40 years of age. The senators from the departments are elected for nine years, one-third retiring every three years. The Senate and the Chamber of Deputies meet on the second Tuesday in January each year, unless previously summoned by the President, and are required to be in session at least five months each year. The sessions of both begin and end at the same time. The Senate and the Chamber of Deputies, in National Assembly united, elect, by a majority vote, the President of the Republic, for a term of seven years. At the end of this period he is eligible for reelection. It is his duty to promulgate the laws passed by the two chambers, and to watch over and enforce their execution. He possesses the right of pardon, the disposal of the military forces, and the appointment to all civil and military posts. He names the heads of the ministerial departments, which are nine in number, viz: those of justice, foreign affairs, the interior, finances, marine and colonies, public instruction, public works, agriculture and commerce, and war. These ministers are also responsible to the chambers. The President himself is responsible only in case of high treason. Every act of the President must be countersigned by a minister. The President, the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies have each a right to originate and introduce laws. The President can adjourn the chambers, but not for more than one month at a time, nor more than twice in the same session. If the chambers be not in session, he can convoke them for extraordinary occasions, and is bound to convoke them at the request of one-half the members of each chamber. The President, senators and deputies receive salaries fixed by law. The President is also assisted by a council of state, consisting of 43 members, 15 of whom may be nominated by himself and 28 are elected by the assembly. At the head of each of the departments, into which France is divided, is a prefect nominated by the president; of each arrondissement, a sub-prefect; of each canton, a member of the council of the department; and of each commune, a mayor and municipal council. The minister of justice presides over the judicial system of France. There are 357 courts of the arrondissements; 2,681 police courts; 216 tribunals of commerce; 26 courts of appeal; a court of cassation, which confirms or annuls the decisions of the police and assize courts; and a high court of justice, giving final judgment in case of offenses against the State.

Religions.—There is toleration in France for all religious beliefs, provided the exercise of them does not disturb the public peace and order as defined by the law. Three religions—the Catholic, the Protestant (including the Lutheran and Reformed), and the Jewish—are recognized by law, so as to receive State allowances. The clergy of these religions are exempt from military service. In 1877 the state allowances to these religions were as follows:

Roman Catholic prelates and clergy.....	41,508,295	francs
Roman Catholic churches, seminaries, etc.....	10,205,400	"
Protestant clergy.....	1,416,000	"
Jewish rabbis.....	188,900	"
Protestant and Jewish places of worship.....	80,000	"
Total.....	53,398,595	"
Or.....	10,079,719	"

At the census of 1872 there were in France 35,387,703 Roman Catholics, 580,757 Protestants, 49,439 Jews, and 85,022 adherents of other forms of belief. Of the Protestants, the Lutherans numbered 80,117 and the Calvinists 467,531. The clergy of all denominations numbered 150,654, who, with their families and servants, were increased to a total of 216,675.

Army.—In France every man is liable to military service. Substitution and enlistment for money are not allowed. The period of liability to service is from the age of 20 to that of 40. This period of 20 years is divided into four portions: The first five years service is required in the active army, then four years in the reserve of the active army, then five years in the territorial army, and last six years in the reserve of the territorial army. Still there are some exemptions; those having a physical infirmity, those upon whom others are absolutely dependent for support, and some sustaining certain family or social relations, teachers in public schools, professors of various institutions, artists who won a grand prize at the Institute of France, members and novices of religious institutions devoted to teaching, and the clergy generally. Moreover, young men who pass a certain educational examination may enlist for one year and, by maintaining and clothing themselves during that year, obtain exemption from service in the active army. The total effective force of the army in peace is 450,000 men, and in war, 2,000,000. France has more fortresses than any other country, and its military arsenals and warehouses are very numerous. The estimated expense of the army in 1878 was 338,266,499 francs, or $107,653,299.80.

Navy.—In 1878 the war navy of France consisted of 53 iron-clads, 264 unarmored screw steamers, 62 paddle steamers, and 113 sailing vessels. These include torpedo-boats and gun-boats. All persons devoted to a seafaring life, between the ages of 18 and 50, are liable to conscription into the navy, but the service is only compulsory for three years. There are 22,400 marines in time of peace, 28,000 in war, and 25,500 customs and coast-guard men.

Railways.—January 1, 1877, the total length of all railroads open to traffic in France was 12,723 English miles, the total gross receipts amounting to 88,707,166 francs, or $171,741,433.20. The railroads are owned almost entirely by six great companies—the Paris-Mediterranean, the Paris-Orleans, the Northern, the Western, the Southern, and the Eastern.

Telegraphs, etc.—As to telegraphs, there were 35,445 miles of lines, and 89,522 miles of wire, at the beginning of 1878. The total of messages sent the year just preceding was 8,518,013, of which 1,037,730 were international. In 1876 there were forwarded by the French post-office 367,443,837 letters, from which came a revenue of 92,894,307 francs, or $18,578,861.40. There are 99 canals of considerable size in France, constructed either to connect the navigation of the rivers or for independent water communication. The principal canals are those connecting Nantes and Brest and the Rhone with the Rhine, and those of Berre, Nivernais and Bourgoigne.

Education.—Public instruction in France is under the supervision of a special ministry of the government, but largely in the hands of the Roman Catholic clergy. The following table shows the extent of popular education in 1872:

DEGREE OF EDUCATION.	GROUPS OF AGES.
	Under 6.	From 6 to 20.	Above 20 years.
Unable to read or write.....	3,540,101	2,082,338	7,702,362
Able to read only.....	292,348	1,175,125	2,305,130
Able to read and write.....	151,595	5,458,097	13,073,057
Unascertained.....	38,042	70,721	214,005
Total.....	4,022,086	8,786,281	23,294,554

Total population.....36,102,921
From this it will be seen that about 30 per cent. of the population of France (setting aside those under 6) have no education whatever, i. e., can neither read nor write. The portions of France that are best educated are the northern and eastern. The number of public schools during the year 1876-77 was 71,547. Besides these, there are 81 normal schools and 15 academies. Also numerous schools and colleges for special branches, including institutions for teaching the sciences, the arts and trades, agricultural and veterinary schools, schools designed specially to prepare youths for the public service, and military and naval colleges. Paris has several large libraries free to the public, and there are 338 such in the provinces. Galleries of painting, statuary, and articles of vertu are abundant in France. The Institute of France, as a literary and scientific institution, and the museum of natural history are among the finest in the world. For the support of all educational institutions there were expended in 1876 38,220,000 francs, or $7,644,000. For the year 1877 the total expenditure of the government was 2,667,296,751, or $533,459,330.20, and the total revenue was 2,672,140,530 francs, or $534,428,106.

Public Debt.—The total public debt of France, January 1, 1875, was 18,757,685,645 francs, or $3,750,337,129, which was distributed among 3,380,933 holders.

Colonies.—France has colonies in Asia, Africa, America and Polynesia, with a population of 2,607,357. Add to these certain countries in Asia and Polynesia that are under the protection of France and have a population of 1,043,897. The area of the colonies is 335,594 English square miles.

These are to give notice that Edward Barlet, Oxford carrier, hath removed his Inn in London from the Swan at Holborn Bridge to the Oxford Arms in Warwick Lane, where he did inne before the Fire. His coaches and waggons going forth on their usual days, Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. He hath also a hearse, with all things convenient to carry a corpse to any part of England.—Advertisement from the London Gazette, March 12, 1672-73.

We, who are familiar with the thousand and one tricks resorted to by traders in order to attract attention to their advertisements, may be apt to ridicule the artless manner in which these notices were brought before the public of the seventeenth century. Different types, dividing lines, woodcuts, and other contrivances to catch the wandering eye, were still unknown; and frequently all the advertisements were set forth in one string, without a single break, or even full stop, as in the subjoined specimen from the Loyal Impartial Mercury, November 14-17, 1681:—

The House in the Strand wherein the Morocco Ambassador lately resided is to be let, furnished or unfurnished, intirely or in several parts; a house in Marklane fit for a marchant; also very good lodgings not far from the Royal Exchange, fit for any marchant or gentleman to be let, inquire at the North West corner of the Royal Exchange, and there you may know further; inquiry is made at the said office for places to be Stewards of courts, liberties or franchises, or any office at law, or places to be auditor, or receiver, or steward of the household, or gentleman of horse to any nobleman or gentleman; or places to be clerks to brew-houses, or wharfs, or suchlike; also any person that is willing to buy or sell any estates, annuities, or mortgages, or let, or take any house, or borrow money upon the bottom of ships, may be accomodated at the said office.

THE GERMAN EMPIRE.

BY C. C. OTIS, A.B.

German—Deutschland. Danish—Tyska Kejsaredömet. French—Allemagne. Russian—Germania or Germaniska Imperia. Italian—Allemagna. Spanish—Alemánia. Portuguese—Alemania. Swedish—Tyska Kejsaredömet. Chinese and Japanese—Tê² Kwo. Turkish—Nemtzezan.

Germany occupies the greater portion of central Europe, and, like many other eastern countries, has but few lines of natural boundary. If by the designation Germany is meant the territory in which the Germanic race and language are dominant, it must be remembered that this is much larger than the German empire proper, embracing parts of Austria, Switzerland and, perhaps, even of the Netherlands. This article is to treat of the German empire proper as it exists to-day.

Location and Population.—The empire is bounded on the southeast and south by Austria and Switzerland (for 1,170 miles), on the southwest by France (275 miles), on the west by Luxemburg, Belgium and Holland (together 522 miles). The length of German coast on the North Sea or German ocean is 300 miles, and on the Baltic 830 miles, Denmark intervening and forming a land boundary on the north of Schleswig for 53 miles. The eastern boundary for 725 miles is Russia. According to the most recent and accurate survey the German empire extends from 47° 16' to 55° 53' north latitude, and from 5° 52' to 22° 32' east longitude, embracing an area of 208,000 English square miles. It was not till the year 1828 that any systematic estimate of the population of Germany began to be made, and not till 1867 that the returns showed the actual resident population. At the latest census, in 1880, the total number of inhabitants was found to be 45,194,172.

Geography and Topography.—The Germans must be considered as more of an inland than a maritime people, as the length of coast line is not the third part of the whole frontier. The coasts are generally very shallow, and therefore devoid of natural ports, except on the east of Schleswig-Holstein, where at Kiel especially has been constructed a large and excellent harbor for men-of-war. Along the coast of the North Sea the mainland has to be protected by massive dikes, while the Frisian Islands are gradually being washed away by its waters. At Bremerhafen the tides rise to the height of 12 or 13 feet, but there is no perceptible tide whatever on the Baltic, as that is an inland sea. Along the coast of the Baltic there are few islands and no extensive sands, although the coast is remarkably flat. In the winter the coast line is so covered with ice that navigation is interrupted several months every year. Lighthouses are now well scattered along all the German coasts, thus providing as much as possible against the dangerous shoals and rocks. In its physical structure Germany is divided into 2 distinct portions. The northern and larger portion may be described as one uniform plain, covered mostly by very recent deposits. Southern and Central Germany, on the other hand, are celebrated for the beauty of their scenery and the diversity of their geological formations. Mountain ranges are very numerous throughout this portion of the empire, varying in height from 2,000 to 5,000 feet above the level of the sea, but so situated as not to interfere materially with the construction of public highways and railroads. The only place where the Alps touch this country is on the border line between Bavaria and Austria, where, 57 miles south from Munich, rises the Zugspitze to the height of 9,702 feet, being the highest summit in the empire. There are 9 distinct river systems in Germany, those of the Memel, Pregel, Vistula, Oder, Elbe, Weser, Ems, Rhine and Danube. These are all navigable, as well as many of their tributaries, but the Rhine only has sufficient volume at all times of the year to meet the requirements of a good navigable river. It has been estimated that Germany has 7,000 miles of navigable streams. Besides these there are also an almost innumerable number of small lakes, the one of greatest importance, aside from the 3 Haffs which lie upon the Baltic, being the Lake of Constance, covering an area of 186 square miles and lying upon the border between Germany and Switzerland.

Subdivisions.—The German empire is divided into 26 distinct states or confederations, as follows: Four kingdoms, 6 grand duchies, 5 duchies, 7 principalities, 3 free towns, and Alsace-Lorraine, which is under the central authority. We give below the names of these several States, together with the population of each according to the enumerations of 1875 and 1880:

Chief Cities.—The following table shows the population of 32 towns which had in 1875 upwards of 50,000 inhabitants. The figures given include only those within the municipal limits, and would be much increased were the suburbs of an urban character to be added:

POPULATION OF THE PRINCIPAL TOWNS IN 1875.
1. Berlin	966,858
2. Hamburg	264,675
3. Breslau	239,050
4. Munich	198,829

29. Dortmund	57,742
30. Augsburg	57,213
31. Cassel	53,043
32. Mainz	56,421
Total	4,340,564

The inhabitants of these 32 towns, therefore, amount to 10.1 per cent. of the entire population of the empire, while in England and Wales the towns of 50,000 inhabitants and upwards amount to 44 per cent. of the whole population.

Climate.—The climate of Germany varies considerably, according as it is influenced by the warm, moist winds from the Atlantic in the southwest, or is debarred from this influence by intervening mountains. Along the northern portions of the basin of the Rhine is the warmest temperature of the empire, the mean annual temperature being from 52° to 54°, that of summer 66° and upwards, while in winter the average temperature does not descend to the freezing point (32°). From this it gradually descends as one proceeds north and east, till in East Prussia the mean annual temperature is 42° to 44°, and the average temperature in winter falls as low as 22° to 26°. The quantity of rain which falls also varies greatly according to locality. In southern and western Germany the annual average is from 34 to 36 inches, while in the extreme northeast it is only from 16 to 20 inches.

Flora and Fauna.—The flora of Germany comprises about 7,000 species, 3,000 phanerogamic (having visible flowers) and about 4,000 cryptogamic (flowerless plants). As the country is so different in some localities from what it is in others, it can not be characterized distinctively by any of the principal botanical types. The forests cover about $\frac{3}{4}$ of the entire area—a percentage greater than any other country in the west or south of Europe. The forests owned by the government alone occupy 17,600 square miles, and throughout the empire great attention is paid to forest culture. Southern and central Germany are by far better wooded than the northern districts, while the whole northwest is nearly destitute of wood, the extensive stretches of turf, however, furnishing ample supplies of fuel. The most common varieties of trees are the fir, pine, larch, beech, oak, and along the Rhine valley the chestnut also appears. The variety of wild animals in Germany is not very great. Foxes, martens, weasels, badgers and otters are found everywhere, and occasionally a wolf appears. Of game animals there are the roe, stag, boar and hare; fallow deer and wild rabbits are less common. In the forests of East Prussia the elk is also found. The numerous lakes and rivers of Germany furnish great inducements to the feathered tribes, and everywhere in abundance may be found wild geese, ducks, grouse, partridges, snipes, woodcocks, quails, widgeons and teal.

Fish.—The waters abound in fish, but the species are few. The most common are the carp and salmon, the pike, eel, shad, roach, perch and lamprey. There are only 2 kinds of serpents, one of them being poisonous.

Agriculture.—About 3-10ths of the population of Germany are engaged in agriculture, and in general the soil is remarkably well cultivated. The same kinds of cereal crops are cultivated in all parts of the empire, but in the south and west wheat is predominant, and in the north and east, rye, oats and barley. Spelt, buckwheat, millet, rice, wheat and maize are also cultivated in some localities. For several years the production of cereals has not been sufficient to meet the native demand, and the importation of them has been constantly increasing. The potato is largely cultivated, not merely for food, but, especially in the Prussian provinces, for distillation into spirits. In some districts the growing of the common beet for the production of sugar is coming into great favor. There were in 1877 about 328 manufactories, which consumed 71,000,000 cwts. of beet roots, producing 5,800,000 cwts. of sugar. It was estimated in 1873 that 93,680 acres were devoted to the cultivation of hops, the annual production being 477,000 cwt. There are 28,500 breweries, producing annually 857,100,000 gallons of beer. Hops and beer thus form one of the standard articles of exportation from Germany. Tobacco also is extensively cultivated in many districts, the average production for the past few years having been 800,000 cwt. The culture of the vine is confined almost exclusively to southern and western Germany, and especially to the districts along the Rhine. The total amount of wine produced throughout the empire has been estimated at 1,000,000,000 gallons per annum. Grazing lands in many parts of Germany have reached a high state of cultivation, and the breeding of domestic animals is prosecuted very extensively. The following table will show the result of a live-stock census taken in 1873: Horses, 3,352,231; cattle, 15,776,702; sheep, 24,999,406; hogs, 7,124,088; goats, 2,320,002; total, 53,572,429. In certain parts of Hanover the rearing of bees is also an important branch of industry. The number of bee-hives has been estimated at 2,000,000, and the annual produce of wax and honey at 100,000 cwt.

Trade.—The character of the chief exports and imports of the German empire, together with their relative quantities, can be seen from the following table for 1877:

Names of Articles.	Imports.	Exports.
Animals, except horses, No.	2,443,000	1,848,000
Grain and flour, cwt.	73,070,000	39,600,000
Herrings, bbls	667,000
Coffee, cwt.	1,916,000
Sugar, cwt.	155,000	1,802,000
Wine, cwt.	1,182,000	380,000
Beer, cwt.	300,000	1,280,000
Hops, cwt.	36,000	162,000
Tobacco, cwt.	1,043,000	120,000
Coal, lignite, etc., cwt.	95,000,000	100,184,000
Ores, cwt.	6,855,000	16,140,000
Iron, pig, cwt.	10,536,000	9,119,000
Lead, pig, cwt.	60,000	649,000

Silk, raw cocoons, cwt.	63,000	20,000
Hides, cwt.	857,000	295,000
Guano, cwt.	2,440,000	127,000
Linseed, etc., cwt.	1,116,000	1,354,000
Grease, cwt.	725,000	75,000
Petroleum, cwt.	6,810,000	1,810,000
Wood, { cwt. 36,800,000 pieces 3,800,000		21,400,000
Manufactures of cotton, cwt.	45,000	216,000
Manufactures of silk, cwt.	16,000	33,000
Manufactures of wool, cwt.	114,000	238,000
Yarns, cwt.	892,000	334,000
Leather, cwt.	150,000	166,000
Glass and glass wares, cwt.	150,000	832,000
Metal wares, cwt.	1,121,000	2,530,000
Machinery ex. of boilers, cwt.	729,000	801,000
Rails, cwt.	1,521,000	4,497,000
Musical instruments, cwt.	10,000	69,100

In the official statistics of the German empire no values are given for the commodities exported. It is therefore impossible to make an absolutely correct estimate; but the average for several years, as stated by Professor Laspeyris, and as given in the Encyclopædia Britannica, places the total value of exports from Germany at £125,200,000 per annum. This is doubtless far too low, as it would compel us to draw a conclusion very unfavorable to the trading balance of Germany, since the value of imports is estimated at £187,100,000 per annum. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, the exports from Germany to the United States amounted in value to $52,211,237, and imports from the United States to $57,062,263, making a total of $109,273,500, or 7.27 per cent. of the entire foreign commerce of the United States during the year stated.

Mineral.—The mineral endowments of Germany are rich, and the value of the productions has increased considerably within the past few years. In the production of coal Germany stands third among the nations, as is shown by the following table, which gives a comparative view of the quantity supplied by the more important coal-producing countries in 1876:

	Tons.		Tons.
Great Britain.	135,612,000	France	16,889,000
United States.	50,000,000	Belgium	14,329,000
Germany	48,296,000	Aus.-Hungary	13,362,000

There are 6 large coal fields, occupying an area of about 3,600 square miles. The most important of these is in the valley of the Ruhr, and so great is the quantity it is estimated to contain, that, at the present rate of 17,500,000 tons raised per annum, its supply would not be exhausted in 2,000 years. The total number of collieries at present is 548. Iron ores are also abundant in Germany, but of late years the production has greatly declined. In 1876 the total number of furnaces was 435, only 225 of which were in blast. The production of salt has advanced greatly within the last 30 years, the number of salt works in 1877-'78 being 77, and producing upwards of 11,000,000 cwt. The amount of silver produced in Germany is larger than in any other European State, and the quantity is steadily increasing. Gold is also found in small quantities. The following annual report for the year 1876 will perhaps give the best idea of the mineral produce of Germany:

Minerals.	Quantities. Metric Tons.*	Value. £
Coal, including lignite.	49,588,050	15,131,000
Iron ore	3,515,020	1,047,850
Zinc ore	503,360	650,340
Lead ore	12,060	1,019,300
Copper ore	30,450	350,250
Silver and gold ore	2,311	219,150
Tin ore	185	6,380
Cobalt ore	313	10,000
Nickel ore	1,222	5,780
Antimony ore	43	580
Arsenic ore	1,670	2,510
Manganese ore	11,651	28,240
Bismuth ore	28	13,650
Uranium ore	9	2,210
Tungsten ore	3	20
Iron pyrites	113,703	107,200
Alum ores	35,320	4,400
Salt	170,150	60,700
Potash, etc.	580,900	234,500
Total about	55,000,000	18,900,000

*In round numbers the metric ton is taken as equivalent to the English ton; but the exact value of the latter is 19.702 cwt. £1 sterling=20.4294 marks. In round numbers £1 is taken as 20 marks; the values given are, therefore, too large by 2.15 per cent.

Subdivisions and Government.—The German empire is composed of 25 sovereign States, besides Alsace-Lorraine, which was ceded by France at the peace concluded May 10th, 1871, and whose government is administered by central authority. The supreme direction of military and political affairs is vested in the king of Prussia, who accordingly bears the title of German emperor. The imperial dignity is hereditary, and follows the law of primogeniture. It is in the name of the confederated States that the emperor exercises imperial power, and he is assisted in his office by a federal council, which represents the governments of these several States of Germany. The legislative functions of the empire are vested in the emperor, the council, 59 in number, and the reichstag or diet, consisting of 397 members elected by universal suffrage for the space of 3 years. The legislative power of the empire takes precedence of that of the separate States in all matters relating to military and naval affairs, to the imperial finances, to German commerce, to posts and telegraphs and railways, in so far as the common defence of the country is affected thereby, to matters pertaining to freedom of migration and the rights of German subjects generally, as well as in all that relates to banking, patents, navigation of rivers and canals, civil and criminal legislation, judicial procedure, sanitary police, and control of the press and of associations. The emperor has the executive power in his own hands. He represents the empire internationally, can declare defensive war, make peace as well as enter into treaties with other nations, and also appoint and receive ambassadors. The consent of the federal council must be obtained for declaring offensive war, and all laws for the regulation of the empire must, before they become law, receive the votes of the majority of the federal council and of the diet, as well as the sanction of the emperor. Every German at the age of 21 can vote in the popular elections, and is eligible to office after his 25th year.

Religions.—It was during the second century, according to Irenæus, that Christianity spread from Rome into the borders of Germany. We have to-day a relic of the religion of that country prior to this time in our names for the days of the week, being derived mostly from the names of the old heathen divinities. At the beginning of the 16th century Germany was the battle-ground between Luther and the Pope, and became the focus from which the rays of Protestantism have shot forth throughout the globe. To-day about two-thirds of the population belong to what is termed the Evangelical Church, and rather more than a third to the Church of Rome. No very recent official census has indicated the religious creed of the inhabitants throughout the empire, but the following statement is thought to give the proportions approximately correct for the year 1875: Protestants, 26,718,823; Roman Catholics, 15,371,227; Dissenters, 100,608; Jews, 520,575; other creeds, religion not stated, 16,127. In 4 States of Germany, viz: Prussia, Württemberg, Hesse, and Oldenburg, the Protestant element strongly prevails; while 3 States have a decidedly predominant Catholic population, viz: Alsace-Lorraine, Bavaria and Baden. Saxony and 18 minor States have a Catholic population of only from 0.1 to 3.3 per cent. With the exception of some of the larger cities, the geographical limits of the two confessions have been but little altered since the Thirty Years' War, 1618-1648. The adherents of the Protestant faith are divided in most districts into Reformed and Lutheran; but since 1817 this distinction has been ignored in Prussia, and Christians are there known either as Evangelical or Catholic. Aside from the Reformed Church and the Lutherans are also numerous bodies of what are known as Dissenters. Of these the most important are Menonites, Baptists, Irvingites, Herrnhuter (Moravian brethren), Church of England, German Catholics, Freethinkers, and more than 25 sects represented only by from 100 to 500 members. There are 6 archbishoprics of the Roman Catholic Church within the German empire, and 18 bishoprics. The order of the Jesuits is forbidden in Germany. When, in 1871, the Vatican council proclaimed as a dogma the infallibility of the pope, more than 50,000 seceded from the Roman Church, and are now known as Old Catholics. There were also in 1871 about 2,660 Greek Catholics in Germany. In the larger towns, such as Berlin, Hamburg, Frankfurt, Breslau and Fürth, the Jewish element is becoming increasingly numerous, and throughout the empire they exert a powerful influence because of their great wealth, and also from the fact that the press is for the most part in their hands. It is this superiority of the Jew which has made him the object of envy and the most bitter hatred, and has given rise during the present winter (1880-'81) to that relic of the dark ages—the persecution of the Jews in Germany.

Army and Navy.—According to the constitution of April 16th, 1871 (article 57), every German is liable to service in the standing army, and no substitute is allowed. Every male capable of bearing arms is obliged to serve for 12 years usually from the time he is 21 years of age. Three of these years are spent in active service, 4 in reserve, and the remaining 5 in that part of the army called the landwehr or militia. When the country is threatened by a hostile invasion, all men capable of bearing arms between the ages of 17 and 42 are liable to service. The strength of the army in peace was fixed by the army bill of 1874 at 401,659 for a term of 7 years ending December 31st, 1881. It is estimated that Germany at any time may put in arms 2,500,000 armed men. In the late war with France the maximum strength of the army was 1,350,787 men and 263,753 horses. The German empire is at present divided into 9 fortress districts, and possesses 16 fortified places of the first class serving as camps, beside 27 other fortresses. The whole fortress system has been greatly remodelled and improved since the Franco-German war. Until recent years the German navy has been rather insignificant owing to the difficulties arising from the lack of good harbors. A small extent of territory was purchased from Oldenburg in 1854 and a war port established near Jade bay; but by the annexation of Holstein to Prussia in 1864, the excellent port of Kiel was obtained and has since been strongly fortified, thus furnishing an excellent harbor for her greatly increased navy. There were connected with the navy, in 1878, 70 ships bearing 399 guns and having a tonnage of 91,500. The personnel consisted of 965 officers and 9,265 men, besides about 8,000 seamen.

Railways, Canals and Telegraphs.—The first railway in Germany was constructed in 1835, but for 30 years the development of the system was slow. With the year 1865 a new period began in the construction of railways, and from 1865 to 1878 the annual average was 1,080 miles, so that Germany now has a greater length of railways than any other European nation. In January, 1878, Germany owned 18,830 miles, Great Britain and Ireland 17,092, and France 14,785. Belgium, Great Britain and Switzerland, however, are in advance of Germany as regards proportion to the area and population. In 1876 the amount of capital invested in railways throughout Germany was estimated at £373,558,000. For a few years past the government has been buying up many private lines in order to establish a preponderating influence over all the German railways. Compared with other nations in Europe, Germany can not be said to be very rich in canal systems. Although there are 70 different canals, their total length is only 1,250 miles. The greatest number is in the neighborhood of Berlin; but those of greatest importance, perhaps, are in Alsace-Lorraine, connecting the Rhine with the Rhone and the Marne, and the one extending from Bamberg on the Main to Kilheim on the Danube, thus uniting the German ocean with the Black Sea. The telegraphic system in Germany is for the most part under the control of the government, and great sums are spent annually in its further development. Since 1876 Berlin has been brought into communication with many important localities by subterranean wires. The number of offices in 1877 was 7,251, the length of wire 121,810 miles, and the number of messages sent 14,197,000.

Education.—Germany may well be proud of her educational system, and the rank to which she has attained in intellectual culture. School instruction is obligatory upon the whole people. There are no exact statistics of the educational establishments; but the number of primary schools is estimated at 60,000, and the number of pupils at 6,500,000. A good criterion of the school instruction can be seen in the fact, that in 1878 the number of recruits to the army who could not read and write were only at the rate of 173 in every 10,000. Great attention is being paid to the improvement of primary schools at present, and far better inducements are offered to teachers than in former years. For the higher branches of education there are 4 different kinds of schools, as follows: 360 gymnasia, 90 progymnasia, 129 realschulen, besides a considerable number of technical schools. The number of universities, the dates of their foundations, together with the number of professors and students in each during the summer session of 1878 can be seen from the following table:

UNIVERSITIES.	Date of Foundation.	No. of Professors.	No. of Students.
Berlin, Prussia.....	1810	215	4,331
Leipzig, Saxony.....	1409	160	2,948

All of these universities have 4 faculties except Münster, which has none for law and medicine. Freiburg, Munich, Münster and Würzburg have only a Catholic faculty in theology; Bonn, Breslau and Tubingen have both a Protestant and a Catholic faculty, while all the rest are Protestant. Throughout the empire public libraries are scattered as a means for the general diffusion of knowledge. The most celebrated are the ones at Berlin and Munich, the former containing 800,000 volumes and the latter 800,000 volumes and 22,000 manuscripts. In nearly every place of any importance there is ample provision made for scientific collections of all kinds, and there are numerous societies and unions of a strictly scientific character. During recent years the number of observatories has been greatly augmented, and there are at present 22 in the empire.

Revenues.—In the budget of the empire for 1879-1880 the sum of 419,022,949 mark or £20,951,147 was placed under the head of ordinary, and that of 121,998,588 mark or £6,099,929 of extraordinary disbursements. The estimated total ordinary or "continual" expenditure for the financial year ending March 31st, 1880, was distributed as follows:

	Mark.
Imperial chancery and treasury.....	51,877,791
Reichstag.....	351,580
Foreign department.....	6,335,925
Imperial army.....	321,184,910

Total extraordinary expenditure..... 121,998,588
 Ordinary expenditure..... 419,022,949

Total expenditure } £541,021,537
 £27,051,076

The estimated receipts for the financial year ending March 31, 1880, embraced the following branches of imperial revenue:

	Mark.
Customs and excise duties.....	251,698,360
Profits of post and telegraphs.....	15,622,958
Stamp duties.....	7,793,300
State railways.....	9,910,000
Interest of the invalid fund of the empire.....	33,015,879
Surplus of former years.....	1,130,000
Imperial bank.....	2,105,000
Interest of imperial funds.....	6,270,172
Miscellaneous receipts, (extraordinary supply).....	112,879,478

Total direct revenue..... 449,425,147
 Contribution of States to imperial revenue..... 99,371,399

Total revenue to cover expenditure } £539,796,557
 £26,539,826

The contribution of the principal States of the empire to the revenue for the year 1879-'80 was calculated as follows:

Prussia	44,799,312 mark.
Bavaria	19,015,557 "
Württemberg	6,777,330 "
Baden	4,804,561 "
Saxony	4,739,618 "
Reichsland Alsace-Lorraine	3,425,579 "

Public Debts.—The entire debt of all the German States, including the imperial debt, was estimated January 1, 1878, to be about £80,000,000, or an average of less than £2 per head, whereas in Great Britain it is £23 or £24 per head. This is exclusive of the railway debt, which alone amounts to £140,000,000. The debts contracted for the war with France have long since been paid off, and for several years the extraordinary expenditure of the empire has been paid out of the French indemnity, but that resource is now exhausted.

Dr. Johnson, in a bantering paper on the art of advertising, published in the Idler, No. 40, observes: "The man who first took advantage of the general curiosity that was excited by a siege or battle to betray the readers of news into the knowledge of the shop where the best puffs and powder were to be sold, was undoubtedly a man of great sagacity, and profound skill in the nature of man. But when he had once shown the way, it was easy to follow him." The first man who endeavoured to systematically convince the world of the vast uses which might be made of advertising was Sir Roger L'Estrange. That intelligent speculator, in 1663, obtained an appointment to the new office of "Surveyor of the Imprimery and Printing Presses," by which was granted to him the sole privilege of writing, printing, and publishing all narratives, advertisements, mercuries, &c., &c., besides all briefs for collections, playbills, quack-slavers' bills, tickets, &c., &c.

An advertisement from Mr. William Lilly, an astrologer of London, in the Perfect Diurnal of April 9-16, 1655.

Whereas there are several flying reports, and many false and scandalous speeches in the mouth of many people in this City, tending unto this effect, viz.: That I, William Lilly, should predict or say there would be a great Fire in or near the Old Exchange, and another in St. John's Street, and another in the Strand near Temple Bar, and in several other parts of the City. These are to certify the whole City that I protest before Almighty God, that I never wrote any such thing, I never spoke any such word, or ever thought of any such thing, or any or all of those particular Places or Streets, or any other parts. These untruths are forged by ungodly men and women to disturb the quiet people of this City, to amaze the Nation, and to cast aspersions and scandals on me: God defend this City and all her inhabitants, not only from Fire, but from the Plague, Pestilence, or Famine, or any other accident or mortality that may be prejudicial unto her greatnesse.

Its Magnitude.—Before proceeding to give with some detail the characteristics of the several parts of the British Empire, we wish to present our readers with a general view of the magnitude and extent of this vast dominion and of the relation of the subordinate divisions to the home government. We can do this most concisely and most effectively in the form of tables, premising this general statement, that one-seventh of the land surface and nearly one-fourth of the population of the globe are dependent upon Great Britain. The total area of these dependencies is 7,647,000 square miles, or above sixty times the area of the United Kingdom, or home government itself. 3,000,000 square miles are in America, 1,000,000 in Africa, 1,000,000 in Asia, 2,500,000 in Australasia. But let us give the area and population of the United Kingdom itself, before treating of the dependencies:

Population and Government.—Our next table will give the population and form of government of these dependencies. As to those marked Crown, it is to be understood that the Crown has entire control both of legislation and of public officers; as to those marked Representative Institutions, that the Crown has only a veto on legislation, but the control of public officers is retained; and as to those marked Responsible Government, that the Crown has only a veto on legislation and no control of any public officer, except its own representative. Along with the form of government is given the title of this representative:

ENGLAND.

England, the chief member of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, occupies the southern and greater portion of the island of Great Britain, lying immediately west of the continent of Europe. It is bounded on the north by Scotland, on the east by the North sea, on the south by the English channel (which separates it from France), and on the west by St. George's channel and the Irish sea. The extremes of latitude between which it lies are 49° 57' north and 55° 45' north, and its extremes of longitude from Greenwich are 1° 41' east and 5° 40' west.

Area and Population.—Its area is 50,922 square miles. In 1871 its population was 21,495,131.

Topography and Geography.—England has the general shape of a triangle, but its coast is much broken and abounds in excellent harbors. Its rivers are numerous, many of them ending in broad estuaries navigable by the largest vessels. Its lakes are famed for their beauty, and in summer are favorite resorts. The most mountainous portion lies in the north and northwest, embracing the Pennine chain, whose highest summits are about 3,000 feet, and west of this the Cambrian mountains, presenting as their highest summit the Scafell (3,229 feet). And in the extreme southwestern part is the Devonian range (greatest height, 2,077 ft.) But the southern and greater portion of the country is broken only by ridges and hills, with beautiful valleys between, many of them celebrated as sheep pastures. Further north are vast plains, like that of York, and north of York are the moors of Durham and Northumberland.

Counties and Cities.—England is divided into counties, its counties into hundreds, and the hundreds into parishes. The more important of the counties we shall have occasion to name in connection with the industries of the country. London, with a population in 1871 of 3,254,260, is the chief city of England and the capital of the United Kingdom. Other leading cities had a population the same year as follows: Liverpool, 493,405; Manchester, 351,189; Birmingham, 343,787; Leeds, 259,212; Sheffield, 239,946; Bristol, 182,552; Bradford, 145,830; Newcastle-on-

Tyne, 128,443; Salford, 124,801; Hull, 121,892; and Portsmouth, 113,569.

Climate.—Considering the fact that England lies wholly north of the northernmost parallel of latitude of the United States, its winters are not as severe as might be expected, the mean temperature at London of the two coldest months, December and January, being 39.7°. Nor is the heat of summer extreme. The mean temperature for the year at Greenwich is 49°. The climate is prevailingly moist, yet the average rainfall is less than in the northern parts of the United States. The atmosphere is chilly.

Flora and Fauna.—As to wild animals, the stag, fallow deer and roe exist now only by virtue of strict game laws. Other wild quadrupeds are the fox, badger, polecat, beech and pine martens, otter, weasel, stoat, hedgehog, mole, squirrel, hare, rabbit, dormouse, lemming, shrew, and varieties of rat and mouse. Of land and water birds there are more than 270 species. England, though having few large forests, is yet well-wooded with oak, ash, mountain ash, fir, beech, sycamore, maple, poplar, elm, larch, pine, chestnut, horse chestnut, and willow. Native fruits are such as the pear, crab, medlar, wild cherry, bullace, raspberry, blackberry, gooseberry, currant, strawberry and cranberry. Foreign fruits not requiring a powerful sun also thrive. Of small plants, besides the common grasses, are the daisy, primrose, cowslip, violet, hyacinth, harebell, tamarisk, musk, gentian, foxglove, henbane, hemlock and nightshade.

Agricultural.—The soil is characterized by great fertility, seven-ninths being available for cultivation. The chief crops raised are wheat, oats, barley, rye, beans, hops, flax, potatoes, turnips and clover. Agricultural improvements are adopted as they come out, the best systems of drainage prevail, and artificial manuring is extensively used. England is famous for its cattle-raising, and more than half the arable land is devoted to grazing, the best pastures being in Buckinghamshire, Kent, Middlesex, and the western and midland counties, where, and in York and Suffolk, are raised excellent dray, farm, carriage and race-horses; in Lancashire, long-horned cattle, and in Northumberland, Durham, Devonshire, Herefordshire and Sussex, short-horned cattle. Also sheep valued for quality of flesh and quality of wool, and swine. Several counties are celebrated for their cheese, and others for their butter.

Trade.—The six chief articles of export from the United Kingdom are: 1. Cotton manufactures; 2. Woolen and worsted manufactures; 3. Iron and steel; 4. Coals, cinders and fuel; 5. Machinery; and 6. Linen manufactures. The six chief articles of import into the United Kingdom are: 1. Corn and flour; 2. Cotton, raw; 3. Wool, sheep and other; 4. Sugar, raw and refined; 5. Wood and timber; and 6. Tea. The gross total value of exports to all nations in 1879 was £248,783,364; the gross total value of imports from all nations in 1879 was £362,991,875. The value of the exports to the United States for the fiscal year 1879-80 was $210,613,694; the value of the imports from the United States for the fiscal year 1879-80 was $453,796,497. The total trade of the United States with Great Britain for 1879-80 amounted to $664,410,191, being 44.19 per cent. of the entire foreign commerce of the United States during the year stated.

Minerals of England.—The best idea of the importance of the mineral productions may, perhaps, be given by figures. Although the published tables apply to the whole kingdom, yet the amount of production in Scotland, Ireland and Wales is small compared with that in England. In 1876 the United Kingdom produced 16,841,583 tons of iron ore, of the value of £6,825,705. From this ore was made 6,555,997 tons of pig iron, of the value of £16,062,192. In 1876 were also produced 133,344,766 tons of coal, valued at £46,670,668; 13,688 tons of tin, value, £600,923; of copper, 79,252 tons, value, £317,186; of zinc, 23,613 tons, value, £90,142; of lead, 79,096 tons, value, £1,218,078; of iron pyrites, or sulphur ores, 48,809 tons, value, £43,870; gold to the value of £1,138; silver to the value of £106,262; of white and rock salt, 2,273,256 tons, value, £1,136,628; and sundry minerals, including china stone, to the value of £13,750. By far the most valuable mineral production is coal, and of the 14 fields into which the kingdom is divided, Yorkshire contains 423 pits; Staffordshire and Worcestershire, 422 pits; Lancashire, 376 pits; Durham and Northumberland, 304 pits; Derbyshire, Nottinghamshire, Leicestershire and Warwickshire, 187 pits; Gloucestershire and Somerset, 101 pits; Scotland, 420 pits; South Wales, 299 pits; and Ireland a comparatively large number of pits, but a small output, amounting, in 1876, to only 125,195 tons. The active development of the coal fields of Great Britain is shown in the fact that while they cover only 9,000 square miles as against 29,485 square miles in the United States, yet in 1876 Great Britain produced over 133,000,000 tons as against less than 50,000,000 tons in the United States.

Fisheries.—There are about 170 species of fish frequenting the coasts, rivers and lakes of England, including the herring, pilchard, mackerel, sprat, cod, and salmon; and sea fisheries of cod, mackerel, oysters and lobsters. Her fisheries are of very little importance to commerce compared with other industries.

Government.—The government of England, though usually called a limited monarchy, is more truthfully described as a constitutional republic. The power of the crown is altogether nominal, bearing no comparison with that of the President of the United States. The actual ruler of England is the House of Commons. The ministry is virtually only a committee of that body, and stands or falls, according as it is supported or not by a majority of the House. The ministry is the responsible executive power in the government. It is now literally true that "the King can do no wrong," for he has not power to do anything apart from his cabinet of ministers. He is said to be head of the Church, but he cannot even become personally converted to Catholicism without forfeiting his crown, and much less can he change the State religion. The legislative power of England is vested in Parliament, which is composed of two bodies, the House of Lords and the House of Commons. In 1877 the House of Lords consisted of 503 members, including 16 Scotch and 28 Irish. Any native of the United Kingdom of the age of 21 may be elected a member of Parliament, excepting judges, the clergy, government contractors, sheriffs and returning officers. Those thus excepted are not allowed to vote. There is a property qualification annexed to suffrage. Any member of the House of Commons accepting an office of profit from the crown loses his seat; but if the office accepted was not created subsequently to 1705 he may be re-elected to his seat and thus hold both. In 1877 the House of Commons numbered 650 members, of whom England and Wales sent 485, Scotland 60, and Ireland 105. Parliament is politically omnipotent over the United Kingdom and its colonies. Its authority extends to all matters ecclesiastical, temporal, civil and military. It is also the court of last resort.

Religions.—England has an established State Church of the Episcopal denomination. Nevertheless there is complete toleration for all other religious sects, of which there are, all told, 121. The Queen is legal head of the Church, possessing the right of nomination to the higher church vacancies, of summoning church councils, and of vetoing or sanctioning the resolutions of such councils. It is estimated that in 1877 the Established Church had 13,500,000 members, and of other creeds there were 11,000,000 adherents. There are 1,000,000 Roman Catholics in England, and over 50,000 Jews. The Methodists have above 9,000 places of worship, the Congregationalists 3,500, and the Baptists 2,000.

Army and Navy.—The maintenance and general control of the army vests in Parliament. The total standing force of the United Kingdom during the year 1877-78 was 133,720 men of all ranks. In India the same year was also stationed a British army of 62,652. In addition to the standing army, provision was made for a militia of 139,331 men and a volunteer corps of 174,241 men. The total net cost of the British army for 1877-78 was £13,935,200. The navy during the same year comprised 60,000 men and 240 ships in commission, maintained at the total expenditure of £10,979,829.

Railways.—From the opening of the first railway in 1825 till the end of 1850, a period of a quarter of a century, 6,621 miles of lines were constructed in the United Kingdom, being at the rate of 265 miles per annum. At the close of 1860 the length of lines opened for traffic was 10,443, showing an increase of construction at the rate of 381 miles per annum. At the end of 1879 there were 17,666 miles open for traffic, the increase presenting an average of 402 miles per annum of the total length. Of the total length of lines open at the end of 1879 there belonged to England and Wales 12,547 miles, to Scotland 2,864 miles, and to Ireland 2,285. The following table gives the length of lines open, the capital paid up, the number of passengers conveyed, and the traffic receipts of all the railways of the United Kingdom in each of the 10 years from 1870 to 1879 (inclusive):

YEARS.	Length of lines open at the end of each year	Total capital paid up (shares and loans) at the end of each year.	Number of passengers conveyed (exclusive of season ticket holders.)		TRAFFIC RECEIPTS.

To the total capital in 1879 England and Wales contributed £593,155,665, Scotland £90,694,574, and Ireland £33,153,230. In the division of the traffic receipts of 1879 England and Wales took £50,437,796, Scotland £6,384,551, and Ireland £2,572,935. The working expenditure amounted to £32,045,273 on all the railways in 1879, being 55 per cent. of the total traffic receipts. The following tabular statement gives the total length of railways open for traffic in the British empire on the 31st December, 1878:

There were upwards of 5,000 miles of railways in construction within the British empire at the end of 1879.

Mail Service.—The matter transmitted through the mails for domestic delivery during the year last named was as follows: Letters, 1,127,997,500; postal cards, 114,458,400; book packets and circulars, 213,963; newspapers, 130,518,400—making in all 1,586,937,963 pieces, averaging 46 per capita of the population of the kingdom. This was an increase of 3.3 per cent. over the last previous year. On March 31, 1880, there were in the United Kingdom 912 head and 13,300 sub-postoffices, an increase of 331 offices since the last previous report. The letter boxes in streets, roads, etc., at same date, numbered 12,541, making the total number of places at which letters may be posted 26,753, of which 2,012 (1-13 of all) are in London.

Telegraphs.—The general system of telegraphs throughout the United Kingdom is under the control of the post-office department. The total number of messages forwarded during the fiscal year 1879-'80 was 26,547,137, of which 12,170,093 passed through the central telegraph office in London. In the previous year 24,459,775 messages were sent, the increase for 1879-'80 being 2,087,362. About 313½ millions of words of news were delivered to newspapers, clubs, exchanges and news-rooms in the United Kingdom. The total number of post-offices open for the transaction of telegraph business at the end of the year was 3,924, besides 1,407 telegraph offices open at railway stations. On taking control of the telegraphs, ten years ago, the post-office department commenced with 5,651 miles of line, embracing 48,990 miles of wire, and these numbers have been increased to 23,156 miles of line, with 100,851 miles of wire. The total length of submarine cable connecting different parts of the kingdom in 1869 was 139 miles. Last year it was 707 miles. In the larger cities of the kingdom the department has pneumatic tubes to facilitate the transmission of messages. Of these there are in London 37,144 yards of tube, in Manchester 2,026, in Birmingham 915, in Liverpool 3,021, in Glasgow 2,352, in Dublin 2,700, and in Newcastle 460 yards; total, 48,620 yards, or nearly 30 miles.

Postal Savings Banks.—Since the year 1861 the British government has maintained with signal success a system of post-office savings banks, the total number of such banks at the close of the year 1879 being 6,016, with an aggregate deposit of £9,897,109 (about $49,435,000), coming from 1,988,477 depositors. The amount of interest accrued and paid to depositors from the beginning of the system to the close of the year 1879 was £743,636 (about $3,718,180). The total amount of deposits, including accrued interest, from the opening of the post-office savings banks, September 16, 1861, to December 31, 1879, was £121,643,88 (about $608,215,000). The rate of interest allowed upon deposits is 2½ per cent. per annum. The system is steadily growing in popularity and usefulness.

Education.—As to popular education, Parliament in 1870 invested school boards with the power of compelling parents to give all children between the ages of 5 and 13 the advantages of education. Parents too poor to pay tuition may send their children to certain schools established in every district for children for whose education suitable provision is not otherwise made. The parliamentary grant to primary schools in Great Britain in 1877 was £2,127,730. Of the higher institutions of learning, many have a world-wide fame, as the universities of Oxford and Cambridge, University and King's colleges at London, and the preparatory schools at Eton, Rugby and Harrow. The principal cities possess galleries of art, museums and fine libraries. The British museum in London is the finest in the world.

Revenues.—The gross public revenue of the United Kingdom for the financial year ending March 31, 1877 was £78,565,036, and the gross expenditure for the same year was £78,125,227. The public debt, March 31, 1877, was £775,873,713.

WALES.

Wales, a portion of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, is situated in the western part of the island of Great Britain, and bounded on the north by the Irish Sea, on the east by England, on the south by Bristol Channel, and on the west by St. George's Channel. It extends in north latitude from 51° 45' to 53° 45', and in west longitude (from Greenwich) from 2° 45' to 5° 20'. Its area is 7,377 square miles, and in 1871 it had a population of 1,217,135.

Topography and Geography.—Its greatest north and south length is 136 miles, and its greatest east and west breadth about 90 miles. Its coast line has an extent of 300 miles, and is quite regular. On the western side is the large Cardigan bay. A little to the northwest of Wales, and separated from it by Menai Strait, is the Anglesey island, one of considerable size. The surface of Wales is very mountainous. There are four principal ranges: 1. The Snowdon mountains in the north, attaining a maximum height of 3,590 feet; 2. the Berwyn mountains, reaching an elevation of about 3,000 feet; 3. the Plynlimmon, with a greatest height of 2,481 feet; and, 4. the Black mountains, with 2,862 feet as a maximum. The mountain scenery of Wales possesses rare beauty, and is much visited by tourists. The principal rivers, the Dee, Severn, Wye and Usk, rising and running for awhile in Wales, continue their course in England. There is but one lake of importance, viz: Bala, 4 miles long.

Climate, etc.—The climate of Wales is even and moderate, but exceedingly moist, the average yearly rainfall reaching 45.5 inches. The valleys are fertile, while the mountains are mostly barren, though used for pasturage. Farming is in a backward state. The domestic animals make up in quality for their lack of size. Wales is very rich in minerals, especially coal, iron, tin and copper. Besides these, lead, zinc, manganese and firestone are found; also limestone quarries.

Divisions, etc.—Wales is divided into 12 counties. The principal city is Cardiff, in the southeastern part. Its population in 1871 amounted to 56,911. In its commerce and government, Wales forms a part of England and is treated with it in statistical tables.

Railways, etc.—The principal towns of Wales are connected by railway, the leading lines being the Gloucester and Haverford West, running through the southern counties, and the Chester and Holyhead on the northern shore. Both lines connect with the London railways. There are several canals, connecting rivers and towns. The education of the people is inferior, compared with Scotland and England. There are 9 colleges. The people are mostly Dissenting Protestants in religion. Bodies are found of Calvinistic Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians and Mormons.

SCOTLAND.

Scotland, one of three members of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, comprises the northern part of the island of Great Britain, and also certain adjoining groups of islands. The North Sea bounds it on the north and east, England and the Irish Sea on the south, and the Atlantic Ocean on the west. The mainland extends in north latitude from 54° 38' to 58° 40', and in west longitude from 1° 45' to 6° 15'. The islands extend as far north as 60° 50', and as far west as 8° 35'. The country, including its 186 islands, has an area of 30,688 square miles, and in 1871 had a population of 3,360,018, or about 109 inhabitants to the square mile.

Topography and Geography.—The greatest north and south length of the mainland of Scotland is about 280 miles, and its greatest east and west breadth is about 170 miles. Its sea coast is so extremely irregular as to give it an extent of 3,000 miles. It is geographically divided by the Grampian mountains into the highlands of the north and the lowlands of the south, the two portions not being very far from equal. But mountains are found in almost every part of Scotland, and are usually classed under 5 principal chains, all running generally from northeast to southwest. These chains are: 1. The northern highlands, whose highest peak is Ben Attow, 3,998 feet; 2. the Grampian mountains, whose highest summit is Ben MacDhui, 4,296 feet; 3. the Ochil and Sidlaw range, with King's Seat, 1,149 feet, as its highest peak; 4. the Lammermoor and Pentland range, the highest elevation being Tinto Hill, 2,308 feet; and, 5. the Cheviot and Lowther range, whose highest summit is Broadlaw, 2,741 feet. The rivers of Scotland, comprised in 9 basins, flow, for the most part, into the North Sea, and are not naturally navigable for any considerable distance. The Clyde, however, has been artificially deepened as far as Glasgow. Among the chief rivers are Tay, Clyde, Forth, Tweed, South Esk and Dee. Scotland's lakes (or lochs) are famous, and, taken with the mountain scenery which mostly surrounds them, are of surpassing beauty.

Climate.—In spite of its high northern latitude, which places it on a level with the upper portion of Labrador, the mean annual temperature of Scotland is 47°. Its winds blow mostly from the west, and the yearly rainfall ranges from 24 inches in some parts to, as high as 100 inches in places among the mountains.

Flora and Fauna.—There are 1,200 flowering plants and ferns in Scotland. Of native land quadrupeds, there are 37 species, including red, fallow and roe deer, the hare, rabbit, fox, badger, otter, wildcat, weasel and hedgehog. Reptiles are practically unknown, but birds, of both land and water species, are numerous. The golden eagle, pheasant, ptarmigan, blackcock, grouse and partridge may be mentioned as among the most abundant.

Subdivisions and Cities.—Scotland is divided into counties, 33 in number, which are classed geographically in 8 divisions, and known as the Northern, North-Western, North-Eastern, East-Midland, West-Midland, South-Western, South-Eastern, and Southern counties. In the period from 1801 to 1871 the population had just doubled. Edinburgh, with a population in 1877 of 218,729, is the capital of Scotland. The largest city is Glasgow, on the Clyde, whose population in 1877 was 555,933. The same year Edinburgh had 196,979; Dundee, 142,951; Aberdeen, 98,181; Greenock, 70,192; and Leith, 54,257. It is the tendency of the population to aggregate in towns, and in them more than one-third of the population of Scotland is found.

Agriculture.—Above three-fourths of the surface of Scotland is useless for agricultural purposes, consisting of mountains, morasses and other waste lands. In 1876 only 4,640,803 acres, out of a total of 19,496,132 acres, was under cultivation. The land in 1876 was divided among 132,230 owners, of whom 113,005 owned less than an acre each, and 19,225 owned above an acre each. The soil which is tillable, however, is cultivated with great skill and excellence, in spite of the fact that the climate is somewhat unfavorable. Great attention is given to the raising of sheep. In 1871 there were 174,434 horses (employed in farming); 1,070,107 cattle; 6,882,747 sheep, and 195,642 pigs.

Manufactures.—Linen, woolen, cotton and worsted manufactures are carried on in Scotland. A leading industry is the manufacture of whisky and ale. Ship-building, especially on the Clyde, is extensively engaged in. The leading ship yards are found at Aberdeen, Bauff, Dundee, Glasgow, Greenock and Port Glasgow. In 1874 Scotland had 680 factories, employing 154,919 persons. The imports and exports of Scotland are merged statistically with those of the United Kingdom.

Minerals.—Iron and coal constitute the chief mineral wealth of Scotland. There were 420 coal pits in 1876. Lead and silver are found, and granite is largely quarried and exported.

Fisheries.—The fisheries are a very important industry, the most abundant fish being the salmon, herring, cod and ling. In 1870 the total capital invested in boats, nets and lines in the herring, cod and ling fisheries was £953,814. There were 14,935 boats, with a total tonnage of 103,946, and 89,790 persons were employed.

Government.—Scotland is under the general government of the kingdom of which it forms a part. It sends 16 representative peers to the House of Lords, and furnishes 60 members of the House of Commons. The judicial system differs from that of England in some respects. The jury contains 15 men, of whom unanimity is not required, and who, if in doubt, may bring in a verdict of "not proven." This verdict leaves the defendant still liable.

Religions.—The established church of Scotland is independent of that of England, and is Presbyterian in doctrine. But above one-half the population are Dissenters. The leading dissenting churches are the Free Church and the United Presbyterian Church. Bodies of Baptists, Independents, Methodists, Unitarians and Roman Catholics are found. The Episcopal Church in 1876 numbered 65,000.

Military.—Of the regular army of the United Kingdom, 3,895 men are stationed in Scotland.

Public Works.—Scotland has 7,000 miles of excellent turnpike roads. At the end of 1873 there were 2,612 miles of railway. It has a number of canals, the principal of which is the great Caledonian ship canal, connecting the North Sea with the Atlantic Ocean. Its length is 60½ miles, 37½ miles being formed by lakes and 23 miles by artificial cuts, and its construction cost the government £1,023,628.

Education.—There is every means for the education of the people in Scotland. There are parish, church and private schools in good numbers. In 1876 there were 2,912 primary schools inspected by the government, at which 332,545 children attended on an average. Then there are the universities of Edinburgh, Glasgow, Aberdeen and St. Andrews.

Revenues.—The public revenue of Scotland for the year ending March 31, 1874, was £7,138,543, and the local expenditure of the government was £3,157,542. Its public debt is merged with that of the United Kingdom.

IRELAND.

Ireland, a constituent member of the kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, is an island lying immediately west of England and Scotland, from which countries it is separated by St. George's channel, the Irish sea and North channel. On all other sides it is bounded by the Atlantic ocean. It extends in north latitude from 51° 26' to 55° 21', and in west longitude (from Greenwich) from 5° 20' to 10° 26'. Its area is 31,874 square miles, or 20,322,641 acres. In 1871 its population was 5,411,416, giving a density of population of 169 inhabitants to the square mile. Its population in 1801 was 5,395,456, very nearly the same as that in 1871. The population has been subject to large variations, increasing greatly from 1801 to 1841, but decreasing more rapidly than it had previously increased from 1841 to 1871. In 1871 the number of inhabited houses was 961,229.

Topography and Geography.—Ireland forms a four-sided figure, somewhat like a rhomboid, its greatest diagonal being 300 miles and its lesser 210 miles. It has a coast line of about 700 miles, comparatively regular on the east side, but very largely cut up into narrow strips by arms of the sea on the southwestern, western and northern sides, forming numerous harbors. There are, all told, 90 harbors, 14 admitting ships of any draught, 17 admitting frigates, above 30 admitting coasting vessels, and 25 being suitable for summer roadsteads, besides numerous inlets for fishing craft. The lighthouses number 62, 26 being first class. The surface of Ireland consists of a vast central plain, containing numerous patches of bog and marsh, and, running around this plain, a frame of mixed mountain and highland. This frame is broken only in the vicinity of Dublin on the east side and of Galway on the west. Aside from the black sterile bog-lands, a universal green may be said to cover Ireland. Whatever mountains there are, are not brought together in ranges, but exist more in isolated masses. The highest peaks are found in Kerry, viz: Brandon, 3,120 feet, and Carn Tual, 3,414 feet. Ireland possesses the largest river, the Shannon, and the largest lake, Lough Neagh, to be found in the United Kingdom. The former has a length of 250 miles and the latter a surface of 98,255. The lakes of Ireland, particularly the lakes of Killarney in the southwest, are world-renowned for their beauty. Navigable waters are found in every part of the island.

Climate.—The climate of Ireland is very mild and even. The mean annual temperature at Dublin is about 50°, and between the mean annual temperatures of the extreme north and the extreme south there is only a difference of 3°. The atmosphere is always moist, fostering vegetation. The average yearly rainfall is about 36 inches. The prevailing winds are western and southern.

Flora and Fauna.—As is well known, there are no frogs, toads or serpents in Ireland. Rabbits are numerous, but game, saving deer, is scarce. New species of saxifrage and ferns, rare alpine plants, peculiar kinds of algæ, and the arbutus unedo are found in the flora of Ireland. It is lacking in trees.

Counties and Cities.—Ireland is divided into 4 provinces and 32 counties. The provinces are Ulster in the north and Munster in the south, Leinster in the east and Connaught in the west. Dublin, with a population in 1877 of 314,666, is the capital and largest city of Ireland, situated in Leinster, on the east coast. In 1871, Belfast, in Ulster, had a population of 174,394; the city of Cork, in Munster, a population of 78,382; and the city of Galway, in Connaught, had 13,184 inhabitants. From 1851 to 1876, 2,500,000 of people emigrated from Ireland.

Agriculture.—About one-half the soil of Ireland is poor for agricultural purposes. The remainder consists of a deep, rich loam, with a calcareous subsoil. The mountains may be cultivated to a considerable height, and in summer their summits may be used for pasturage. Farming, for various reasons which it is not necessary to enter into here, but chiefly the lack of fixity in the land tenure, is backward. All the common farm products might be raised to a greater extent than they are. Cattle, horses and sheep are numerous. In 1872 there were 5,846,522 acres of land under cultivation. The live stock consisted of 560,500 horses and mules, 180,036 asses, 4,057,153 cattle, 4,262,117 sheep, 242,310 goats, 1,385,386 pigs, and 11,612,207 poultry.

Trade.—The imports consist chiefly of wheat, corn, flour and tobacco. The exports include marble, porter, ale, whiskey, linen and muslin. It is impossible to give accurate figures as to Irish exports and imports aside from those of the British kingdom as a whole.

Minerals.—Ireland contains an inferior quality of coal, and the quantity produced is small compared with that yielded in other parts of the United Kingdom. The chief mineral wealth of the country is copper ore. Lead is quite abundant, iron is found in the coal-measures, and silver to some extent. Antimony, zinc, nickel, iron pyrites, alum, various kinds of clay, gypsum, ochre, building stone, marble, and paving and roofing slates exist. Also several mineral springs. 2,830,000 acres of bog are available for peat fuel.

Fish.—Among fish, salmon, pike, eel, trout and herring abound. In 1871 there were employed in fisheries 8,999 boats and vessels, and 38,629 men and boys. But in 1846 there were 19,883 boats and vessels and 113,073 persons.

Government.—The government in Ireland is administered by a lord lieutenant and privy council appointed by the Crown. In each county, also, there is a lieutenant with assistants, all appointed by the Crown. The administration of justice is upon the same system as that in England. There are the Queen's bench, common pleas, and exchequer courts, each with four judges, besides the master of the rolls and the lord chancellor. Assizes for criminal and civil pleas are held twice a year in every county. Ireland is represented in the British Parliament by 28 representative peers and 105 members of the House of Commons.

Religions.—There is now no established church in Ireland. In 1871 there were 4,147,933 Roman Catholics, 683,295 Protestant Episcopalians, 558,238 Presbyterians, 41,815 Methodists, 4,485 Independents, 4,643 Baptists, 3,834 Quakers, 258 Jews, and 19,035 of other beliefs.

Army, Railways, etc.—Of the army of the United Kingdom, 22,414 men were stationed in Ireland on January 1, 1876. At the end of 1876 there were in Ireland 2,157 miles of railway. There are 587½ miles of canal, river and lake navigation. The chief canals are Grand canal, 165¾ miles; Royal canal, 96¼ miles, and Ulster canal, 24 miles.

Education, etc.—The leading Irish university is Trinity college, Dublin. Besides this, there are the Queen's colleges of Belfast, Cork and Galway. There are also a number of denominational colleges, the chief institutions for the education of Roman Catholic priests being Maynooth college and All-Hallows college at Drumcondra. A Catholic university has also been established at Drumcondra. In 1872 there were, by virtue of public grants, 7,059 schools in operation, with 1,010,148 pupils enrolled. These pupils were divided as to religious denominations as follows: Roman Catholic, 804,222; Presbyterian, 112,465; and Episcopalian, 80,893. The books used in these national schools are everywhere the same, and the branches taught are wholly secular. There is a national gallery of art at Dublin, and in Dublin, Belfast and elsewhere numerous literary and scientific societies. The chief among these are the Royal Irish Academy, the Royal Hibernian Academy of Art, and the Royal Dublin Society. The local expenditure of the government in Ireland for the year ending March 31, 1874, was £4,615,624. The public revenue and the public debt of Ireland are merged in those of the United Kingdom.

THE KINGDOM OF GREECE.

BY GEO. L. FOX, A.B.

Grecian—Hellada. Danish—Groekenland. French—La Grèce. German—Griechenland. Russian—Gretia. Italian—Grecia. Spanish—Grecia. Portuguese—Grecia. Swedish—Grekland. Chinese and Japanese—Hsi Lieh Kwo. Turkish—Roomistan. Arabic—Room.

Location, etc.—Greece, the most easterly of the three peninsulas of Europe whose shores are washed by the Mediterranean sea, has this sea as its natural boundary on all sides but the north. The northern boundary line, which the European Powers (June, 1881,) are extending farther to the north, runs from the Gulf of Arta on the west to the Gulf of Volo on the east, along the crest of the Othrys mountain range. The Gulfs of Lepanto or Corinth and Ægina on either side of Continental Greece nearly divide it into two parts, Northern Greece and the Morea, which are connected by the isthmus of Corinth ($\frac{3}{4}$ miles wide). The kingdom of Greece also includes the Ionian islands west and the Archipelago east of the main land. The entire area of Greece, including the islands, is 19,353 square miles. The population by the census of June, 1879, was 1,679,775, of whom the males outnumber the females by about 80,000.

Topography, etc.—The most striking topographical features of Greece are the number of mountain ranges, the small areas of level surface, and the wide extent of coast line. Though one-half the size of Portugal, Greece has a coast line greater than that of Spain and Portugal, and the many gulfs, bays and inlets afford a rich supply of good natural harbors. Of the principal subdivisions the most important are Attica and Bœotia in Northern Greece; Argolis and Corinth, Achaia and Elis in the Morea; Eubœa, Corfu and Zante among the islands. The chief cities are Athens, the capital, population 52,000, including the Piræus; Syra in the Cyclades, population 25,000; Patras in Achaia, population 25,000.

Climate, etc.—The climate is subject to extremes of temperature. It is colder in winter and warmer in summer than in other countries of the same latitude. The diversity of the geographical configuration also produces great local contrasts in the climate. One can pass from summer to winter in traveling less than 100 miles. Owing to these same natural conditions, the vegetation of the country is of great variety. Between the elevations of 500 and 5,000 feet above the sea, grow many sub-tropical fruits and trees, the trees and fruits of the temperate zone, and the stunted wild plants of Alpine regions.

Flora and Fauna.—Of trees the pine abounds, and there are also the oak, plane, walnut, chestnut, olive, palm, beech and myrtle. The wild and domestic animals, and the game birds are those usually found in the temperate zone.

Agriculture, though the chief industry, does not flourish. The land is moderately fertile, but mountains and marshes occupy one-half the total area, and only one-sixth of it is under cultivation. The ground is chiefly in the hands of a few proprietors. Much of it is owned by the State, which rents it to peasants. The relation between landlord and tenant is the metayer system of taking as rent a share of the net produce, usually a third, but in the case of government land 15 per cent. There are no modern implements generally used in cultivating, no deep soil ploughing, no rotation of crops, no husbanding of manure, no care for drainage. For fully developing her agricultural resources, Greece needs capital, the best methods and implements of cultivation, ownership by resident tillers of the soil, good roads, and extensive works for irrigation and drainage. The currant is the peculiar product and largest article of export of Greece. It goes chiefly to England. The acreage under cereal crops, wheat, barley, corn, steadily increases. Poor wine from many vineyards is sold chiefly to Russians. Olive and mulberry groves yield a rich product in olive oil and silk-worms. There are increasing crops of cotton and tobacco, comparatively new articles of production for Greece. Besides the currant, the chief exports of Greece are lead, figs, valonia, emery powder, olive oil, tobacco, wine, and sub-tropical fruits. One-half of the imports are cotton and woolen goods, and cereals with flour. She imports besides cattle, rice, coal, iron and paper.

Trade.—The total average value of her annual exports during the years from 1873 to 1877 was nearly $15,000,000. More than half is sent to England. The value of her yearly imports during the same time averaged about $22,000,000. The value of her exports to the United States during 1879 was $546,184. The value of her imports from this country during the same year was $151,079.

Minerals.—Deposits of gold, copper, lead, silver, coal, sulphur, magnesia and emery are found, and extensive quarries of marble. Only the marble quarries and the lead and emery mines are actively worked.

Government.—The kingdom of Greece is an hereditary constitutional monarchy, descending by primogeniture from male to male, female succession being only allowed in the case of absolute failure of legitimate heirs male. The king must belong to the Greek Orthodox Church, but the present sovereign, George I., made king in 1863, is permitted to remain a member of the Lutheran Church. The present constitution, adopted in 1864, vests the legislative power in the Boulé, a single house of representatives, elected by manhood suffrage for 4 years. If not called together earlier for special reasons, it must meet on the 1st of November (old style) each year. The executive is vested in the king and his ministry, who are chosen by himself but are responsible to the legislature. Like the English ministry, the ministers take part in the legislative deliberations, and go out of office when unable to command a majority vote in the Boulé. The chief administrative departments are the same as in most constitutional monarchies. Under the present king, ministerial changes have averaged two or three a year, and many of the 18,860 public officers change with every new administration. Consequently office-seekers abound and Greece badly needs civil-service reform. For local government, there are 13 nomarchies, officered by nomarchs, who are appointed from Athens. The nomarchies are divided into 59 eparchies, under eparchs appointed in the same way, and the eparchies into 350 demarchies, under demarchs or mayors elected for 4 years by the people.

Religions.—The religion of the great mass of the people and of the State is that of the Orthodox Greek Church, but there is entire freedom of worship in Greece. Religious belief entails no civil disabilities of any kind. The Greek Church alone receives support from the State.

Education.—Greece nominally does much for the education of the masses, but the practical results are not gratifying. The law requires compulsory education of children from 7 to 12 years of age, for whom communal schools with instruction in the "three R's" are provided. Above these there are two grades of schools before reaching the University of Athens which has 1,400 students, excellent museums, laboratories, a library of 150,000 volumes, hospitals and all the adjuncts of a great university.

Army and Navy.—The army of the kingdom on a peace footing numbers 2,730 officers, commissioned and non-commissioned, and 10,820 rank and file. The present military law imposes universal liability to arms on all able-bodied males, aged 21 years or upwards. The navy of 10 vessels is manned by conscription from the inhabitants of the sea coast.

Railways, etc.—The only railway in Greece is from Athens to Piræus, its seaport, is 7½ miles long, belongs to the government, and carries passengers only. The 1,605 miles of telegraph is owned by the government also and worked at a loss. Greece is heavily in debt. The total indebtedness according to the budget of 1877 was, in rough figures, $76,800,000. The total revenue for the year 1877 was nearly $7,000,000, and the expenditures in excess of that amount. Greece belongs to the Latin monetary league, and the coins of the league are legal tender in the country. The drachma, divided into 100 leptas is the unit, corresponding nearly to the franc, worth in United States money $0.193. The system of weights and measures is the Turkish. In measures of length the pique=27 inches; the royal pit=1 metre or 3.2808 feet; the stadion=10.62 English miles. In square measure, the stremma=¼ acre, and the hectare=10 stremmas. The standard of weight, the cantar=123 pounds, avoirdupois, is divided into 44 okes, and subdivided into 400 old and 1,280 royal drams.

That Excellent, and by all Physicians, approved, China drink, called by the Chineans Tcha, by other nations Tay alias Tee, is sold at the Sultanness Head Cophce-House, in Sweeting's Rents, by the Royal Exchange, London.—Advertisement in Mercurius Politicus of September 30, 1658.

An advertisement in Mercurius Politicus, in November, 1660, reads as follows:

Gentlemen, you are desired to take notice, That Mr Theophilus Buckworth doth at his house on Mile-end Green make and expose to sale, for the publick good, those so famous Lozenges or Pectorals, approved for the cure of Consumption, Coughs, Catarrhs, Asthmas, Hoarseness, Strongness of Breath, Colds in general, Diseases incident to the Lungs, and a sovereign Antidote against the Plague, and all other contagious Diseases, and obstructions of the Stomach: And for more convenience of the people, constantly leaveth them sealed up with his coat of arms on the papers, with Mr Rich. Lowndes (as formerly), at the sign of the White Lion, near the little north door of Pauls Church; Mr Henry Seile, over against S. Dunstan's Church in Fleet Street; Mr William Milward, at Westminster Hall Gate; Mr John Place, at Furnivals Inn Gate in Holburn; and Mr Robert Horn, at the Turk's Head near the entrance of the Royal Exchange, Booksellers, and no others.

This is published to prevent the designs of divers Pretenders, who counterfeit the said Lozenges, to the disparagement of the said Gentleman, and great abuse of the people.

ICELAND.

BY W. E. HOUPPT.

Icelandic—Ísland; or, Ísland. Danish—Island. French—Islande. German—Island. Russian—Islandia. Italian—Islanda. Spanish—Islanda. Portuguese—Islanda. Swedish—Island. Turkish—Islanda.

Location, Size, etc.—Iceland is situated between $63^{\circ} 24'$ and $66^{\circ} 33'$ north latitude, and $13^{\circ} 31'$ and $24^{\circ} 17'$ west longitude. It is 160 miles east of Greenland and 600 miles west of Norway. During the spring $\frac{2}{3}$ of its coast is blocked with ice. It is about 325 miles long, 200 miles wide, and contains 39,758 square miles, of which 16,243 are habitable. Population in 1876, 71,300. Its southern coast is but little broken, but the other portions are deeply indented with bays and fiords, which extend far inland between high mountains. The best harbors are Reykiavik, in the southwest; Akureyri, Hafnar fiord, Vopnar fiord. Its chief mountains are in the south, yet in the north are lofty ranges, among which are extinct volcanoes. The central portion is an immense table land 2,000 feet above the sea—a vast wilderness of lava and rocks. The mountains are bare; the valleys are morasses, while the lowlands afford excellent pasture. Only a few dales along the coast are habitable. The chief settlements are in the north. There are neither roads nor vehicles. Transportation is done on horseback. The chief natural curiosities are the Geysers in the southwest. There are four divisions—North, South, East, West. The capital is Reykiavik, whose population is 1,400. The average temperature in the north is 32° , while that of the south is 39° . The difference is caused by the Gulf Stream, which strikes the southern coast. Much rain falls in the south, but in the north it is dry. The seasons are such that no cereals can ripen. It is almost treeless, there being but a few shrubs.

Animals, etc.—The chief wild animals are foxes, reindeer and bears. No reptiles are found. Domestic animals constitute the chief wealth. Birdswarm everywhere, among which are the eider duck and ptarmigan. Agriculture is in a very low state, and is unskillfully carried on. Hay is the chief crop. A species of wild corn grows on the coast. Potatoes, cabbage, radishes, etc., are cultivated in small quantities. Iceland moss is a valuable product.

Trade.—Exports are fish, liver oil, salt meat, sheepskins, wool, mittens and horses. Imports are cereals, coffee, sugar, spirits, snuff and tobacco. The value of exports is estimated at £900,000 per annum.

Minerals, etc.—Mineral deposits are rich, but undeveloped. Plumbago, sulphur, iron, and a ridge of pure obsidian have been discovered. Feldspar, amethysts, topaz, opal and zeolites are also found. The fisheries are rich and form the chief occupation. Seals breed in great numbers. Whales are abundant in the spring. The fresh-water fishes are cod, herring, haddock, halibut, trout and salmon. Shell fish, especially muscles, are very abundant. It is nominally subject to Denmark. Its legislative body is the Athling, composed of 36 members, 6 of whom are chosen by the King, the rest by the people. The King has an absolute veto. The province is governed directly by a governor appointed by the King. There are 20 judicial districts, and a court of appeal at Reykiavik. Religious toleration exists, but Lutheran is the established church. Scarcely a person can be found unable to read and write. Schools are few, but children are taught by their parents. There is a college at Reykiavik, with a classical, scientific course; also a school of theology and one of medicine. No direct commerce exists between the United States and Iceland, nor are there any representatives of the former government within the latter.

For map and list of newspapers, see other departments of this work.

One Eleanor Parker (by birth Haddock), of a Tawny reddish complexion, a pretty long nose, tall of stature, servant to Mr. Ferdrie Houpert, Kentish Town, upon Saturday last, the 26th of June, ran away and stole two Silver Spoons; a sweet Tent-work Bag, with gold and silver Lace about it, and lined with Satin; a Bugle work-Cushion, very curiously wrought in all manners of slips and flowers; a Shell cup, with a Lyon's face, and a Ring of silver in its mouth; besides many other things of considerable value, which she took out of her Mistresses Cabinet, which she broke open; as also some Cloaths and Linen of all sorts, to the value of Ten pounds and upwards. If any one do meet with her and please to secure her, and give notice to the said Ferdrie Houpert, or else to Mr. Malpass, Leather seller, at the Green Dragon, at the upper end of Lawrence Lane, he shall be thankfully rewarded for his pains.—Advertisement from the Mercurius Politicus of July, 1658.

THE KINGDOM OF ITALY.

BY JAMES Q. RICE.

Italian—Itàlia. Danish—Italien. French—Italie. German—Italien. Russian—Italia. Spanish and Portuguese—Italia. Swedish—Italien. Chinese and Japanese—Ita Ta⁴ Li⁴ Kwo. Turkish—Italia.

Position.—Italy is the central of the three great peninsulas of Southern Europe, and the kingdom comprises not only the Italian peninsula, but also the Islands of Sicily and Sardinia. The peninsula projects into the Mediterranean between the Tyrrhene and Adriatic seas, lying nearly northeast and southwest, and is joined to the continent by the basin of the Po. It is between latitude 36° 40' and 46° 37' north, and longitude 6° 38' and 18° 32' east. The kingdom covers an area of 114,415 square miles, the length being 831 miles and the average breadth about 138 miles. The population by the official calculation for 1878 was 28,209,620.

Topography.—The shore of the Gulf of Genoa is lofty and precipitous until the neighborhood of the river Arno is reached. Thence to the mouth of the Tiber the coast is occasionally bold, but for the most part is low and swampy, and these characteristics continue until the Neapolitan coast of the Tyrrhene Sea is reached. This is to a great degree bold and rocky. That part of the coast washed by the Ionian Sea from the Straits of Messina to Cape Rizzuto is faced by steep rocks, but further on throughout the peninsula of Otranto it again becomes low and sandy, and at the bottom of the Gulf of Taranto is marshy. From Cape S. Maria di Leuca to Ancona the coast is only broken by the Garganian promontory. Thence northward to Rimini the coast rises gradually only to subside rapidly beyond that city into a series of sandy islands, lagoons and pestilential marshes. The principal harbors on this great extent of sea coast are, on the west, Genoa, Spezia and Leghorn, Civita Vecchia, Gaëta, Naples and Reggio; on the south, Taranto; and on the east, Brindisi, Bari, Ancona, Rimini, Chioggia and Venice. The surface of the peninsula is divided by mountain ranges into a wonderful diversity of sublime mountain scenery, upland valleys, broad plains, pestilential lowlands, and numerous lakes. Between the steep northern wall of the Alps and the ridges of the Apennines, to the west and south, stretches the great Lombard plain, the most fertile region of all Europe, watered by the Po and the Adige, the largest rivers in Italy. The remainder of the peninsula is divided by the Apennines, which run from the southern extremity of this plain to the Straits of Messina. Between the central ridges and the sea shore lie wide bands of marshy country, and several plains, which, though inferior to the great plain of Lombardy in extent and fertility, deserve notice. These are the Campagna di Roma with the Pontine marshes, and the Campagna di Felice, near Naples, lying on the western side of the mountains, and on the eastern, the Apulian plain. The principal mountain chains are the Alps and Apennines, already mentioned, and the Sub-Apennines lying to the west of the principal chain and apparently having no geological connection with it. These, under various names, extend to Mount Vesuvius and terminate opposite the island of Capri. Italy has but two rivers of importance, the Po and the Adige. The former has a length of 400 miles and with its tributaries waters a plain over 300 miles in length and 170 miles in width. The Adige, descending from the Alps, flows through the southern part of the province of Venice and empties into the Adriatic only a short distance from the Po. It is navigable only for a short distance above Verona. The other rivers are for the most part mere mountain torrents, having a short course and no considerable depth. These facts, together with the insufficient tide in the Mediterranean, render them almost useless for purposes of commerce. The most extensive lakes belong to Upper Italy. Lake Maggiore, lying 700 feet above the sea level, is 40 miles long and 2,500 feet deep. It is fed principally by the Ticino. The lake of Como is 35 miles long and of great depth, being fed by the river Adda. Lake Iseo is 15 miles in length, and is chiefly supplied by the Oglio. Besides these there are the lake of Perugia in Umbria, and the lakes of Balsina and Bracciano in the province of Rome, all of which are of importance.

Subdivisions and Cities.—Italy is divided into 16 territorial divisions, viz: Piedmont, Liguria, Lombardy, Venetia, Emilia, Umbria, The Marches, Tuscany, Rome, The Abruzzo and Molise, Campania, Apulia, Basilicata, Calabria, Sicily and Sardinia. The capital is Rome, situated on the Tiber at a short distance from its mouth. It has, according to the official estimate of the population for 1880, 303,383 inhabitants. The other important towns with their population according to the estimate for 1878 are: Naples, 450,804; Milan, 262,283; Palermo, 231,836; Turin, 214,200; Florence, 168,423; Genoa, 163,254; and Venice, 125,276.

Climate.—The local conditions with regard to position, altitude and proximity to the sea have great influence in determining the Italian climate. In general, however, January is the coldest month. In Northern Italy the mean for April is a little above the annual mean, and the mean for October is a little below, while in Southern Italy the reverse is true. The mean annual temperature at Milan is 55.2°; at Rome, 60.5°; at Naples, 59.6°; and at Palermo, 64.1°. The most rainy season is autumn, and especially during October. The driest months are, in winter, January and February, and in summer, July. In the northern regions during October and November heavy rains sometimes fall in the course of a few days, producing disastrous inundations.

Flora.—The vegetation of the country is rich and varied, embracing in the north all the trees and plants of countries of the temperate zones, while in the south all tropical flora abound. The pine, oak, chestnut, olive, fig, lemon, citron and orange flourish in the north, while in the south all the tropical plants, such as dates, sugar cane, pomegranates, aloes and the cotton plant thrive even in unprotected localities.

Agriculture.—There is no part of Italy not possessed of a soil naturally fertile or capable of being made productive by labor or artificial means. The vast plains of Lombardy and Piedmont have a soil equalled in fertility only by the Campagna Felice, and the remainder of the peninsula, being of calcareous and volcanic formation, is everywhere susceptible of cultivation. In many places the Apennines are cultivated to their very summits by means of terraces, and the central valleys yield everywhere abundant harvests or afford rich perennial pasturage. Italy is above all an agricultural country, but her productivity might be greatly increased if the agricultural methods and tools employed were less antiquated and the whole country would keep pace with the progress already made in Piedmont and Lombardy in this direction. The Italian government, however, is now taking an extensive interest in agriculture and is endeavoring to introduce improved methods. All kinds of cereals are grown, but wheat is principally used by the rich as a breadstuff, and maize by the poor. The latter also consume large quantities of pulse and chestnut. The potato is also beginning to be extensively cultivated in Upper Italy, and the most luscious fruits ripen everywhere spontaneously. Sugar cane, cotton, tobacco, hemp, flax, saffron, safflower and olives are especially grown. Silk is a most important product, and the production is valued at $26,000,000 annually. Its importance is constantly increasing with the foreign trade of Italy. The attention of Italian agriculturists has of late been directed to the improved culture of the grape, and large quantities of wine are exported from all parts of the kingdom. The wines of lower Italy are considered equal in body and flavor to the best wines of Spain and Portugal. That produced in the upper part of the country is not as good. About 85 per cent. of the land is productive, and this may again be divided into 48 per cent. of arable and wine lands, 25 per cent. of meadows and pastures, 5 per cent. of olive and chestnut forests, and 22 per cent. of woodland. The average annual yield of the principal products is as follows: Wheat, 106,784,000 of bushels; maize, 49,700,000; rye, 7,952,000; barley and oats, 23,004,000; rice, 4,144,000; chestnuts, 15,336,000; potatoes, 27,224,000; and vegetables, 11,928,000. Also wine, 780,000 gallons; hemp, 50,000 tons; butter and cheese to the value of $15,000,000. Cattle do not abound in Italy. The sheep and goats are reckoned at 12,000,000, the oxen at 3,700,000, the horses and mules at 1,400,000, and the swine at 4,000,000.

Manufactures.—In Northern Italy manufactures have made notable progress in the last 25 years. The great industries are (1) silk, which represents an annual production of $26,000,000 for spun silk alone, independent of tissues, of which velvet, and especially that of Genoa, is important; (2) woolen manufactures, especially in Piedmont and Lombardy, to the amount of $13,200,000 annually; (3) cotton manufactures, which are very flourishing in Liguria, Lombardy, Piedmont, and Forli, producing annually spun cotton to the amount of $7,000,000 and cotton cloth to the amount of $16,000,000. The straw industry is very prosperous in Tuscany. Italy is also distinguished for her artistic and aesthetic productions, such as the filagree of Genoa, the glass and beads of Venice, the coral of Naples and Leghorn, and the wrought marbles of Carrara. Naval construction is a most flourishing industry, especially in Liguria, where traditional skill has been improved by good special schools.

Trade.—The chief articles of export are wine, corals, ores and precious metals, sea salt, oranges, silk, rice, fish, hides, straw goods, sulphur, sumach and almonds. The imports are grain, tobacco, fuel, wool and carving materials, yarns, woven goods and articles of clothing. The total exportation for 1879 amounted to 100,961,109 lire, or $220,192,220. The total imports for the same period amounted to 262,044,668 lire, or $522,403,930. During the year ending June 30, 1880, Italy exported to the United States $10,317,686, and imported from the United States during the same period $12,352,642.

Minerals.—The mineral wealth of Italy has been famed from remote times. In the Col de Tenda are mines of lead and silver, and Piedmont is rich in metals. The rocks on the coast of the Gulf of Genoa are rich in ores of copper, which are not, however, extensively developed. The mountains of Modena are filled to their very summits with ores of iron, lead and silver, and most valuable deposits of copper. The Apuan Alps contain quicksilver, magnetic iron and argentiferous copper and lead ores. The central and southern districts of Tuscany are also highly favored in this line. In fact all the districts on the west flank of the Apennines are richly endowed with mineral deposits. Also in Calabria there are iron lodes and ancient silver mines. The most important product of the Italian mines is sulphur, which is found in Sicily and exported largely. Ores and precious metals are annually exported to the amount of $14,400,000.

Fisheries.—The fisheries of Italy are of considerable importance and contribute quite largely to the food of the country. The coast fisheries employ a large amount of tonnage and capital. Tunny and anchovy are caught in large numbers and exported to all parts of the world. Oysters are obtained from beds in the Adriatic, but are poor in quality. The sea, however, furnishes large numbers of shell-fish of the smaller kinds.

Government.—According to the present constitution of Italy, the executive power belongs exclusively to the sovereign and is exercised by him through responsible ministers, and the legislative authority rests conjointly with the king and parliament. This body consists of two chambers, an upper one, the Senate, and a lower one called the Camera dei Deputati. The Senate is composed of two princes of the royal house, who are of age, and an unlimited number of members are appointed by the king. The members of the lower house are elected by a majority of the citizens, and for this purpose the whole population is divided into electoral districts. The duration of parliament is 5 years, but the king may dissolve the lower house at any time, being only obliged to order a new election and convoke a new meeting within 4 months.

Religions.—The Roman Catholic Church is, nominally, the ruling State religion, but the many acts of the legislature since the establishment of the kingdom, and more especially since the suppression of the temporal government of the Supreme Pontiff, have entirely subordinated the power of the Romish Church and clergy and secured perfect religious freedom to the adherents of all creeds. However, scarcely any religious organizations yet exist except the Roman Catholic.

Army and Navy.—The German law of universal liability forms the basis of the present military organization of Italy. Accordingly, a portion of all the young men, the number varying from 65,000 to 75,000, is drawn annually for the standing army, while the rest are entered in the army of the reserve, in which they have annually 40 days of practice, and are then sent on an unlimited furlough, but are liable to be called permanently in time of war. The time of service is 3 years in the infantry and 5 in the cavalry. The total strength of the army liable to service was, October 1st, 1879, 1,544,665, but of these only about 200,000 were really under arms. The navy consisted in 1879 of 86 steamers, afloat and building, armed with 676 guns. Sixteen of these are iron-clad ships, having 124 guns. The Italian navy contains two—the Duilio and Dundolo—of the most remarkable iron-clads ever built. The hull of the Duilio is entirely of iron and steel, and is armored with 22-inch plate. Each of her two turrets has two 100-ton Armstrong guns, and she also has a powerful ram. The Dundolo is a sister ship, and her construction is nearly the same. The other iron-clads of the navy are of older construction and of much less power.

Railways and Telegraphs.—The total length of railways open for traffic in January, 1878, was 8,210 kilometres, or 5,161 English miles, of which 2,126 kilometres, or 1,321 miles, belongs to the State, and the remainder to private companies. In the sessions of 1878 and 1879 the parliament passed bills for the construction of 6,020 kilometres, or 3,741 miles, to complete the existing system. The new lines are to be completed in 15 years at a total cost of 1,000,000,000 lire, or $200,000,000. The length of telegraph at the beginning of 1878 was 23,738 kilometres, or 14,750 miles, of which two-thirds belonged to the government, and the net revenue was $591,789.

Education.—Under the new government a great part of the revenue from the confiscated monasteries is devoted to the cause of public instruction, and, in addition to this, the government annually appropriates 15,000,000 lire, or $3,000,000. Since 1860, 33 great model schools have been opened throughout the country, of which 10 are in the Sardinian States, 6 in Lombardy, 4 in Emilia, 6 in the Marches and Umbria, 2 in Tuscany and 5 in the southern provinces. But notwithstanding these great aids to public instruction, education still stands very low in the kingdom. According to the census of 1864 more than four-fifths of the population could neither read nor write. There are 22 universities in Italy, many of them of ancient date. The oldest are Bologna, Naples, Padua, Rome, Perugia, Pisa, Siena, Parma, Turin, Parma and Florence, all having been founded before 1443. The other universities are Cagliari, Camerino, Catania, Ferrara, Genoa, Macerata, Messina, Modena, Palermo, Sassari and Urbino. The number of students at all the universities was returned in 1878 as 12,580. By a decree of the public minister of instruction in 1871, 6 high schools were declared first-class universities of the kingdom, viz: Naples, Parma, Turin, Bologna, Florence and Parma.

Revenues, etc.—The total public revenue, including loans, for 1878 was 1,435,828,569 lire, or $287,165,714. The expenditure during the same period was 1,408,212,949 lire, or $281,642,589. The ever-recurring deficits of late years has necessitated large public loans, both foreign and internal, and in 1878 the debt had increased to 9,750,000,000 lire, or $1,950,000,000. Nearly all the cities and communes of Italy have their own budgets and debts, which, like the national liabilities, are constantly tending to increase.

THE ISLAND OF MALTA.

BY W. E. HOUPPT.

French—Malte. German—Die Insel Malta. Russian, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, Swedish, Danish, Chinese, Japanese and Turkish—Malta.

Location.—Malta is situated in the Mediterranean sea, about 56 miles from Sicily and 200 miles from the African coast. It is surrounded by a few rocky islands, the largest of which is Gozo. It lies between 35° 43' and 36° 5' north latitude, and 14° 10' and 14° 35' east longitude. It is 17 miles long and 9 miles wide, and has an area of 115 square miles. In 1878 its population was 152,553.

Topography, etc.—It lies very low, being only 550 feet above the level of the sea. Its soil is very shallow, a great portion of it having been brought from Sicily and placed upon the formerly bare rock. The Benjemma hills, stretching across the island, diversify it beautifully into hill and dale. The southern coast has no harbors, but the eastern has Valetta, an excellent port, and one of the best fortified cities in the world. Malta is the key of the naval power in the Mediterranean, and is of indispensable use to Great Britain. The towns are mostly in the eastern portion of the island. There are no forests, lakes or rivers.

Capital, Climate, etc.—The capital is Citta Vecchia, which lies inland. Valetta is the chief port and business city. The climate is excessively hot both day and night, and during autumn the sirocco prevails. The atmosphere is so clear that Mt. Ætna, 130 miles distant, may be seen.

Agriculture, etc.—The people by their industry have brought agriculture to a flourishing state. Grains, beans, grass, oranges, olives, figs and wine are produced. But cotton is the chief product, and this has given rise to extensive cotton mills. Most of the inhabitants are engaged in agriculture or stone-cutting. Cabinet work is also nicely performed. The goldsmiths and artisans are noted. Soap, macaroni, leather and iron bedsteads are manufactured.

Trade, etc.—The chief exports consist of oranges, figs, cotton, soap and marble. The value of the exports in 1872 was £8,402,326, and of the imports was £8,982,370. Its trade with the United States is very small. Its mineral wealth is considerable. There are salt works in the south, alabaster in the north, and large quarries of marble and building stone. Fishing is carried on by many, especially by the inhabitants of the neighboring islands. Birds of beautiful plumage inhabit the island, while in the western part wild bees make honey that is widely celebrated.

Government, etc.—Malta is a crown colony subject to England, and is ruled by a governor, who is also commander-in-chief, assisted by a council of 18, 10 of whom are chosen by the crown and 8 elective. The religion is strictly Roman Catholic. England keeps an army of 5,600 men in the island. The inhabitants make excellent seamen. There are good provisions for education, being 50 public and 100 private schools. There is a college of law, divinity and physics at Valetta. In 1874 its public revenue was £175,073, and its expenditures £161,734. In the same year its debt was £79,202.

The only representative of the United States is Henry Ruggles, consul, Valetta, Malta.

In the London Morning Post of October 13, 1778, we come across an appeal to the short-sighted :

A SERIOUS THOUGH SURPRISING OFFER.—For the compliment of One Hundred Guineas, any enterprising Gentleman or Lady may have revealed to them an eligible method of converting hundreds into Thousands, in a few weeks, and of continuing so to do yearly. The requiring so inadequate a consideration, is because the proposer is under misfortunes. Only letters with real names and residencies will be regarded. Direct for W. W., at the King's Bench Coffee-House.

TO INDEPENDENT GENTLEMEN.—Wanted by a respectable, modest young man, who can produce a cubic yard of testimonials, a living without a master—that is, he wishes to become a companion to some gentleman, and be his factotum. He can ride, shoot, sing, fish (but never better than his patron without he is wanted), keep accounts, see that servants do their duty, do twenty other things, equally necessary in this life, and make it his whole duty to please and be pleased. Any one seriously wishing such a person, may address, post paid to Z., to be left at ——.—Advertisement in London Times, 1840.

THE PRINCIPALITY OF MONTENEGRO.

BY W. E. HOUPPE.

Montenegrin—Cernagora; or, Tzernagora. Danish, French and German—Montenegro. Russian—Tchernogória. Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, Swedish and Chinese—Montenegro. Turkish—Karadagh.

Situation, Size, etc.—Montenegro is a small country situated in the western portion of former European Turkey, near the Adriatic sea. It lies between 42° and 43° 30' north latitude, and 18° and 20° 30' east longitude. It is bounded on the northwest by Herzegovina, northeast, east and south by Turkish Albania, and on the west by a narrow portion of Austria known as the belt of Cattaro. Its only harbor and seaport is that of Dulcigno, recently ceded, under compulsion of the "great powers," by Albania. It contains 3,550 square miles. In 1879 its population was 308,740. There are about 300 villages, which are mostly situated in valleys and on hill-slopes. The surface is very mountainous, and few plains are found. The Dinaric Alps extend across the whole country.

Climate, Productions, etc.—Its climate is mild in summer, while the winters are cold, but healthful. The mountains are covered with dense forests of oak, beech, poplar and fir, yielding excellent timber. Agriculture is in a backward state, owing to the unevenness of the land, but every tillable portion is worked. The staple products are maize, potatoes, tobacco, mulberries, olives, almonds, figs, peaches, pomegranates and wine. Manufacturing is limited to articles of immediate necessity. Cetinje is the capital, and has a population of 1,400; Antivari, 8,000, and Podgoritzza, 6,000. Chief exports, are smoked mutton, sumach wood and leaves, salted and dried fish, wax, honey, vegetables, fruit and milk. The main imports are cattle, horses, tobacco, salt, copper, iron, oil, wax candles, brandy, coffee, sugar, arms, glass, sandals and Fez caps. The value of the exports is estimated at 2,000,000 florins. Its mineral endowments are poor. Fishing engages the attention of many and increases much the value of its exports.

Government.—In government it is a limited monarchy. The executive power vests in a prince, and the legislative in a body called the "State Council," consisting of 8 members, 4 of whom are appointed by the prince and the remainder by the people who have borne arms. The inhabitants are divided into 40 tribes, which are governed by elders (elected by the people), and by chiefs or knajas, who are magistrates in peace and commanders in war. There are 12 lower courts, one of appeal and one of cassation. The post-office is in the charge of the Austrian government, whose director lives at Cetinje. The people are mostly of the non-united Greek church. There is no standing army except the life guard of the Hospodar or prince, which numbers 100 men. The number of men between 21 and 50 years of age and capable of bearing arms is 21,850. Education is much neglected. There are three teachers' seminaries and one agricultural school. All children between the ages of 8 and 14 years are compelled to attend school for a portion of the year. There are no railroads or canals and only 275 miles of telegraph. All transportation is done by women, assisted at times by donkeys, and over roads that are often traveled with difficulty. The public revenue is estimated at 300,000 florins, and the public expenditures at 130,000 florins. There is no public debt. It has no commercial or consular relations with the United States.

For map and lists of newspapers, see other departments of this work.

Whereas several persons who sell knives, for the better vending their bad wares spread reports that Ephraim How, Cutler of London is deceased. This is to certify That he is living, and keeps his business as formerly, with his son in partnership, at the Heart and Crown on Saffron Hill; there being divers imitations, you are desired to observe the mark, which is the Heart Crown and Dagger, with How under it.—Advertisement in the Daily Courant, of London, 1712.

In September, 1744, we find this in the London Morning Post:

A Gentleman of Character and considerable Fortune is extremely desirous of a HIGH HONOUR at an approaching Period. Any one who can assist him, or point out an eligible means of succeeding, shall be amply recompensed both at present and in future.—In short, name your Terms; secrecy is all required on his part. A Line to Mr Dormer, at No. 24 Ludgate Hill, will be attended to.

THE KINGDOM OF THE NETHERLANDS.

BY CHARLES E. WILBUR, A.M.

Dutch.—Nederlanden, Danish.—Nederlanderne, French.—Les Pays-Bas; or, Néerlande, German.—Niederlande, Russian.—Gallandia; or, Niderlândy, Italian.—Paesi-Bassi, Spanish.—Países Bajos, Portuguese.—Paizes Baixos, Swedish.—Nederländerna, Chinese and Japanese.—Ho Lan Kwo, Turkish.—Fillemeng.

Location.—The kingdom of the Netherlands is situated in western Europe. It lies between 50° 43' and 53° 36' north latitude, and 3° 22' and 7° 16' east longitude from Greenwich. It is bounded on the north by the North sea, east by Hanover and Prussia, south by Belgium, and west by the North sea. It contains 20,497 square miles.

Topography.—The land is generally low, much of it being below the level of the sea. Along the west coast the lands are protected from the sea by a line of sand-hills, or dunes, and where that natural defense is wanting strong dykes have been constructed, and are maintained at great expense, to keep back the waters. The greatest part of the Netherlands is very fertile, the lowlands and drained lakes, called Polders, being adapted to pasturing cattle, and the light soil to cereals and fruits; but in some districts there are sandy, heath-clad plains, extensive peat-lands and undrained morasses which industry is rapidly bringing under cultivation.

Subdivisions, etc.—The subdivisions of the kingdom are: North Brabant, Guelderland, South Holland, North Holland, Zeeland, Utrecht, Friesland, Overijssel, Groningen, Drenthe, Limburg. The capital is Amsterdam, with a population of 285,000 (1875). Other leading places are Rotterdam, Leyden, Utrecht, Middelburg, Groningen.

Climate.—The climate is variable, chilly coldness often succeeding high temperatures, producing various forms of fever and ague, and requiring peculiar care as to clothing and habits. In summer the thermometer often rises to 80°, and even to 90° F. in the shade, and a winter of great severity usually occurs every fifth year, when carriages and heavily-laden wagons cross the rivers on the ice, and thousands enjoy the natural pastime of skating. The farms are generally small and well cultivated, though the implements are old-fashioned and clumsy.

Agriculture, etc.—The sandy wastes are being planted with firs and oaks, and sown with buckwheat, oats and rye. In 1874 the total value of agricultural products was $85,500,000. Live stock raised includes horses, cattle, sheep, goats and swine. The leading agricultural products are wheat, madder, hemp, butter and cheese. Fruit is abundant, and in several provinces much attention is paid to bees. Tulips and hyacinths are cultivated for exportation. Wild ducks, snipes, plovers and hares are plentiful; there are also conies, partridges, pheasants and deer-game, forming articles of export.

Manufactures.—The chief manufactures are linen, woollens, cotton and silk fabrics, paper, leather, glass and carpets. Dyeing is carried on extensively; iron-founding, rolling and hammering lead and copper, and cannon-founding are carried on at the Hague. Waalwyk, Hansden and surrounding districts manufacture boots and shoes. Gin is distilled at Schiedam, Delft, Rotterdam and Weesp. Amsterdam has the largest diamond-cutting trade in the world, 10,000 persons being engaged in it. The chief motive power is the windmill, but of late years steam is becoming more general. Many people are employed in the immense inland shipping trade which the canal network has fostered, there being 6,684 ships inhabited by families, or one inhabited ship to 81 houses.

Trade.—The Netherlands are peculiarly a mercantile as well as agricultural country; its merchants not only importing and exporting the products of its colonies and the surplus of their own country, but also those of other lands. The imports for 1878 were valued at $297,266,895, and exports at $222,118,670. The leading exports are cheese, butter, refined sugar, flax, cattle, sheep, swine, gin and garancine: the imports, manufactured goods, unrefined sugar, coffee, grain, iron, yarns, cotton, rice, gold, silver, tin, tea, indigo, silk and woollen fabrics. Much of the exports are from the colonies. The trade of the Netherlands with the United States for the fiscal year closing June 30, 1880, was as follows: Imports from the United States, $17,207,098; exports to the United States, $6,944,078; total $24,151,185, being 1.60 per cent. of the whole trade of the United States for the year named.

Minerals.—The Netherlands proper are not rich in metals. Coal is worked in Limburg; and a soft sandstone, which becomes fit for building purposes after having been some time exposed to the atmosphere, is quarried in the southern part of that province. It has pipe and other clays also. Valuable clays for pottery, tile and brick-making abound in the various provinces.

Fisheries.—Fishing, not only in the inland waters, the coasts and bays of the North sea, but also on the coast of Scotland, is vigorously pursued, and is of much importance to commerce. In 1873 the value of the herrings taken in the North sea alone was $300,000, and probably as much more in the inland bays. The anchovy taken in the Zuider Zee alone amounted in value to $290,000; cod, ling, turbot, flounders, soles, shrimp and haddock are also taken in the salt waters; salmon, eels and perch in the rivers. There are also productive oyster beds.

Government.—The government is a limited constitutional monarchy, hereditary in the male line, and by default of that, in the female. The executive is vested in the king, with a council of state, nominated by his majesty, and the ministers of the interior, foreign affairs, finance, war, the colonies, marine and justice. The legislative power is shared by the king and the two chambers of the states-general; the first chamber having 39 members, serving 9 years. The second chamber has 80 members, serving 4 years. There is a money qualification required for voters. The king nominates the governors of provinces, the burgemeisters of every city, town or village, and a host of other officials. The law departments are the high council, the provincial courts of justice, those of the arrondissements and cantons; appeal in many cases being open from the lower to the higher courts.

Religions.—The religious aspect is rather peculiar; all religions have appropriations from the public funds; so that the State may be said to have established religion, rather than any particular church. At the census of 1869 there were 2,193,281 Protestants, 1,313,052 Roman Catholics, 68,003 Jews, and 5,193 small sects. There were (1875) 2,034 Protestant ministers, of whom 1,598 were Dutch Reformed, 2,062 Catholic priests, and 168 Jewish congregations. The budget of 1875 contained $590,000 for the Dutch Reformed church; for the Roman Catholic, $250,000; and for the Jews, $15,000.

Army and Navy.—The strength of the army of Netherlands in Europe, in 1878, was 2,000 officers and 60,850 men; of the Indian army, 1,480 officers and 37,800 men. It is composed of volunteers, and of one man for every 500, drawn by lot, for five years' service. There is also a local force called the schuttery, drawn by lot from those between 25 and 34 years of age, to assist in keeping order in peace, and, in case of war, to act as a mobile corps and do garrison duty. The royal navy consisted (1878) of 99 steamers carrying 400 guns, and 16 sailing vessels carrying 103. The sailors and marines numbered 8,470 officers and men. Prince Frederic, uncle of the king, is admiral; the Prince of Orange, vice-admiral; and his majesty is commander-in-chief of the land and naval forces.

Education.—There are fine educational advantages in the State, universities at Leyden, Utrecht and Groningen; colleges at Amsterdam, Deventer and Maastricht, and the students must be examined for degrees at one of the universities. Latin schools are in all the leading towns. The universities and colleges have faculties of theology, medicine, philosophy, law, and letters. There are also the Royal Military and Naval Academy at Breda, and that for engineers and the Indian civil service at Delft. Each community or parish must have at least one elementary school, supported from the local public funds, in which reading, writing, arithmetic, history and geography are taught. A higher class of schools includes also foreign languages. All are under government inspectors, and the teachers must undergo stringent examinations on all the branches before obtaining permission to teach. There are several national normal schools, the pupil teachers of which receive for support from $120 to $125 a year.

Railways, Revenues, etc.—Railways have been constructed to the extent of about 1,035 miles, forming lines of communication with Belgium and Prussia. In 1872 the two oldest companies gave dividends of 6½ and 8¾ per cent. Canals are more numerous than in any other European country, girding the whole State with a network. The revenue of Netherlands for 1879 was estimated at $48,259,460, and the expenditure at $48,254,915. From 1850 to 1874 there has been paid off $130,000,000 of the public debt. The interest payable on the debt in 1879 amounted to $11,125,000. The material prosperity of the State is rapidly increasing, and not less than $1,300,000,000 is invested by capitalists in other nations. The chief colonies are Java, Sumatra, Borneo, Celebes, the Spice Islands, and Papua, or New Guinea, in the East; Dutch Guiana in South America, and Curaçao and its dependencies in the West Indies, with factories on the coast of Guinea. The colonial population is estimated at 24,386,991.

In 1802, at that time particular newspapers in London possessed particular classes of advertisements: the Morning Post, horses and carriages; the Public Ledger, shipping and sales of wholesale foreign merchandise; the Morning Herald and Times, auctioneers; the Morning Chronicle, books.

The St. James's Chronicle, London, in July, 1772, contains an advertisement which for coolness and audacity is very noticeable, even at a time when requests were put forth in the columns of the public press with most unblushing effrontery:

Wanted immediately, Fifteen Hundred or Two Thousand Pounds by a person not worth a Groat, who having neither Houses, Lands, Annuities or public Funds, can offer no other Security than that of simple Bond, bearing simple interest and engaging the Repayment of the Sum borrowed in five, six or seven Years, as may be agreed upon by the parties. Whoever this may suit (for it is hoped it will suit somebody) by directing a line to A. Z. in Rochester, shall be immediately replied to or waited on, as may appear necessary.

THE KINGDOM OF NORWAY.

BY HENRY A. TODD, A.B.

Norwegian and Danish—Norge. French—Norvège; or, Norwège. German—Norwegen. Russian—Norvegia; or, Norvesko. Italian—Norvegia. Spanish—Norvega. Portuguese—Norvega. Swedish—Norge. Chinese and Japanese—Nao Wei Kwo. Turkish—Norvegia. Dutch—Noorwegen.

Position, Size, etc.—Norway is a northern country of Europe, lying between 58° and 71° 11' north latitude, and between 5° and 31° 57' east longitude. It is bounded on the east by Sweden and Russia, on the north by the Arctic ocean, on the west by the Atlantic, and south by the Skager-Rack. Its length is about 1,100 miles, and greatest width about 250 miles. Area, 122,280 square miles; population (1876), 1,817,237. Along the western coast are a multitude of islands, of which 1,160 are inhabited, comprising an area of 8,500 square miles, and a population of 212,000.

Topography.—The surface of the country consists almost entirely of mountains and rocky highlands. Only about 2 per cent. of the whole area is capable of cultivation; there are swamps and morasses in considerable extent which government has taken measures to drain and utilize for agricultural purposes. The northern part of Norway lies within the range of perpetual snow; and of the more southern part, elevations exceeding 2,000 feet above sea-level are too cold for human habitation. The Justedal glacier is the largest in Europe, and covers an area of 588 square miles. Norway possesses some of the finest scenery in the world; along the many bays of the coast, rugged and precipitous cliffs rise to a height of 3,000 or 4,000 feet, and there are some noted peaks and wonderful conformations. Not far from the coast, in latitude 68° north, occurs that remarkable whirl of counter-currents known as the Maelstrom. The most important rivers are the Glommen (350 miles long), the Drams-elv, Tanæ, Pasvikel, Skiens, Laagen and Vorma. The largest of the lakes is the Mjøsen, near Christiania; it is about 60 miles long, with an area of less than 200 square miles, but has a depth in some places of more than 1,400 feet.

Climate.—The climate of Norway varies greatly in different parts of the country, but is much tempered by the sea and Gulf Stream on the west; at Christiania, 60° north latitude, the mean temperature is 41° Fahr., while on the western coast, in the same latitude, it is about 47° Fahr. In the interior the air is clear and dry, winters cold and summers hot; on the coast, rain and fogs prevail, winters are mild and summers cool. The longest day is in the south, 18 hours; in the north, nearly 3 months.

Soil and Products.—Not much of the soil is productive; a large extent of the mountain districts yields nothing but scanty grasses, mosses, lichens and a few hardy berries. Only birch and juniper grow north of 67°. The Scotch fir, spruce and birch cover extensive tracts, and constitute the principal wealth of Norway. The harder fruits, as strawberries, cherries, gooseberries and raspberries are abundant and excellent. Hemp, flax, rye, oats and barley are grown as far north as 66°. Agriculture is successfully carried on in the southern parts, while in the north the rearing of cattle is an important industry.

Industries.—Ship-building is perhaps the most extensive and important industry. Wood-paste, obtained from the forests, is an important product, used instead of rags in the manufacture of paper. The mineral products, silver, copper, nickel, cobalt, iron, chrome, ironstone, etc., yield a large annual return. Fishing is one of the most important industries, employing upwards of 50,000 men; salmon, herring and cod are the principal, but mackerel, seal, shark and walrus-catching is extensively prosecuted.

Government.—Norway and Sweden are under the same government, a constitutional hereditary monarchy. The executive is represented by the King, who exercises his authority through a Council of State, composed of 2 ministers of state and 9 councillors. The Storting, or legislative chamber, is composed of representatives elected by deputies chosen by the people. The only qualifications to the right of suffrage are the age of 25 years and possession of land property worth $150, or 5 years' tenancy of the same. The Storting is divided into two bodies, one of which proposes public measures, while the other has the power of accepting or rejecting them. Laws proposed must be ratified by the King, but if they pass the Storting three times they acquire validity even without the King's sanction. The King is commander-in-chief of all the forces of the country, military and naval; but he cannot proclaim war or peace without the assent of the Council of State. By a law since 1821 no title of nobility can be conferred, and the general tendency of the country is democratic. Capital punishment is not inflicted. Judges are liable in damages for their decisions.

Education is compulsory upon children between 7 and 14 years of age. There are over 6,500 primary schools, a number of private and high schools and other institutions. The University of Christiania, founded in 1811, has 50 professors and about 1,000 students. It is almost impossible to find a Norwegian who cannot read and write.

Religions.—The Lutheran is the predominant church; religious freedom is enjoyed, but every one holding a public office of trust must belong to the regular church.

Cities.—Christiania, the capital and principal city, handsomely built and containing many objects of interest, had, in 1880, 116,801 inhabitants; Bergen (1879), 40,100; and Trondhjem, 34,384. The population is chiefly rural, only about 11 per cent. living in towns. The cultivators of land are mostly the owners; the people are frugal, industrious and upright.

Public Roads in Norway are excellent. The length of railroads in 1880 was 1,000 miles; of telegraph lines, 9,726 miles.

Army and Navy.—The army numbers about 12,000 men and 750 officers; navy, 34 steam vessels (in 1885), carrying 147 guns, and 92 sailing vessels, 149 guns, manned by 2,500 sailors. The shipping employed 8,064 vessels.

Revenues.—The public revenue in 1880 amounted to $12,164,400; expenditures, $12,136,740; the public debt was $27,675,500. The exports amounted to $24,566,850; imports, $37,613,264. The exports of Norway and Sweden to the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, amounted in value to $688,963; imports from same, $2,386,403.

THE KINGDOM OF PORTUGAL.

BY JAMES Q. RICE.

Portuguese and Danish—Portugal. French—Lusitanie; or, Portugal. German—Portugal. Russian—Portugalia. Italian and Spanish—Portogallo. Swedish—Portugal. Chinese and Japanese—P'u² T'ao Ya². Turkish—Portukal.

Position, Size, etc.—Portugal is an independent kingdom, lying in the southwestern part of Europe, on the so-called Iberian peninsula, of which it occupies less than one-sixth part. It is bounded by Spain on the north and east, and on the south and west by the Atlantic ocean. It lies between latitude 36° 57' and 42° 8' north, and longitude 6° 12' and 9° 32' west. Its greatest length is 266 miles and its average breadth about 100 miles. The continental area is 34,606 square miles; and, in addition to this, the Portuguese territory in the Azores and the island of Madeira amounts to 1,137 square miles, giving the kingdom a total area of 35,843 square miles. The population by the census of 1878 was 4,745,124, of which 4,348,551 was on the continent.

Topography.—Portugal is not separated from Spain by any natural boundaries, and therefore its physical characteristics must be considered as intimately connected with those of that country. Its principal mountain ranges are those which extend into and traverse Spain. On the north the country is intersected in various directions by the southerly and westerly extensions of the Gabeian and Asturian mountain ranges, which terminate at the sea in a steep, broken coast. The provinces situated in this quarter are characterized by alternating mountains and high table-lands. On the whole, Portugal may be considered as a land of mountains intersected by valleys, many of which contain scenery of the greatest beauty. There are, however, two plains of some extent; one to the south of the Tagus, of which that of Santarem forms a continuation; and one at the mouth of the Vouga. The soil is in general fertile and well-watered, though in the province of Alemtejo large tracts are rendered uninhabitable by the scarcity of water. The largest rivers are the Tagus, the Guadiana, the Douro, the Lima, and the Murfho, all of which rise in Spain. The Mondego, also, ought to be noticed, being the largest of the rivers belonging exclusively to Portugal. It is navigable for a distance of 60 miles, except in summer. The coast in the southern part is low, marshy and sandy; and on the northern high and rocky. It affords but few good harbors, the immense surf from the Atlantic forming bars at the entrance and rendering them inaccessible in certain winds. The best harbors are Oporto, at the mouth of the Douro, Lisbon, Aveiro, Figueira, and Viana. There are no lakes of any moment, but the country abounds in medicinal springs.

Divisions and Cities.—The kingdom is divided into six provinces, viz: Minho, Tras-os-Montes, Beira, Estremadura, Alemtejo and Algarve. The capital is Lisbon, situated on the Tagus, which had a population in 1878 of 253,496. The other principal towns are Oporto (population 89,194), Coimbra (population 18,147), Elvas (population 9,637), Braga (population 18,467), Setubal (population 12,728), Evora (population 11,078) and Ovar (population 10,374).

Climate.—The climate is cooler than that of Spain, the summer heat being tempered all along the coast by delightful sea breezes. The mean annual temperature at Lisbon is 61° Fah. In the northern mountainous parts snow sometimes falls heavily, but on the south it is almost unknown. Abundant rains visit the western coast, but violent storms are rare.

Flora and Fauna.—The flora of the country is very rich and varied. In addition to the oak, chestnut, pine, elm and ash, there are the cork-tree, olive, walnut, mulberry, orange, lemon, citron, date-palm, fig, peach, apricot, almond, and arbutus. Humboldt estimates the different species of indigenous plants at over 3,200. A few wild animals are still found, such as the wolf, wildcat, and the wild boar. Small game and edible fish are abundant.

Agriculture.—Agriculture is in a very backward state, and the produce is scarcely sufficient to satisfy home demands. The farmers are ignorant, and most of them planting the same crops on the same ground for many successive years. An additional reason for this agricultural lethargy is found in the fact that the land was formerly principally owned by the nobles and clergy. With amended mortmain laws, however, the land has become free, and improved methods and agricultural implements are being slowly introduced, especially in Alemtejo. The culture of the olive-tree and vine are carried on with some care and yield a considerable quantity for export. The olive plantations cover an area of more than 100,000 acres, and yield annually fully 5,500,000 gallons of oil. The orange, lemon, citron, peach, fig, walnut and almond are raised throughout the country, and are of excellent quality. The principal cereals are wheat (5,500,000 bushels), rye (6,000,000), maize (14,000,000), and rice (400,000). The vineyards of Portugal, which are most important, are situated in the valley of the Douro, covering an area of 473,517 acres, and produce annually 132,500,000 gallons of wine.

Trade.—The trade of the country is chiefly with Great Britain, and the principal articles of exportation are wine, olive oil, salt, chemicals, copper, pyrites, dried fruit, pork, silver and cork. The imports are textile fabrics, coal, iron goods, timber, hides, tobacco, coffee and tea. The exports for 1876 amounted to about $24,412,000, and the imports for the same period were $37,205,800. The value of the imports from the United States for the year ending June 30, 1880, were $4,595,736, an increase over 1876 of $1,500,000. The exports to the United States for the year 1880 amounted to $770,697, an increase over 1876 of more than $300,000.

Minerals.—Portugal is quite rich in mineral deposits, but mining is not carried on with any degree of energy. There is a large deposit of anthracite coal near Vallonjo, about 11 miles from Oporto. Lead is mined in considerable quantities near Braçal, and employment is thus given to a large number of persons. Gold, silver, copper and tin are also found, and salt is produced at various places to the amount of 60,000,000 bushels annually.

Fisheries.—Fish are abundant, and the tunny and anchovy fisheries of the province of Algarve are of considerable importance to commerce.

Government.—The constitution of Portugal is based upon the Carta de Luy granted by Pedro IV. in 1826. It recognizes four powers in the State, viz: the legislative, executive, judicial, and the moderating power, which is vested in the sovereign. There are two legislative chambers, corresponding to the House of Peers and House of Commons, which are together called the "Cortes." The Peers are chosen for life by the sovereign, and the members of the second chamber by direct election, for a term of four years. Continental Portugal is divided into 94 districts, returning as many deputies, and the Azores add five. The annual session lasts three months. The executive authority vests under the sovereign in a responsible cabinet divided into seven departments.

Religions.—The Roman Catholic faith is the state religion, but all other forms of belief are tolerated. All the conventual establishments in Portugal were suppressed in 1834, and their property confiscated for the benefit of the State, making an increase in the public revenues of nearly $5,000,000. The number of Protestants in Portugal does not exceed 500, most of whom are foreigners.

Army and Navy.—The army of the kingdom is formed partly by conscription and partly by voluntary enlistment. Freedom from conscription is purchased by a fixed payment to the government of about $400. The time of service is eight years, five of which are spent in the regular army and the remainder in the militia. The actual strength of the army in August, 1879, was 1,744 officers and 25,833 men, of whom 11,360 were out on furlough. The navy in 1879 consisted of 28 steamers, of 4,441 horse-power, and 118 guns; and 9 sailing vessels, of 31 guns. The commercial navy consists of 588 vessels, of which 42 are steamers.

Railways and Telegraphs.—The total length of the railways in operation in 1879 was 1,151.5 kil. or 715 miles. The length of the telegraph lines in 1878 was 3,711 kil., or 2,304 miles; the total length of wire being 8,042 kil., or 4,994 miles. The number of telegraph stations is 185.

Education.—The superintendence of public instruction is under the management of a superior council, at the head of which is the Minister of the Interior. By law it is compulsory upon parents to send their children to a place of public instruction, but this prescript is very far from being carried out. There is one university in the kingdom, that at Coimbra. It is attended by about 900 students. There are 182 lyceums, which impart secondary instruction, and have an average attendance of 3,000. In the building of the extinct monastery at Belem about 900 orphaned and abandoned children of both sexes are supported and taught useful trades. The average annual expenditure of the government for educational purposes, for the last five years, was about $10,000.

Revenues, etc.—The average annual revenue of Portugal for the last ten years amounted to nearly $24,200,000, while the average expenditure during the same period exceeded that sum by $3,630,000. There has been no budget for the last thirty years without a deficit. The public debt dates from 1796, when the first loan of $4,376,000 was raised. According to the report of the Minister of Finance, laid before the "Cortes" in the session of 1879, the total funded debt of Portugal amounted to $402,368,994.48.

THE AZORES ISLANDS.

BY HENRY A. TODD, A.B.

Danish—Azoriska Oarne. French—Îles-Açores. German—Azorische Inseln. Russian—Azórskíie Ostrová.
Italian—Azore. Spanish—Terceiras. Portuguese—Açores. Swedish—Azorerna; or, Azoriska Oarne. Turkish—Djezayir-ee-Azor.

Location, Size, etc.—The Azores, a group of islands in the Atlantic ocean, 800 miles due west of the southern part of Portugal, ranging in north latitude between $36^{\circ} 55'$ and $39^{\circ} 44'$, and in west longitude between $25^{\circ} 10'$ and $31^{\circ} 16'$. Their total area is estimated at about 1,000 square miles, and the population at 250,000.

Islands and Population.—The inhabitable islands of the group are nine in number, and their names, in the order of population and importance, are: St. Michael, Terceira, Pico, Fayal, Sao Jorgo, Flores, Graciosa, St. Mary, and Corvo. They form a province of Portugal, in whose possession they came by discovery and colonization in the first half of the 15th century. The capital is Angra, in Terceira, with a population of 11,281. Ponta Delgada, population 15,885, and Ribeira Grande, population 3,200, both in St. Michael, are important towns; also Horta, population 7,636, capital of the island of Fayal. The largest island of the group, St. Michael, has a length of about 50 miles, and is from 5 to 12 miles broad.

Topography.—The Azores are all of volcanic origin. The coasts are generally steep and rugged, and the interior is marked by ravines and mountains; the mountains ranging in height from 1,869 feet to 7,613, which last is the height of a lava-covered peak in Pico. The volcanoes are mostly extinct, but the islands contain hot springs and are subject to violent earthquakes. In 1803 a volcano suddenly arose on Sao Jorgo to the height of 3,500 feet, burned 6 days and then ceased, and in 1811 another rose from the sea, near St. Michael, and after eruption disappeared.

The Climate is moist, but agreeable and healthy. The soil is fertile and vegetation luxuriant. The chief products are fruits, sugar cane, coffee and tobacco. The islands are well watered, but possess no good harbor.

Trade.—The exports amount to about $1,200,000 annually, and the imports about $1,700,000. The exports are wine, oranges, grain, lemons, brandy, pork, beef, cheese and coarse linens. The imports are woolens, cotton, hardware, iron, glass, cordage, pitch, tar, timber, oil, fish, rum, sugar, salt and tea.

Productions, etc.—The growth of shrubs, heath erns, mosses, and the grasses is most abundant, but tall trees are scarce; the orange, lemon and citron trees are abundant. The principal fish caught are the mullet, tunny and bonito. Besides the domestic animals, the rabbit, weasel, ferret and rat are the principal. Of birds there are vast numbers, especially of the hawk, blackbird, redbreast and canary.

THE PRINCIPALITY OF ROUMANIA.

BY H. A. TODD, A.B.

Roumanian—Rumania. Danish—Rumanien. French—Roumanie. German—Rumanien. Russian—Rumania. Italian, Spanish and Portuguese—Rumania. Swedish—Rumanien. Turkish—Memleketiın.

Location.—Roumania, or Rumania, a country of Eastern Europe, bounded on the north by Russia and Austria, on the east by Russia and the Black sea, on the south by the Danube, and on the west by Austria and Servia. It lies within the approximate limits of latitude of 44°-48° north, and longitude 22°-28° east from Greenwich. Area, 49,262 square miles. Population estimated in 1878 at 5,400,000.

Organization.—Roumania was formed in 1861 by the union of Moldavia and Wallachia, known as the Danubian principalities, under one administration, tributary to the Turkish empire. In the Russo-Turkish war of 1877 it took an active part against Turkey, and declared its independence, which was recognized by the Berlin Congress in 1878. This congress also gave to Russia the district on the east known as Bessarabia, which had been taken from the Russians in 1856; in return for this Roumania received the addition of the province of Dabrudja, taken from the Turks. The exchange gave them a slight increase of territory and population, but was very unsatisfactory to the Roumanian government.

Races.—The Rumanians pride themselves on being descendants from the ancient Romans, and the Romanic is the language in common use; but French is much used in educated circles. Besides the native population, there are many Jews, Greeks, Germans and Gypsies. There is a considerable class of nobility, but the masses of the people live in poverty; yet the common people are sober, cleanly, honest and frugal, and among them are few criminals, murder and larceny being almost unknown. There are not many free peasants, while many are in a condition of modified serfdom. A law has been passed forbidding peasants to sell land once obtained from the government, the real design of this law being to prevent the Jews from becoming possessors of the country.

Education.—Education is free and compulsory. Besides over 2,000 elementary schools, there are many normal and private schools, French boarding schools, and two universities. The established religion is that of the Greek church, to which most of the people belong; but full religious liberty is enjoyed.

Government.—The government of Roumania is a constitutional and liberal monarchy, with a king or prince chosen by the legislative body. The executive consists of the prince and an associate council of ministers, seven in number, heads of the departments of war, of finance, of foreign affairs, of the interior, of justice, of commerce and agriculture, and of religion and public instruction. The prince has a veto over all laws passed by the legislative departments. The legislative power is composed of a Senate and a Chamber of Deputies chosen by the people. The Senate numbers 76, the Deputies 157. All citizens 25 years old who can read and write are voters. The people vote for electors, who choose the officers. Every Roumanian who possesses a small yearly income is eligible to a seat in the parliament.

Army and Navy.—The army comprises a standing force of 20,000 men, with a war footing of about 42,000, and a total available force for war purposes of 145,000. By the law of 1872 all natives of Roumania from 20 to 40 years of age are liable to military service in the standing army—four years active and four years as a reserve. The naval force is small, containing 3 steam vessels and 6 sloops.

Agriculture is one of the most important industries of the country; corn and the grains, fruits, wine, flax, tobacco and olive-oil are extensively produced. The principal wealth is in cattle and horses; sheep and swine are numerous.

Topography.—The country is mostly level, with some mountains on the west; at the south along the Danube are vast swamps and sand flats, but the soil is generally fertile and under cultivation or used as pasture lands.

Minerals.—Of minerals, gold, silver and copper abound, but are not extensively mined; rock salt is found in abundance, and is one of the chief products.

The Climate is extreme, with intense heat in the summer, and a long, cold winter of nearly five months. Earthquakes are quite frequent. Timber and vines are of plentiful growth.

Fauna.—Bears, wolves and lynxes are found. There are many varieties of singing birds. Aquatic and wading birds are numerous, and the smaller kinds of fish abound in the rivers. Locusts are at times so numerous as to become a plague.

Cities.—The chief cities are Bukarest, the capital, the centre of four railroads, with a population of 200,000; Jassy, 90,000; Galatz, about 85,000, and Braila, near 50,000. The last two named are the chief commercial and business cities, both situated on the Danube, some distance from its mouth. These cities have been in late years largely rebuilt and much improved.

Railways, etc.—Roumania is now well supplied with railway and telegraph lines, and well connected with the business centers of Europe. In 1878 the miles of railroads were about 800, and of telegraph 2,300.

Imports and Exports.—The chief exports are cattle, grain, wool, hides, tar, honey, prunes and rock salt. The imports are chiefly the manufactures of Western Europe. From the United States it receives some machinery, such as threshing machines, plows, and sewing machines. The total value of exports in 1874 amounted to $30,588,800, and of imports $17,908,000. Its direct trade with the United States is insignificant.

Revenues.—The amount of public revenue in 1880 was 117,545,944 lei, or $23,509,190; and for the same year the expenditures were 117,245,944 lei, or $23,449,100. The public debt in January, 1879, amounted to 600,059,499 lei, or $112,842,507. A lei is equivalent in value to the French franc.

THE RUSSIAN EMPIRE.

BY MR. GEO. DOBSON, OF ST. PETERSBURG.

Russian—Rossfia; Rus. Danish—Russland. French—Russie. German—Russland. Italian—Russia.
Spanish—Rúsia. Portuguese—Rússia. Swedish—Ryssland. Chinese and Japanese—O² Kwo.
Turkish—Rooss; or, Moskovistan.

Government.—The Russian empire is ruled over by the Tsar, who is autocrat of all the Russias, King of Poland, and Grand Duke of Finland. His authority is absolute over 95,000,000 of subjects of various races, religions and languages in Europe and Asia. This number includes the estimated population ceded to Russia by the Treaty of Berlin, 1878. The Tsar is advised by a Council of State, whose members are appointed by himself, and among whom sit the elder members of the imperial family. In the absence of the Tsar it is presided over by the Grand Duke Constantine, the Emperor's brother. There is also a committee of ministers for the purpose of discussing questions of gravity and laying their united recommendations before the council. A Senate also exists, established by Peter the Great as a High Court of Appeal, but its functions have degenerated into mere matters of form. Russia proper comprises 50 governments or provinces administered by governors appointed by the Tsar. The Caucasus is governed by an Imperial Lieutenant, Turkistan by a military Governor-General, the ten provinces of Poland by Governors-General and Governors, the Governor-General of Warsaw having a certain measure of authority over the rest, and Finland by a Governor-General, who presides in the Finnish Diet, and by the recent extension of general military service to the Grand Duchy, is chief of the Finnish troops. Although much improved during the beneficent reign of the late Alexander II., the vast bureaucratic administration in Russia is still extremely corrupt and exhibits many of those characteristics of Asiatic rule which have helped to ruin the neighboring empire of Turkey. The revolutionary agitation of nihilism and socialism has existed throughout the present reign, and has latterly assumed alarming proportions, culminating in the assassination of the Tsar.

Newspapers and Periodicals.—At the end of 1880 the number of newspapers and periodicals issued in Russia was over 500. These include, beside Russian, about 280 journals printed in the Polish, German, French, Finnish, Swedish, Lettish, Estonian, Armenian, Hebrew, Tartar, Latin and Georgian languages. They also comprise the numerous official organs, which, outside of the few large cities, may be reckoned as one for each province. Most of the Russian newspapers are published in the two capitals of St. Petersburg and Moscow. Among provincial towns Saratoff occupies the first place with five journals. The old Tartan capital, and now provincial town of Kazan, represents the extreme of journalistic poverty in the provinces; for, although it contains one of the seven large universities of Russia, it cannot boast of a single politico-literary journal. The number of newspapers and periodicals, however, although gradually increasing, is a very fluctuating one, influenced by the uncertain activity of the intellectual classes, and the censorship, which is still very strict. There are two kinds of censorship—a preliminary supervision of all articles before going to print in the provinces, and an examination only after printing in the capitals. The reading public is almost entirely confined to the larger towns, and at times the supply of journals outstrips the demand of readers. The Polish press has been more severely dealt with than the Russian. On the whole, Russian journalism continues to advance and to increase its influence.

Railroads, Telegraphs and Postal System.—The Russian railroad system was begun by the government in 1838, and now comprises about 21,029 versts of road. A verst is about two-thirds of an English mile. When all the additions now in course of construction are completed there will be about 23,204 versts. Military necessity has greatly developed the railway communications of the empire, which, however, are still very few in comparison with the vast extent of the Russian dominions. The old posting roads on which horses are let out by the government at a few copeks per verst are still the chief means of communication off the main lines of railway, especially north and east. The extension of the Central Asian railway, now terminating near Orenburg, has long been projected, and surveys have already been made for carrying the line past Samarcand and so on to the Indian frontier. The splendid water ways of the country are being brought more into use and must not be forgotten. The telegraphs belong to the government and comprise about 188,000 versts and 2,534 stations. Russia has participated in and accepted the decisions of the international telegraph congress, and the tariff for foreign messages is regulated accordingly. The postal system in European Russia is a fairly good one, but letters often take many months between the capital and the more distant parts of the empire. The post censorship, however, is still in force, and letters are often opened by the officials and read. This is sometimes so neatly done that the recipient of a letter will hardly notice that it has been tampered with.

The Russian Church.—The state religion of Russia, the Russo-Greek Church, officially called the Orthodox Catholic Faith, is a great power in the empire. The Tsar is nominally its head, and is represented by a chief procurer in the high ecclesiastical council. This council is called the Holy Synod, and is presided over by the Metropolitan Archbishop of St. Petersburg and Novgorod. The influence of the church over the masses is immense. Its service is performed in the old Slavonian dialect. It prints its own version of the Bible, censors all religious books, forbids proselytism, and seriously interferes with the regular dispatch of business by the enormous number of holy days which it enjoins should be kept. The absence of a proper spirit of progress in harmony with the times has tended to produce a large number of sects without its pale. Among its higher dignitaries there are men of great learning and culture, but the lower clergy are still ignorant and dissolute, and do not set a very high example before their flocks.

Military and Naval Power.—The nominal strength of the Russian army is now about 2,200,000 men on the war footing and 780,081 in time of peace. The regular army on a peace footing consists of the field army, 603,202 men; reserves, 55,950; depôts, 19,347; sedentaries, 100,592. On a war footing the field army has 1,079,180, the reserves 559,529, the depôts 400,000, and the sedentary troops 163,193. On a war footing the Cossacks and other irregulars are 131,290 strong. The navy consists of the fleets of the Black sea and the Baltic, and of flotillas on the Aral and Caspian seas and in Siberia, comprising about 240 steam vessels. There are about 30 iron-clads. The establishment of a volunteer fleet by public subscriptions, in view of a war with England, has somewhat increased the number of available war ships.

Imports and Exports.—Russian exports consist chiefly of timber, hides, skins, flax, hemp, tallow, wool, linseed, hempseed, etc. The chief imports are sugar, coffee, tea, colonial produce, woollens, cotton, cotton cloths, silk, dyestuffs, wine, fruit, machines, etc. Owing to very bad harvests for several years past the Russian grain export trade has been almost ruined, and the United States, favored by this circumstance and assisted by her vastly superior enterprise, has been enabled to compete successfully with Russia in the grain markets of Europe. America has recently even imported her corn into Russia itself. A great deal of the enterprise in trade and commerce in Russia is due to foreigners, of whom there are very large colonies established in St. Petersburg, Moscow and Odessa as exporters, importers, agents, etc. The direct imports from the United States into Russia during the fiscal year 1879-80 were valued at $13,229,546; exports to the United States, $765,249.

Finances.—The precise amount of Russia's indebtedness is unknown, but that she is very deeply in debt is a matter of certainty. The last war against Turkey has greatly involved the country, inflated the paper currency and added, between 1876 and 1878, an extra sum of 1,015,000,000 rubles to the military expenditure. The interest-bearing portion of the national debt is about £416,500,000 sterling. In the budget of 1880 there are 171,537,501 rubles set down for paying off debt and interest. The budget for 1880 gives ordinary revenue 666,452,434 rubles, and expenditures 666,256,500 rubles. The revenue is raised, inter alia, by poll, passport, excise, tobacco, trade and other taxes. The duty on Russian salt has just been abolished, and the customs duties on all imports raised by 10 per cent. in exchange.

Agriculture.—European Russia is preëminently an agricultural country between the Baltic and the Black seas, producing large quantities of grain in favorable years. The chief cereals raised are wheat, barley, oats, buckwheat, millet and rye. The latter, in the shape of black bread, forms the principal food of the inhabitants. Hemp and flax are much cultivated, and in recent years also potatoes and tobacco. The Crimea has excellent fruit and fair wines. Improvement in the mode of cultivating the soil is very slow, and although modern agricultural implements and machinery have long been introduced into the country, the old-fashioned tools are still largely employed.

Manufactures.—Russian manufactures are still in their infancy. Many of the large works, cotton mills, mines, etc., belong to English capitalists and are carried on under foreign direction, with the aid of foreign skilled labor.

Minerals.—Russia is rich in mineral wealth, which, up to the present, however, has been but very little worked. The Ural mountains, forming the boundary between Siberia and European Russia, abound in gold, platinum, copper, iron of superior and special quality, rock salt, marble and china clay. Gold, silver and lead are also found in the Altai mountains. Coal has been found near Kharkoff and on the steppes of the Don country in the south.

New Year's, 1807, James Rogers advertises in the Albany and country papers: "Printing, rolling and tobacco presses, and various other kinds of machinery, made in the best manner and on short notice, by the subscriber, at his shop in Chapel street, where he has now for sale one of the newest fashioned and most approved printing presses." He was not one who hid his light under a bushel, but an evident believer in the axiom, "Getting into print is next to getting into popularity, if you have good things to sell."

PRINCIPALITY OF SERVIA.

BY CHARLES E. WILBUR, A.M.

Servian—Srbistan. Danish—Serbien. French—Servie. German—Serbien. Russian—Serbliia. Italian—Spanish and Portuguese—Servia. Swedish—Servien. Turkish—Seerb; or, Serbistan.

Location, etc.—Servia is a small principality in southeastern Europe, formerly included in European Turkey. It is bounded on the north by Austria, on the east by Roumania and Bulgaria, on the south by Roumelia and Albania, and on the west by Bosnia. It lies between the 42d and 45th parallels of north latitude, and between 19 and 23 longitude east from Greenwich. Area, 20,850 square miles; population (1878), 1,670,068.

Topography, Climate, etc.—The country is mountainous and densely wooded. The rivers in and touching it are the Morava, Timok, Kalubara and Danube. The landscapes are beautiful. The capital is Belgrade, the population of which is 27,605. The climate is temperate and salubrious, but somewhat cold in the higher regions.

Agriculture.—The soil in the valleys and level districts is fertile, and equally fitted for the rearing of cattle, the favorite occupation of the people, and the production of corn and wine. Not more than 1-24th of the land is under tillage, and 9-10th are forest or wilderness. Oak is the most common wood, but chestnut and fruit trees abound; also, especially, pears, of which there are whole forests in some places. The vegetable products are barley, wheat, oats, hemp, and even rice. Cattle, sheep and goats are also reared. Large droves of swine are fed upon the acorns in the oak forests.

Minerals.—The mountains are believed to be rich in copper and silver, but mining is almost unknown and manufacturing industry is in a very backward condition. The country has been so long agitated by wars that its resources have not been developed. Consequently its exports and imports have been of merely nominal value. But since Servian independence has been established, there are indications of an upward movement.

Government.—The government is essentially republican in form, though until 1878 it formed a part of the Turkish empire. The recognition of Servia's independence, and an important increase of territory to the southward, demanded by Russia at the Berlin Congress in 1878, were granted at that time. The constitution now in force dates from 1869. The land is divided into 17 ocruzia, or circles. Each circle has a prefect and a court of the first order, and sends a deputy to the national parliament. The circles are subdivided into 53 srezi, or arrondissements, and these again into 1,152 obsch'tine, or parishes, each of which has a justice of the peace court. The civil legislature of Servia is modelled after that of Austria. The government comprises a president, who is also minister of foreign affairs, together with ministers of the interior, of justice, of finance, of public worship, of war, and of public works.

Religions.—The inhabitants nearly all belong to the Greek Church, but are independent of the Patriarch of Constantinople. Ecclesiastical affairs are managed by a Metropolitan, whose seat is at Belgrade, and three bishops. For the few who acknowledge the authority of the Pope and the Latin Church, there is a bishop who resides in Diacobar, in Austrian Slavonia. There is religious liberty for all churches and denominations, and much Protestant missionary effort is being turned in that direction. Servia, according to recent estimates, had 298 churches, 651 parishes, 652 priests, besides 38 cloisters.

Army.—The military force is composed of a small body of regulars (less than 6,000), including cavalry and artillery, and a national guard of about 115,000 men, which can easily be raised to 150,000, for every Serb carries arms and is trained to military habits.

Roads, etc.—Methods of communication in Servia are somewhat primitive, most traveling being done on carriage roads. The capital is connected with the principal cities by telegraph lines, but canals and railroads are yet to be built.

Education.—It possesses upwards of 300 educational institutions, including several gymnasia, a lyceum for philosophical and juristic study, a theological seminary, an artillery school, a school of agriculture, 300 elementary schools for boys and 13 for girls. These schools are not under the control of the clergy, and education is consequently making rapid progress.

Revenues, etc.—The latest published accounts give the revenue of the country for the year 1878-79 at 37,597,500 piastres, and the expenses at 37,290,600 piastres, a piastre being equal to about 5 cents United States money. Servia has a foreign public debt of $5,000,000, besides a small domestic debt. The Servians are distinguished for the vigor of their frame, their personal valor, love of freedom and glowing poetical spirit. Their manners and modes of life are exceedingly picturesque and strongly prepossessing to a stranger. They rank among the most gifted and promising members of the Slavic family. No direct trade exists between Servia and the United States.

THE KINGDOM OF SPAIN.

BY GEO. T. FULLERTON, A.B.

Spanish—España. Danish—Spanien. French—Espagne. German—Spanien. Russian—Испания (Yspania).
Italian—Spagna. Portuguese—Hespanha. Swedish—Spanien. Chinese and Japanese— Hsi² Pan² Ya². Turkish—İspanyol. Dutch—Spanjen.

Location, Size, etc.—Spain is a kingdom of southwestern Europe, and forms with Portugal the Pyrenean or Iberian peninsula. It is bounded on the northeast by France, from which it is separated by the Pyrenees mountains, and on the west partly by Portugal; on all other sides by water, i. e., east and south by the Mediterranean sea and the Strait of Gibraltar, on the west by the Atlantic ocean, and north by the Bay of Biscay. It lies between latitude 36° and 43° 48' north, and longitude 3° 20' east and 9° 21' west. The area, including the Balearic and Canary Isles, is 196,031 square miles, making it in extent the sixth among European States. The population in 1877 was 16,625,860.

Topography.—The coast line of Spain, which forms about two-thirds of its perimeter, is 1,370 miles in length. In the north the coast is rocky; in the southwest it is low, sandy and swampy. The east coast is alternately high and low, and a part of it is lined with lagoons, along which salt works are established. The best harbors are in the northwest and west, and the harbor of Cadiz in the southwest is almost unassailable. Spain has 230 rivers, but only a few are navigable. The most important is the Guadalquivir. The lakes are unimportant. The face of the country is very mountainous. There are five distinct belts of mountains across the peninsula. The most prominent of these are the Cantabrian mountains and the Pyrenees in the north. The kingdom, including the nearer islands, is divided into 49 provinces, all but 6 of which are named after their respective capitals. The chief divisions of the kingdom, each of which contains one or more provinces, are: New Castile, La Mancha, Old Castile, Leon, Asturias, Galicia, Estremadura, Andalusia, Murcia, Valencia, Catalonia, Aragon, Navarre, Basque Provinces, and the Balearic and Canary Islands. The Spanish colonies are Cuba and Porto Rico, in America; the Philippines, Carolines, Palaos and Ladrones, in Asia and Oceanica; and the Guinea Islands, in Africa.

Cities.—The principal cities are Madrid, the capital, population (1877), 367,284; Malaga (1877), 130,000; Valencia (1877), 102,582; Seville (1877), 118,888; Granada (1877), 67,326; Saragossa (1877), 67,428; Barcelona (1876), 215,965; and Cadiz (1876), 72,000.

The Climate of Spain is divided into three different zones. The northern zone is mountainous and well watered, and vegetation is luxuriant. Agriculture is the principal occupation. The middle zone is composed of elevated plateaus, swept by the winds and scorched by the sun. It has few rivers, and is not fertile. The temperature is subject to extremes. The southern zone, comprising Andalusia, Murcia and Southern Valencia, is exposed to the hot winds from Africa, and is tropical in summer, but delicious in autumn and spring. The valleys are deep and well watered and the soil well adapted for agriculture.

Flora and Fauna.—Spain is one of the most fruitful of European countries. Wheat, maize, barley, hemp and flax are cultivated, especially the east and north. Saffron and other dye plants flourish in the interior. Mulberry trees are cultivated for silkworms in Valencia, Murcia and Granada. The finer fruits flourish in the south, including the almond, date, fig, orange, citron, pineapple and banana. Spain has on the whole less timber than any other of the large countries of Europe, but forests of evergreen oaks, including the cork tree, are still found in Asturias, the Pyrenees and the Sierra Morena. The vine is everywhere cultivated, but only Andalusia and Valencia furnish large quantities for export. The fauna of Spain is much the same as that of southern France. Wolves, foxes and wild boars are still to be found in the mountainous districts. The Barbary ape is found upon the rock of Gibraltar. The Spanish horse is descended from the Arabian, and has preserved its good qualities. The horses of Seville and Granada are the most valuable. The bulls used in the bull-fights are found in a wild state in the Sierra Morena. Sheep and hogs are raised in large numbers.

Agriculture has lately made rapid progress. At the beginning of this century wheat was not grown in sufficient amount for home consumption. It now is an article of export. Some of the provinces are rich in wine and oil. Agriculture has made especial progress in Biscay, Navarre and Aragon. But the best cultivated lands are the irrigated lands of Granada, Murcia and Valencia, which produce all kinds of fruits and vegetables. The farmers are generally poor, and have to obtain money by mortgaging their crops at large prices. About 53 per cent. of the soil is under cultivation. The farms are small, but the provinces in which the property is most subdivided are the wealthiest.

Trade.—Spain trades most extensively with France, Great Britain, Cuba and the United States. Great Britain receives most of its exports, while France supplies most of its imports. The chief articles of export are wines, metals (especially lead), raisins, olive oil, green fruits, cork and salt. The imports comprise sugar, yarn, raw cotton, iron, machinery, coal and dried fish. Total value of exports to all countries in 1878, according to the official reports, $86,265,330, and of imports from the same for the same year $78,550,080. The value of imports from the United States for the year ending June 30, 1880, was $14,657,884; exports to United States $5,052,419.

Minerals.—The mineral endowments of Spain are very important. Its mines of lead, tin, mercury, silver, iron, copper and rock salt have been celebrated from the earliest times. Iron ores are generally diffused, but the production of iron is small. Linares, in the province of Jaen, and the Sierra de Gador, a spur of the Nevada, are rich in mines of lead. But little copper is produced in Spain. It is all from mines in Andalusia. Tin ores are found only in Galicia. Lead and copper are also found there. The mines of La Mancha formerly furnished antimony. In Catalonia are famous mines of rock salt. Silver is now obtained in the province of Seville. The quick-silver mines of Almaden are the richest in Europe. Coal is found in Asturias and Aragon. Sulphur abounds in Murcia.

Fisheries.—There are important fisheries on the coast. The fish of the Atlantic are preferred to those of the Mediterranean. The transport of salt from Cadiz for the fisheries of Galicia is an important branch of commerce.

The Government of Spain is now a constitutional monarchy. The legislative power is vested in a Cortes, as representative of the Spanish nation. The king is inviolable and not subject to responsibility. He sanctions the laws and exercises the executive power through a ministry. The ministry, in January, 1875, consisted of a president and eight ministers. The departments of the ministry were foreign affairs, interior, justice, finance, commerce and public works, war, marine, and colonies. The legislative department (Cortes) consisted of a senate and a congress. A senator must be a Spaniard, must be 40 years of age, possessed of civil rights, and either be occupant of a high position or one of the large tax-payers. One-fourth of the senate is removed at each election of deputies. The congress is renewed every three years, and is composed of one deputy to 40,000 of the population. A deputy must be a Spaniard, of age, and in the possession of civil rights. The Cortes must meet for at least four months every year. Each house nominates its own officers. The provinces are governed by their own special laws. Each province has its own parliament. The courts of justice comprise the supreme court at Madrid, 15 territorial courts, and 499 courts of ordinary jurisdiction.

Religions.—Nearly the whole population belongs to the Roman Catholic Church. Before the establishment of the Spanish republic in 1868 no other denomination was recognized by law. After the expulsion of Queen Isabella, Protestant congregations were formed, and soon organized into an evangelical synod. Besides the congregations connected with this synod, there are a few Baptist, Scotch Presbyterian and Anglican churches. The whole number of Protestants in 1874 was variously estimated from 30,000 to 120,000.

Army and Navy.—The army of Spain is divided into the active army and the reserve. The active army is recruited wholly by volunteers from 19 to 40 years of age. The term of enlistment is at least two years, at the expiration of which they may re-enlist for at least one year. The reserve is formed of all who have reached their 20th year, excepting those who serve in the active army. No substitutes are accepted. In 1875 the Spanish army numbered about 216,000. Also about 60,000 in Cuba, 9,400 in Porto Rico, and 9,000 in the Philippines, making a total of 294,400. There is a school of infantry cadets at Toledo, and a school of artilleryists and a school of the general staff at Madrid. Spain has 125 fortified places, of which 25 are of the first order. The navy, which in former times commanded all seas, and afterwards greatly declined, has recently begun to improve. The fleet in 1874 consisted of in all 202 vessels, with 894 guns. The navy was then manned by 9,700 sailors and 5,000 marines.

Railways, etc.—The first railroad in Spain was opened in 1848, from Barcelona to Mataro, 18½ miles. Their extension has since been pursued with some vigor, but their progress has been less rapid than in any other European country. Their financial condition is unsatisfactory in consequence of the state of Spanish industry, the want of good roads, and the frequent political disturbances. The aggregate length of railroads in 1880 was over 4,000 miles. The total length of telegraph lines in operation is about 10,000 miles; number of stations, 273. There are several canals, some of them on a magnificent scale, but mostly unfinished and unfit for navigation. The chief of these is the Imperial canal, begun by Charles V., and extending along the right bank of the Ebro.

Education.—In 1852 there were in Spain less than 2,000,000 persons who could read, and still less were able to write. Since then the government has made efforts to improve public instruction, and the higher institutions of learning have been especially cared for. Spain has 10 universities. The three universities at Madrid, Barcelona and Granada have each five faculties; two of the others have each four faculties; one, three faculties, and the others but two. The theological faculties have been abolished in all the universities, and theological instruction is imparted in the seminaries connected with the episcopal sees. Normal schools have been established in the capitals of the several provinces. There are also a school of engineering, commercial schools, a college for the deaf and dumb, and a school for the blind. The literary societies of Spain cannot compare with similar societies in other European countries. The royal library and six others are in Madrid, one in the Escorial, two at Valencia, two at Saragossa, and one at Toledo.

Revenues.—The finances of Spain have long been in a wretched condition. Even the extensive sale of national and church property has failed to restore the equilibrium. The revenue for 1877-8 was $147,200,000; the expenditure for the same year, $147,150,000. Payment of interest on the foreign debt was suspended on July 1st, 1873, and for this reason the receipts were greater than the expenditures. A report of January 1, 1880, estimates the public debt at $2,151,836,200.

THE CANARY ISLANDS.

BY HENRY A. TODD, A.B.

Spanish—Canárias. Danish—Kanarische Inseln. French—Les Iles Canaries. German—Kanarische Inseln. Russian—Kanarsky Ostrov. Italian—Le Isole Canarie. Portuguese—Isole Canares. Swedish—Kanarische Inseln. Turkish—Canaria Adalari.

Location, Size, etc.—The Canaries, or Canary Islands, a group of islands forming a province of Spain, off the northwest coast of Africa, in latitude $27^{\circ} 40'$ – 29° north, and longitude $13^{\circ} 25'$ – $18^{\circ} 16'$ west. The group consists of seven large islands and seven small ones, with a total area of 3,800 square miles, containing a population, in 1870, of 283,859. The more important islands, counting from east to west, are Lanzarote, Fuerteventura, Gran Canaria, Tenerife, Gomera, Palma, and Hierro or Ferro. They are of volcanic origin. The coasts are steep and rocky, and the surface is diversified with lofty mountains, narrow gorges and fertile valleys. The most lofty elevation is the Peak of Tenerife, which rises to a height of 12,182 feet, and can be seen from more than 100 miles out at sea. From crevices in the mountains sulphurous vapors are continually issuing. There are many torrents, but no rivers, and fresh water is scarce. Minerals are few and of little importance.

The Climate is generally mild and regular, varying from 60° to 87° . Much annoyance, however, is caused by the south and southeast winds, which, coming from over the hot desert of Africa, burn up vegetation and produce disease. The rainy season lasts from November to February.

Vegetation varies according to the elevation; in the first 1,300 feet above the sea level the date palm, sugar cane and other African species of vegetation flourish; then up to 2,800 feet, vines, corn, olives, chestnuts, etc., grow; in the next 1,200 feet laurels and evergreens are the chief growth; above this, cold and dryness hinder vegetation, but pines, broom and junipers grow.

Cities, etc.—Teneriffe is the largest island, with an area of 877 square miles, and population, 95,000; it contains the capital, Santa-Cruz de Santiago, which is the chief seaport, population over 13,000. The largest city of the group is Las Palmas, on the island of Gran Canaria, a well-built town of 17,400.

Products.—Formerly the chief product was wine, but the vines have been mostly destroyed by grape disease; now the chief product is cochineal, of which over 6,000,000 pounds were produced in 1870. Vegetables, nuts, fruits, cereals, tobacco, potatoes are important products. The annual exports amount to near $3,200,000; imports, $3,100,000. The exports are chiefly cochineal, nuts and fruits; and imports, principally manufactures. No direct trade exists between the islands and the United States. The principal birds are the African vulture, falcon, buzzard, kite, goldfinch, wren, magpie and canary. The eel is the only fresh water fish. A small scorpion and frog are the only reptiles.

Teneriffe—William H. Dabney, consul.

Orotava—Peter S. Reid, consular agent.

Palma—Frederick W. Lavers, consular agent.

That veteran Advertising Agent, S. M. Pettengill, gives the following reasons as to why Concentration Reduces the Expense: "There is no objection to a man's doing his own advertising, if he thinks best; neither is there to his acting as his own postmaster, and carrying his own letters to their several places of destination, instead of sending them through the mails; making his own hats and shoes, and doing directly himself all that he requires, according to the primitive method, before the division of labor and the systematization of business. Perhaps, having come in possession of our Directory, in which so much information is given, he may be tempted to make the experiment. But experience will soon teach him, if he does not take our word for it, that we can do it better and cheaper for him than he can do it for himself. It is our specialty. We can save him not only an immense amount of labor and trouble, and that, too, free of all expense to him for our services, but doing this business as it were, by the wholesale, we can do it for less money, in the aggregate, than he would be obliged to pay to the publishers, who do not make to individual advertisers the discount they are accustomed to make to their agents."

THE CAPE VERD ISLANDS.

BY HENRY A. TODD, A.B.

Portuguese—Ilhas Verdes. Danish—Öerne det Grøne Forbjergs. French—Îles du Cap-Vert. German—Inseln des Grünen Vorgebirges. Russian—Zelióny Mys. Italian—Isole-del-Capo-Verde. Spanish—Islas del Cabo verde. Swedish—Öarne den Gröna Udden.

Location, etc.—The Cape Verd Islands, a group belonging to Portugal, 320 miles west of Cape Verd in Africa, lying in latitude $14^{\circ} 45' - 17^{\circ} 19'$ north, and longitude $22^{\circ} 45' - 25^{\circ} 25'$ west. There are 14 islands, of which the 10 principal are Santiago, Fogo, Brava, Mayo, Boavista, Sao Nicholas, Santa Antonio, Sao Vicente, Santa Luzia, and Sal; the other four are barren and uninhabited. The total area is about 1,700 square miles; population 261,746.

Topography, Climate, Soil, etc.—The islands are of volcanic origin, and all very mountainous, with low shores. The highest elevation is an active volcano on Fogo, 9,157 feet in height. The climate is unhealthy during the rainy season, which lasts from August to November. Water is deficient, and sometimes no rain occurs for several seasons. The soil is dry but fertile and vegetation luxuriant, yielding African and southern European products, oranges, lemons, bananas, melons, rice, archil, maize, sugar, cotton, coffee, tobacco and indigo. There are very few trees. Amber is found on the coasts, and much salt is made from evaporation of the sea water.

Animals, etc.—The principal wild animals are monkeys and bisam cats. A few of the European domestic animals thrive; asses, goats and fowls are numerous; turtles are found on the coast; whales sometimes appear, and several kinds of fish are caught. There are no venomous reptiles. An important occupation is cattle-feeding. The revenue and expenses about balance, amounting to near $200,000.

Cities, etc.—The chief cities and ports are Porto Praya, on Santiago, and Porto Grande, on San Vicente. The inhabitants are mostly negroes, ignorant and dirty, harmless, indolent and superstitious; they are mostly Roman Catholics. The islands are under a governor-in-chief, appointed by the crown, who has both civil and military authority. These islands were discovered by the Portuguese about the middle of the 15th century.

THE MADEIRA ISLANDS.

BY J. C. TALCOTT.

Portuguese—Ilhas de Madeira. Danish—Maderiske Öer. French—Îles de Madère. German—Made(ï)ra Inseln. Russian—Maderiskite Ostrová. Italian—Isole della Madera. Spanish—Islas de Madera. Swedish—Maderiska Öarne.

Location, etc.—The Madeira Islands, belonging to Portugal, lie near the western coast of Africa, in the North Atlantic, between latitude $32^{\circ} 36' - 32^{\circ} 53'$ north, and longitude $16^{\circ} 40' - 17^{\circ} 20'$ west. The area is 345 square miles. Madeira is the chief island. Its surface is rough and broken, and the ground high. The average elevation is 2,000 feet and the highest point is the Pico Ruivo, 6,050 feet. But the island has many very fertile valleys, in which is grown the grape from which is made the celebrated Madeira wine. The climate is very equable, the thermometer averaging 74° in summer and 64° in winter.

Population, Trade, etc.—The number of inhabitants in 1877 was 121,753, chiefly negroes, Moors and Portuguese. The largest city and chief port of the islands is Funchal, with a population of 25,000.

The imports in 1872 were $1,500,000, composed chiefly of cotton and woolen goods and iron implements. The exports were $850,000, consisting mostly of wine, sugar and coffee. Since 1852 the grape disease has hurt the vine culture which made the island so noted. This has led the people to cultivate the coffee tree instead of the vine, and in this they are meeting with success. The climate is so mild and healthy and the temperature so even that the island has become a favorite resort for invalids affected by pulmonary diseases.

THE KINGDOM OF SWEDEN.

BY REV. E. EDWIN HALL.

Swedish—Sverige. Danish—Sverig. French—Suède. German—Schweden. Russian—Shvétsiia; or, Shvetzia. Italian—Svezia. Spanish—Suécia. Portuguese—Suécia. Chinese and Japanese—Jui Tien³ Kwo. Turkish—Shved. Dutch—Zweden.

Position, Size, etc.—Sweden is a kingdom of Northwestern Europe, which occupies the eastern and larger portion of the Scandinavian peninsula. About one-sixth of the country lies within the Polar circle. On the east of Sweden, from its southern extremity to 66° north latitude, extend the Baltic and the Gulf of Bothnia, which divide it from Russia; from thence the two countries are contiguous to the most northern point of the kingdom. On the west of Sweden is Norway; the boundary between these two countries runs along the range of the Kiölen mountains as far south as the 65° north latitude; from thence the western boundary lies on the Skager Rack and the Cattegat, and the strait called the Sound, which extends to the most southern extremity of the kingdom, and separates it from the Danish island of Zealand. South of Sweden is the western part of the Baltic, which separates it from Germany. It lies between 55° 20' and 69° north latitude, and 11° 18' 30" and 24° 13' east longitude. Its length is somewhat more than 900 miles; its average breadth 190 miles. Its area is 170,979 square miles. Population in 1879, 4,568,901.

Topography.—The Scandinavian peninsula rises gradually from the west coast of the Baltic until it reaches its greatest elevation in the great mountain chain dividing Sweden and Norway. These hills are not a continued chain of summits, but a succession of large plateaus from 20 to 30 miles across, from which the culminating points project. The northern part of the mountain region of Sweden has a great uniformity of surface, with some high mountains and a considerable tract always covered with snow. It is estimated that 720 square miles of the area of the kingdom are covered with perpetual snow and ice. Generally speaking Sweden may be said to be a flat country; while there are some ranges of high ground and detached hills, it is on the whole wonderfully level. In the northern portions, containing 100,000 square miles, exclusive of lakes and swamps, the meadows and enclosed pastures taken together occupy only 1,500 square miles; the southern portions contain about 50,000 square miles, exclusive of lakes and swamps, and the meadows and enclosed pastures occupy 5,062 square miles. The cultivated fields cover less than 3,500 square miles.

Subdivisions, Cities, etc.—Sweden is divided into three principal sections. The most southern is called Götaland, extending to about 58° 45' north latitude; the central section, Sweden proper, extending as far as 60° 40' north latitude; and the northern section, called Norland, comprising the remainder and largest section of the kingdom. Each of these great sections was in course of time subdivided into several provinces as it seemed requisite for the purposes of administration. It was formerly divided into 18, but is now divided into 24 läns or governments. Stockholm is the capital of Sweden, and is situated at the junction of the lake Mälarn with the Baltic. There is probably no capital in Europe, except perhaps Constantinople, which can be compared with it as to the beauty of its environs: population in 1879, 173,433. Gottenburg, a seaport city, the harbor most conveniently situated for foreign trade, had in 1878 a population of 68,756; Nordkoping, population in 1878, 26,927.

Climate.—Meteorological observations, continued for many years, show that the climate of Sweden is much milder than might be expected from its high northern latitude. The winter is not so cold as in countries in the same latitude farther to the east, while the mean temperature of the summer is but little inferior. For five or six months the northern parts of the country, from the summits of the mountains to the bottoms of the valleys, are covered with ice and snow. In the central parts the winter seldom lasts more than three or four months. In the south and west parts the climate is very similar to that of the north of Germany.

Flora and Fauna.—The forests are very large, sometimes extending 80 miles in length, with a width exceeding 25 miles. A great portion of the northern provinces [north of 64° north latitude] is destitute of trees. Nevertheless the forests cover more than one-fourth of the surface. The forests in the northern region consist of birch, pines, firs, etc., which in the central part are intermixed with ash, willow, linden and maple; and in the southern with oak, beech and elm. The most common wild animals are the wolf, bear, fox, elk, reindeer, roebuck, glutton, ermine and a species of lynx. Partridges are plenty, as are woodcock and web-footed wild fowl; the wild swan and eider are hunted for their down.

Agriculture.—The soil of Sweden, though mostly thin and poor, has been greatly improved by the encouragement of the government and the industry of the inhabitants. The climate and soil are less favorable to the growth of grain than in most other parts of Europe. The agricultural products consist chiefly of rye, barley, oats, wheat, potatoes, hemp, flax, and almost all the fruits and vegetables of Western Europe. In some parts of Sweden the lands are well cultivated, and the produce is equal to the best lands in England and France. The uncertainty of the climate and the chances of early frosts are the greatest obstacles with which the agriculturist has to contend.

Trade.—The principal articles of export from Sweden are iron and timber; next in importance are copper, alum, tar, cobalt, hemp, furs, and some minor articles. The chief articles of import are sugar, coffee, salt, hides, cotton and cotton stuffs, wool and woolen stuffs, wines, silk, bacon and tobacco. The value of exports in the year 1879 exceeded $62,500,000. The total value of imports in the same year was over $80,000,000. The value of imports into Sweden and Norway from the United States for the year ending June 30, 1880, was $2,386,403. The value of exports to the United States from Norway and Sweden in the same year was $688,963.

Minerals.—The mines of Sweden are a considerable source of national wealth. Iron ore is found in many districts, but is most abundant in the central provinces, which are known as the region of the mines. The iron of these mines is of very superior quality. All iron works and mining operations are under the control of a college of mines. Copper and lead are also found, and there are rich mines of cobalt.

Fisheries form a considerable branch of industry. It is stated that 88 different kinds of salt and fresh water fish are brought to the markets, among which the turbot is common. There are also oysters and lobsters. A smaller kind of herrings, called strömmings, is caught along the whole extent of coast on the Gulfs of Finland and Bothnia. This fish is rarely exported, but forms a large branch of internal commerce. The salmon fisheries are also very productive.

The Government is a monarchy, hereditary in the male line, with a representative diet, one of the most ancient in Europe. The King must be a Lutheran. He is assisted by a council, including the ministers of justice, foreign affairs, war, marine, interior, finance, and public worship, and three councillors. The army and all foreign relations are under the immediate control of the King; but he cannot decide on any matter touching any other branch of the government, without the concurrence of the council. The representative assembly consists of four chambers, composed respectively of deputies from the nobility, clergy, burghers, and cultivators. The chambers deliberate and vote separately. In ordinary cases the concurrence of three orders is necessary to make an act valid. In most cases the decrees of the diet must be submitted to the King, who has an absolute veto.

The Religion of the State, and of nearly all the inhabitants, is the Lutheran. All religions are tolerated, but only Lutherans can be advanced to any employment under the State.

The Swedish Army comprises three different kinds of troops, viz: Enlisted soldiers always on pay and duty, 37,277 men; reserves, 107,673; militia, 8,237; in all, 153,187 officers and men. In 1879 the navy consisted of 14 iron-clads, 28 steamers, 7 sailing vessels, 89 galleys, 384 guns, with an effective force of 7,000 men and a reserve of 35,000.

Railways, etc.—By means of canals, connecting lakes in different parts of the kingdom, a system of internal navigation was long ago established, which facilitated the conveyance of iron, timber and other bulky products from the interior to the coast. One of these canals connects the Cattegat with the Baltic. In 1880 there were in Sweden 3,528 miles of railway.

Education.—Elementary instruction is general. Every adult must be able to read the Scriptures before he can exercise any act of majority. There are two universities, those of Upsal and Lund; provincial high schools, and special schools for military and naval service, history and belles-lettres. Libraries and collections of art exist in all the cities. Ordinary public revenue, 39,640,000 crowns; ordinary public expenses, 51,836,800 crowns. At the close of 1878 the public debt incurred for building railways was $50,500,000.

THE CONFEDERATION OF SWITZERLAND.

BY CHARLES E. WILBUR, A.M.

German—Swiss, Suisse; or, Schweiz. Danish—Schweiz. French—La Suisse. Russian—Швейцария.
Italian—Svizzera. Spanish—Suiza. Portuguese—Suíça. Swedish—Schweiz.
Chinese and Japanese—Shih Wei Shih Kwo. Turkish—Svitzera.

Position, Size, etc.—Switzerland is an inland country of Europe, situated between 45° 48' and 47° 49' north latitude, and 5° 55' and 10° 30' longitude east from Greenwich. It is bounded on the north by France and Germany, on the east by Austria and Italy, on the south by Italy, and on the west by France. Its superficial area, without lakes, which are numerous, is 15,992 square miles, or one-fourth that of England and Wales. Its greatest length from east to west is 216 miles, and its greatest width from north to south is 130 miles. The population by latest census (1881) was 2,846,102.

Topography.—Switzerland is the most mountainous country of Europe. Its principal chains are the Alps and the Jura. Their ramifications fill more than half the country. The mean elevation of the highest chain is from 9,000 to 15,200 feet. Many very beautiful and picturesque lakes are interspersed among the mountains, among the most noted of which are Lucerne, Geneva, Constance and Neuchatel. These, together with the mountain scenery, cause Switzerland to be a place of great resort for tourists. The climate varies greatly with elevation above the sea-level. At a height exceeding 9,500 feet the mountains are covered with perpetual snow, which, melting and freezing, descends along the valleys in glaciers to a much lower level, and in this way covers the elevated part of the country with a vast sea of ice. Below the level of perpetual snow the surface of Switzerland has been divided into a series of belts, characterized by different climates and productions. The highest of these lies at an elevation of 6,900 feet, and the others at 4,880, 4,350, 3,000, 1,800 and 750 respectively. At a higher elevation than 6,400 feet the land is only inhabited by herdsmen during the summer months. The most populous part lies between the altitudes of 1,250 and 2,150 feet. The temperature of this region is about the same as that of London. For the year it averages 47-95° Fahr.

Divisions.—The country is divided into cantons, as follows: Zurich, Bern, Lucerne, Uri, Schwytz, Unterwalden (upper), Unterwalden (lower), Glarus, Zug, Freiburg, Soleure, Basel (town), Basel (district), Schaffhausen, Appenzell (exterior), Appenzell (interior), St. Gall, Grisons, Aargau, Thurgau, Tessin, Vaud, Valais, Neuchatel, Geneva. The capital is Bern, with a population of about 30,000. The other principal towns are Geneva (population, with suburbs, 68,165), Basel or Basle (population 45,000), Zurich (population 22,000), and Lucerne (population 14,524).

Flora, etc.—The trees are fir, maple, oak, walnut, chestnut and mulberry. In the uncultivated part of the country, the bear, the wolf, and the larger birds of prey are still met with; and the chamois is hunted. The rivers and lakes abound with fine fish, and more especially trout. Wood-cutting is one of the chief employments of the people. During the summer cattle are driven into the mountains and tended by herdsmen, and there butter and cheese are made. The value of the products of the dairy is between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000 annually. The sheep are of inferior breed and their wool is short and coarse; but the goats are numerous and fine.

Agriculture.—In Vaud and Neuchatel the cultivation of the vine is the chief occupation of the people; and in the Thurgau hill-country, more particularly on the shores of the Lake of Constance, there are extensive orchards. It will give some idea of the extent to which Switzerland is cultivated to state that out of every 100 square miles of surface, 30 are occupied by rocks, glaciers and water, 20 by pastures, 17 by forests, 11 by arable lands, 20 by meadows, and 1 by vineyards.

Manufactures.—The manufacturing districts are chiefly in the northern districts. The chief are at Zurich, silk-stuffs, to the value of $8,000,000 annually, and cottons; at St. Gall and Appenzell, cottons; in Aargau and Glarus, cottons, linens, silks and hosiery; at Basel, silk-stuffs to the value of $7,000,000, leather, paper and tobacco; in Aargau and Lucerne, straw-plaiting; in Neuchatel, watch-making and cotton-printing; in Geneva, watch-making and jewelry.

Trade.—Although Switzerland is inland, its commerce in proportion to population has long exceeded that of any other country. The chief imports are corn, salt, salt fish, raw silks and cottons, fruits and tropical produce, and the metals employed in watch-making. The exports are wood and charcoal, cattle, tallow, cheese and butter, silks and cottons, watches and jewelry. The annual value of foreign trade is estimated at $90,000,000, and domestic at $135,000,000. There is very little direct trade between Switzerland and the United States, the interchange of commerce between the two nations being effected through the merchants of other countries.

Government.—Switzerland is essentially a confederacy composed of 25 cantons. The cantons are divided into two classes, absolute democracies and representative democracies. In the former the chief power belongs to the Landesgemeinde, an assembly of the whole adult male population, which meets once a year to pass laws, and to regulate the taxes and expenditures of the canton. In the other class, the representative cantons, a great council is elected by the people, and to it are deputed most of the powers of the Landesgemeinde. The constitution of 1874 provided for a federal assembly, to which was confided the control of the army, the conduct of foreign affairs, the settlement of disputes between the cantons, and the management of the police and post office. The federal assembly consists of two chambers—1st, the State Council (Stände Rath); 2d, the National Council (National Rath). The former is composed of 44 members, two representing each canton, and the latter of 135 members, elected by the cantons in the proportion of one member to 20,000 inhabitants. These bodies depute the executive authority to the Federal Council (Bundes Rath), consisting of seven members, and holding office for three years. The president is merely one of the council, and has but little of the power and few of the privileges of president of the United States. There is also a court, called the federal tribunal (Bundes Gericht), which acts as a high court of appeals, and consists of nine members, elected by the federal assembly. In the absence of great landed estates, there is no powerful aristocratic class. There are no titles of Swiss origin, families and individuals possessing such distinctions deriving them from abroad.

Religions.—There is the fullest religious freedom in Switzerland. The Swiss reformation spread chiefly from Basel, Berne, Zurich and Geneva, and consequently the chief Protestant districts are the countries communicating with these towns. The Alpine region is almost entirely Roman Catholic, the seven Catholic cantons being Lucerne, Zug, Schwytz, Uri, Unterwalden, Valais and Tessin. Out of 1,000 Swiss, 411 are Roman Catholic, 587 Protestants, and 2 Jews. A new sect called Old Catholics, a moderate reform from the Romish Church, have some following in Switzerland, but of late is diminishing in numbers and zeal.

Army.—There is no standing army in Switzerland, but every citizen is obliged to serve as a soldier, and military drill is taught at all the schools. The Swiss regular force numbers 84,000; the reserve 50,000. The whole expense of the military establishment was, in 1876, estimated at 14,655,975 francs.

Education.—In no country is elementary instruction more widely diffused. Parents are compelled to send their children to school, or to have them privately taught between the ages of 6 and 12 years. There are universities on the German model in Basel, Bern and Zurich, and academies on the French plan at Geneva and Lausanne. The number of clubs for scientific, literary, musical and social purposes is remarkable.

Railways, etc.—Internal communication has long been facilitated in Switzerland by excellent roads, and every advantage has been taken of the numerous lakes to introduce steam navigation. The plain is now overspread, from one end to the other, with a network of railways, which in many directions send ramifications into the Alpine valleys, thus connecting closely all parts of the country. On the 1st of January, 1880, the Swiss system of completed railways embraced 1,478 miles, owned by 13 companies. There is one mile of railway to every 10 square miles of superficial area.

Revenues.—The latest published statistics (1876) give the amount of public revenue at 21,685,566 francs. Expenditures for the same year were 21,913,766 francs. There is no federal public debt in Switzerland, but some of the cantons have debts of their own. Some, also, have large public properties, from which they derive considerable annual revenues.

Characteristics.—The Swiss are an ingenious, liberty-loving race, and have made great sacrifices for the boon of civil and religious freedom. They have the honor of having originated the free public school system. Most of them belong to the great Teutonic family of nations, and speak the German language, though French blood and language have been introduced to a considerable extent, while many of the inhabitants of the southern cantons are Italian in speech and habits.

It is indispensable for a successful conduct of any business to know the "Which, Where and How," to bring customers. An agent of long experience and deep observation, says:—"Two things are indispensable to every business man; first, a good article which the multitude want; second, to apprise them of the fact in the shortest possible time and in the least expensive manner. The attainment of these objects is equivalent to success, and in securing them the proper economy of time is an important desideratum. The business man has the article which he believes the public want; and the question immediately arises: How shall it be made known? The answer is: THE NEWSPAPER. But which, and where, and how; and last, but not least, what will it cost? are correlative questions which require knowledge and experience, and cannot be so easily or quickly answered. This is the legitimate province of the advertising agent, and can be acquired only by years of special training, industry, experience and skill. In this capacity we offer ourselves to the advertising public, with full confidence in our ability to serve them."

THE EMPIRE OF TURKEY.

BY REV. HENRY O. DWIGHT, OF CONSTANTINOPLE.

Turkish—Memallik-y-Mah'roossé. Danish—Tyrkiel. French—La Turquie. German—Türkei. Russian—Turtsiia. Italian—Turchia. Spanish and Portuguese—Turquia. Swedish—Turkiet. Chinese and Japanese—Tu⁴ Erh Ki. Dutch—Turkije.

Government.—The Turkish empire is ruled by the Sultan, who has absolute power to make decrees for the government of his subjects, and for the direction of the affairs of the empire, as well as for the disposal of the revenues. The principle of government is theocratic. The Sultan is the "Shadow of God," and so worthy of the greatest reverence. He is, however, supposed to be controlled by Divine revelation found in the Koran. The Sultan of Turkey is the Caliph of Islam or supreme chief of all Mohammedans. The title gives him little power, however, outside of his own realms. The administration of government rests nominally with the Sultan's ministers, or heads of departments. But the ministers are not allowed independence of action, and practically the Sultan may control all details of administration. He often interferes without reference to the ministry in such details. A constitution of Turkey exists, and it provides for a Parliament, of which one house is elected by the people. But the constitution and its Parliament are in suspense. The Sultan and his ministers make no pretense of guiding their actions by constitutional methods. For purposes of administration Turkey is divided into 35 provinces, which are governed by high officials sent from Constantinople. Besides these, Egypt, Bulgaria, Samos, Eastern Roumelia, and the Lebanon are provinces, in which the arbitrary power of the Sultan is, by special arrangement, suspended, in order to allow the people a voice in affairs. The officials of government throughout Turkey are corrupt, oppressing the people and defrauding the government for their own pecuniary advantage. For this state of affairs there is no remedy, as the courts commonly sell their verdicts to the highest bidder, while officials detected in embezzlement never lose social and rarely official standing.

Area and Population.—The area and population are estimated, and not obtained by a general census. In 1879 the estimates, after deducting the cessions made under the treaty of Berlin of 1878, were as follows: Turkish possessions in Europe, Asia and Africa, 1,116,848 square miles, and population 21,000,000, of which there are about 16,000,000 Mahometans.

Finances.—The bonded debt of Turkey is about $1,000,000,000. Aside from this there is a large floating debt. Interest on the bonds has not been paid since 1876. Revenue is raised by collection of a tithe of all produce: by taxes on manufactures; on the consumption of salt and tobacco, and by customs duties levied on both exports and imports. All non-Moslems in the empire also pay a special tax for exemption from military service, in which they are not allowed to participate. The resources of the country might be made to yield revenue enough for all demands. The revenue is, however, squandered by dishonest officials, and by an extravagant Sultan. Turkey is therefore bankrupt. German officials have lately been engaged to attempt a reorganization of the finances of Turkey. These German officials have been placed in subordinate positions, and the prospect for the success of their effort is doubtful.

Army and Navy.—The Turkish army nominally consists of 600,000 men. The active force is probably not more than 200,000. The army is maintained by conscription, which applies only to the Mohammedan subjects of the empire. The army is well drilled and is armed with American breech-loading rifles and German Krupp cannon. The Turkish soldiers are sturdy and of great endurance. But the officers are ill taught, and the commissariat and quartermaster's department are contemptible. The ordnance department receives great attention. The Turkish navy embraces many fine iron-clads made in England. It is, however, inefficient, owing to a lack of sailorlike qualities among the Turks.

Commerce.—The Turkish export trade is very largely in the hands of foreigners. The coasting trade also is open to the competition of foreign ships to a very great extent. Oppressive taxation on ship-building limits the development of purely native commerce. A law prohibits the construction by Turkish subjects of ships of more than 500 tons burden. Only one-fifth of the tonnage entering the harbor of Constantinople is under the Turkish flag. The exports of Turkey are dyestuffs, gums, drugs, ores, silk, cotton, breadstuffs, wool, rags and box-wood. Turkey imports all sorts of manufactured goods, including those made from her own crude materials. From the United States she imports large quantities of petroleum and a limited amount of rum, firearms and machinery.

Manufactures.—Manufactures are burdened by oppressive taxation. Some small production of silk stuffs and woolen goods of coarse texture, and a more considerable manufacture of heavily napped rugs and carpets, form the whole result of skilled industry in Turkey. Guns and cutlery of a very coarse description are also produced, but as a rule foreign wares have possession of the Turkish markets.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—The principal revenues of the Turkish government are derived from products of the soil, of which one-tenth goes to the government. The result is oppressive and the farmers of the country are unable to develop its resources. The implements used in agriculture are rough copies of the most ancient models. Fertilizers are not used. No attempt is ever made to improve the quality of the products of the soil. No care is exercised in breeding live stock. The soil is naturally rich and the climate favorable to agriculture, but there are few roads to facilitate moving the portion of the crop which remains after paying the government tithe. Vast numbers of sheep are raised by the Turkish farmers. The flocks wander over the country under care of shepherds, ascending the mountains in summer and returning to the plains in the winter. Butter and cheese are made from the milk of sheep and goats. Cows are small and yield little milk. Horses are small and oxen poor. A species of buffalo is much used for farm work and for heavy draughts on the roads. Camels are also raised in Asia Minor, Mesopotamia, and the whole southern part of the empire.

Agricultural and Mineral.—Wheat, Indian corn, barley, rye and millet are staples in all parts of Turkey. Rice is cultivated in the lowlands of European Turkey and Asia Minor. Silk is cultivated in some parts of European Turkey, Asia Minor and Mesopotamia. Cotton is raised in Southern Asia Minor and Egypt. Tobacco is a universal staple and fine in quality. Sugar is abundant in Egypt. Valonia, madder root and willow berries are exported as dyestuffs from Western Asia Minor. Gum tragacanth is found in Asia Minor and gum arabic in Yemen. Coffee is also found in Yemen. Rose oil (attar of roses) is produced abundantly on the southern slopes of the Balkan mountains in European Turkey. Opium is found in Western Asia Minor. Wool and mohair are staple productions in Asia Minor. Grapes abound throughout the empire, as well as figs, peaches, apricots, apples and pears. Walnuts, filberts, chestnuts and almonds are also abundant. Dates are produced in Mesopotamia, and oranges on the whole seacoast of Syria. Coal is abundant along the southern coast of the Black sea. Mines of copper, lead and silver also exist in Asia Minor. Iron is abundant. Many valuable veins of all these metals have been discovered, but have not yet been worked. Rock salt is mined in the province of Castamowni, on the southern Black sea coast. Emery is found near Smyrna, and meerschaum in great abundance near Broosa, in ancient Bythinia.

The Postal System.—The Turkish postal system is very inefficient. It extends throughout the empire, but delivery is very irregular. The mails are carried by mounted post-riders, excepting on the routes along the seaboard, which are served by steamers. Mails are commonly sent out once a week. Postage is very high for internal correspondence, varying according to the distance. Postage on foreign correspondence is fixed by the postal union at five cents per half ounce. The working of this regulation is peculiar. A man residing in a Turkish city a thousand miles from Constantinople pays five cents on a letter sent to America by way of that city. But if his letter is to be delivered in Constantinople he must pay thirty cents postage upon it. The Turkish postal administration is so poor that foreign powers have post-offices of their own in many of the great seaports of the empire. In Constantinople such post-offices are maintained by England, France, Austria, Germany and Russia. These post-offices receive letters for all parts of the world, and each one makes use of the stamps of the government to which it belongs.

All of these foreign post-offices are money order offices in full relation with the United States post-office under the regulations of the postal union.

Railroads and Telegraphs.—There are about 600 miles of railroad in Turkey. No one of the four railways commenced within the last twenty years has been completed so as to form connections with any of the European railway systems. A railroad from Constantinople extends to the foot of the Balkan mountains. Another from Salonica extends nearly to the frontier of Servia. Engineering difficulties have deterred the Turkish government from completing either of these roads. Two railroads from Smyrna are owned and worked by English companies, but these are merely local roads. The telegraphic system of Turkey is very complete. The telegraphs are, however, owned by the government, the tariff is high, and any operator is at liberty to refuse to send a dispatch if he does not understand it, or deems it to be of a political character.

Languages Spoken.—The medley of languages found in the Turkish empire may be inferred from the list of newspapers published in Constantinople. Of these 8 are Turkish papers, 1 Arabic, 1 Persian, 7 Armenian, 5 Armeno-Turkish (Turkish written with the Armenian alphabet), 3 Greek, 3 Greco-Turkish (Turkish written with the Greek alphabet), 2 Bulgarian, 2 Hebrew-Spanish (Spanish written with the Hebrew alphabet as used by the Jews of Turkey), 1 Italian, 1 English, and 6 French. This list of newspapers varies slightly from month to month, as newspapers are suspended or suppressed by the Turkish government for very trivial offenses of language. The numbers are not materially affected by these mishaps, however, since a suppressed newspaper commonly reappears under another name.

Religions.—Mohammedanism is the State religion of Turkey, and is the religion of three-fourths of the inhabitants of the empire. Dissenters from this religion are tolerated and are now allowed freedom of worship. They are not, however, treated as the equals of Mohammedans in questions of civil rights. They are deprived of the right to serve in the army; are not allowed to testify against Mohammedans in the courts, and are not admitted to positions of responsibility under the government. Next to the Mohammedans the principal of the 16 religious sects of Turkey are the Greeks, the Armenians and the Jews. The Greeks and Armenians both reject the claims of the Pope of Rome. They differ from each other and from other Christian sects of Turkey on questions of doctrine which date back more than a thousand years. All the various religious sects which reject Mohammedanism are treated by the Turkish government as separate nations and are governed under the Sultan by their religious chiefs. Hence they are all at odds. They do not intermarry and rarely have common business interests. They are always ready to scheme against each other, joining the Turkish authorities to defeat political or other aspirations developed by any one sect. The Jews of Turkey are descended from the Jews driven from Spain in the 16th century. They speak the Spanish language. As in other lands, they number among their ranks both the richest and the poorest men in the country. All the people of Turkey are very religious. They pay very great attention to the forms of religion. The Greeks, for instance, fast 238 days in every year. But it is a characteristic of all these people that their attention to religious forms produces no corresponding attention to morality. As a rule, therefore, dishonesty and deceit appear in every detail of life, and are not punished by public opinion. Crimes of violence are frequent and are often unpunished. Even the church authorities rarely visit censure upon those guilty of such crimes.

Education.—Schools exist in all parts of the Turkish empire, maintained separately by each religious sect for the instruction of its own adherents. The schools of the Christian sects of Turkey are rapidly improving in character and efficiency. But their method of instruction leaves very much to be desired, and their text-books are generally poor. These schools are often imitations of the schools of the American missionaries, and the fine text-books published by the missionaries are increasingly used. The schools have arrangements for the free education of indigent pupils. No educational facilities for girls were deemed needful until American missionaries proved the advantages of education for women. The mission schools for girls are now extensively imitated by the native communities. The Turkish government has military and medical schools and special training schools for its civil functionaries. These are not of a high order. Roman Catholic missionaries have established large charity schools in various places. The most complete of the higher educational institutions of the empire are Robert college at Constantinople, the Syrian Protestant college at Beyrout, the Central Turkey college at Aintab in North Syria, and the Armenian college at Harpoot, in Armenia. These institutions are all managed by Americans. They are not the instruments of any religious propaganda, not being under administration of missions, and they have a deserved reputation for thorough work. The graduates of these institutions at once take high positions in business or as teachers. The Mohammedan schools of Turkey are less useful than the schools of the Christians. Yet they, too, make progress. Their text-books, however, are beneath contempt. Everything in science or custom which might be held to controvert the truth of Islamism is rigorously excluded. A large proportion of the Moslem children of the empire are taught in these schools to read and write, but beyond this the advantage of the Mohammedan educational system is small. The theological schools of the Moslems are perhaps an exception to this remark, for some of their graduates are well educated in the science of the Moslem religion.

Missions in Turkey.—American missionaries have worked in Turkey for 50 years. A Presbyterian society carries on extensive operations in Egypt; another Presbyterian society has a very successful mission in Syria; the Methodist Episcopal church has a mission in the principality of Bulgaria, and the American Board, supported mainly by Congregational churches, occupies the remainder of the Turkish empire, including the new province of Eastern Roumelia in European Turkey. Besides the American missions in Turkey, English and Scotch societies have missions to the Jews in several Turkish seaports, and extensive Roman Catholic missions exist in various places. Of the American missionary societies operating in Turkey, the American Board occupies the most territory. For purposes of administration this territory is divided into four distinct missions: The European Turkey mission, in Eastern Roumelia and Macedonia; the Western Turkey mission, embracing Western Asia Minor and that part of European Turkey which lies between Adrianople and Constantinople; the Central Turkey mission, comprising North Syria and the portion of Asia Minor lying south of the Taurus mountains; and the Eastern Turkey mission, which covers the whole of Armenia and Northern Mesopotamia. These missions are each independent in administration, although of course one in methods of operation. The object of these missions is not so much the building up of a particular religious sect as the gradual elevation of the whole people by making them acquainted with the principles of Christian living. The means used to this end are exposition of the Bible, education and book publication. There are 279 preaching places in regions occupied by the four missions of the American Board in Turkey. Eighty-eight churches have been formed with a membership of about 7,000. Three hundred and four schools have been established of all grades. About 12,000 pupils are in attendance at these schools. The book publication business of the missions is conducted at Constantinople, where 4 weekly newspapers and 4 monthly children's papers are also published by the missionaries. The sales of religious and educational works published by the mission at Constantinople are about 45,000 copies per annum. Besides these works the American Bible Society, working largely through the agency of the American missionaries, annually sells in Turkey some 65,000 copies of the holy scriptures or parts of scriptures. The missions of the American Board are conducted upon the idea of establishing permanent institutions. Hence the principle adopted is to avoid making the people the recipients of charity. No church is formed until the people are able to pledge at least one-half of the support of a pastor; no chapels are built until the people who are to use them are willing to pay at least one-half of the cost, and no Bibles or other books are given away. Even as to the schools the general rule is to require pay from scholars either in the form of a direct tuition fee or in the form of a general contribution for the maintenance of the schools made by the community benefited by them. As to the result of the work of the American missions in Turkey it may be said that the idea of popular education has been firmly established throughout the empire in consequence of the labors of these missionaries; the possibility of educating women has been practically demonstrated, and the people have been very largely led to adopt the idea of such education; and an impetus has been given to literature which has resulted in the establishment of many native publishing houses at Constantinople. A high standard of morality has been established among the members of the new churches. This secures the respect of all the population for the men thus known as moral; and in many cases the Bible morality has reacted upon the people at large, producing an opinion which condemns immorality. Respect for the Bible has been very extensively produced among the Armenians, Greeks and Bulgarians of Turkey by the efforts of the missionaries, and the sales of scriptures, out of all proportion to the membership of the mission churches, show that the people at large are extensively examining it. The political effects of the work of the missionaries are also marked. The weekly newspapers published by the missions have a decided political influence in the country. Protestants are already marked all over the country as men who know more than others of the rights of men. One serious political problem in Turkey is the fusion of all the various races which are now separated into discordant factions. The result of missionary effort so far has been to break down the distinctions between the races among those who have accepted the Bible as a rule of life. Several cases have occurred where Protestants have been chosen to represent non-Protestant population in the provincial councils, the reason given being that they are honest and others are not. In Bulgaria men educated by the American missionaries or by Robert college at Constantinople have had an important part in the political organization of the principality. Such men are found in the national assembly and in many positions of importance throughout the country. The efforts of the American missionaries in Turkey are directed to all classes, but they have been mainly successful among the Armenians, Bulgarians and Greeks. The political policy of Mr. Gladstone towards Turkey is to foster the development of the subject races so that they may be qualified to enter upon the government of the country whenever the present Turkish government shall cease to be. Prominent among the influences that are operating for this development of the people must be reckoned that of the American missions. To Americans an interesting result of the labors of American missionaries in Turkey has been the development of a demand for articles of American manufacture. Since the missionaries are almost the only foreigners who penetrate into the interior of Turkey, any growing demand for foreign wares is very likely to be met by orders to American houses. Agricultural machinery, sewing machines, watches and cabinet organs are frequently ordered from America through the missionaries by the people of Turkey. The development of this result of American missions in Turkey is one that our manufacturers may well afford to watch and foster.

Imports and Exports.—During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, the imports into Turkey from the United States direct amounted in value to $1,913,712, and exports to the United States to $1,201,316, the total trade being $3,144,438.

THE POWER OF THE PRESS.—Lawrence Barrett, the eminent tragedian, in response to a toast at the New York Press Club's annual dinner recently, gave utterance to the following eloquent tribute:—"It would be idle to question the power of the Press. It is the foremost illustration of our progress. It is the highest indication of what science can do under the freedom which is our birthright. Its necessity has so grown into our domestic and public lives that the mind cannot conceive what the world would do without it. It is a fourth estate, which mirrors and absorbs the other three in itself. It unites distant continents; it makes the Antipodes our neighbors. The lightning is its creature; the brains and hands of men its maids and servitors, who fetch and carry at its own sweet will. Standing upon a supreme elevation, it sweeps the world's horizon with a powerful glass, and each diurnal swing of the globe is caught and mirrored by its unerring lens. No region is too remote for its piercing sight; no incident which concerns man or men too trivial for its observation. The wrongs of distant people, which in an olden time remained local, become the world's affair, and universal sentiment is echoed back to succor the weak and appall the wrongdoer. Nor does its glance rest only on objects remote and afar. It follows us in all our little ways at home; and the daily record of each other's good or evil fortune, or joy or sorrow, creates a bond of human and deep-reaching sympathy unknown before. It has created a new political system. Proscription can no longer hold its own against a scrutiny which each day unfolds and lays bare the history of the by-gone day. Republicanism were a rude impossibility without it. It is the epitome of history; its daily utterance Sybilline leaves never to be destroyed, thanks to Gutenberg and Faust."

AFGHANISTAN.

BY JAMES Q. RICE, A.M.

Danish, French and German—Afghanistan. Russian—Afghanistan; or, Afganistan. Italian, Spanish, Portuguese and Swedish—Afghanistan. Turkish—Afghansidan.

Location, Size, etc.—This is the name applied to the mountainous region between Northwestern India and Eastern Persia, of which the Afghans are the most numerous inhabitants. It is bounded on the north by Bokara, on the east by British India, on south by Beloochistan, and on the west by Persia. It extends from about 62° to 70° east longitude, and from 30° to 35° north latitude. The area is estimated at about 278,000 square miles, and the population at about 4,000,000.

Topography, etc.—It may be roughly described as a large quadrilateral plateau, rising gradually to the height of about 6,000 feet above the sea-level in the northeast, and descending gradually in the southwest. On the north are wild, snow-covered mountains of the Hindu Kush, and farther on the ancient Paropamisus, which is divided at present into the Khoi-Bata, from which the Helmand flows, and the Ghur mountains. The boundary between the Indian and Persian systems is formed by the desolate range of the Sulimani mountains. The only rivers of importance in Afghanistan are the Kabul and the Helmand. The Kabul, which is the most important, is formed about 30 miles east of Kabul by the confluence of several rivers, flows eastward through the mountains and then through the plain of Peshawar, where it joins the Indus. The rapid current is unfavorable to navigation. The Helmand flows through the most unknown tract of Afghanistan, and finally empties in Lake Seistan by various mouths. It is estimated to be about 615 miles in length. The Ab-Istader is the only lake of any size known.

Subdivisions and Cities.—The chief political divisions of Afghanistan are Kabul, Jalalabad, Ghazni, Kandahar, Herat and Afghan Turkestan, to which is sometimes added the command of the Ghilzais and Hazaras. Afghanistan has few cities. The capital is Kabul, a place strongly fortified naturally, lying 6,000 feet above the sea. The number of inhabitants is estimated at 60,000. There are also Kandahar, with a population of 15,000, Ghazni, Herat and Jalalabad.

Climate.—Like all mountainous tropical countries, Afghanistan presents every variety of climate. In the Hindu Kush the snow lies on the ground the year round, while in the valleys the mercury ranges up to 70°. The climate is on the whole cooler than that of India, and though the alterations in temperature between summer and winter are very great, the country is generally healthy.

Flora and Fauna.—In consequence of the great difference in climate, the variety of vegetation is immense. In the sheltered valleys all kinds of tropical fruits, tobacco and cotton abound, while in the mountains European fruits and vegetables are produced. The diversity in the animal kingdom is also very marked, and the lion, tiger and camel exist, together with foxes, wolves and bears.

Agriculture.—In most parts of the country there are two crops, one reaped in the spring and the other in autumn. The first consists of wheat, barley and a variety of lentils, and the second is rice, maize, millet, sorghum, tobacco, beets, turnips, etc. Wheat is the staple food, but rice is largely distributed. Sugar-cane is grown in the rich districts and some cotton in the warmer portions, but most of the cotton cloth is imported. The fruit crop is very important, and all European fruits are produced profusely. Grapes are grown extensively, and the variety of kinds is large. Horses form a staple export to India, and dairy produce is important in the Afghan diet. Sheep are also raised in great numbers, mutton being the chief animal food of the nation. Wool is exported to Persia and now largely to Europe by Bombay.

Manufactures and Trade.—The industrial products are not important; silk, carpets and felt goods are, however, manufactured. The chief articles of export are wool, horses, silk, fruit, madder, assafoetida, skins and furs. The imports are cotton, woolen and silk goods, cloths, sugar, indigo, gold thread and lace, scarfs, leather, groceries and drugs. The total export trade is variously estimated, but probably will not vary much from $4,000,000, while the imports will probably somewhat exceed this sum. There is no direct trade with the United States.

Minerals.—Afghanistan is believed to be rich in minerals, but few are wrought. Some small quantities of gold and silver are obtained, and iron is produced to a considerable extent, some being exported. Copper ore from various parts of the country has been seen, but is nowhere wrought. Lead is found in considerable quantities, but is not worked to any extent. There are also found in different parts of the country coal, sulphur, nitre and silicate of zinc.

Government.—The country is under one prince, but we can hardly term the government a monarchy. The sirdars govern in their own respective districts, each after his own fashion. The sovereign can only restrain them by their divisions. There is no unity, and everything depends on the pleasure of a number of wild chiefs. Almost every village has a mollah, who is at the same time schoolmaster. The boys quite generally learn to read and write, and it is believed that one-fourth the entire population is in possession of an elementary education.

Religions.—Most of the Afghans are Sunnite Mahomedans, but the educated classes are tolerant and sometimes show considerable indifference to the precepts of the Koran.

The Army.—Little can be said with reference to the army, as recent data on that subject are not attainable. In 1858 the regular army was about 15,000 strong. In addition to this a large number of irregular troops are furnished by the chiefs, who hold their governments on condition of service.

Revenues, etc.—In 1873 the revenues were stated to be $3,500,000, of which the army is said to have cost $2,150,000. The United States maintains neither commercial nor consular relations with Afghanistan. No newspapers exist within its limits.

ARABIA.

BY JAMES Q. RICE, A.M.

Arabic—Jezeereh; or, Jeziret-el-Arab. Danish—Arabien. French—Arabie. German—Arabien. Russian, Italian, Spanish and Portuguese—Arabia. Swedish—Arabien. Chinese and Japanese—Ya² La Po Kwo. Turkish and Persian—Arabistan.

Location, Size, etc.—Arabia is a peninsula almost triangular in form, stretching from northwest to southeast, and bounded by the Red Sea on the west, on the east by the Persian Gulf, on the south by the Indian Ocean, and on the north, where it is the narrowest, it joins the mainland of Syria. It lies between latitude 12° 45' and 30° north, and longitude 32° 30' and 60° east. The area is estimated at something more than 1,000,000 square miles. Its population is variously estimated, but the latest and most reliable reports place it at about 9,000,000.

Topography, etc.—Arabia may be roughly divided, as to its surface, into three parts. First, a third of coast-ring and mountains; second, a third of central plateau; and, lastly, a third of desert circle, intervening with only one gap, that in the latitude of Mecca, between the other two. The first and second portions are either tolerably cultivated, or susceptible of being so. The central space, whether plateau or desert, varying from 1,000 to 3,000 feet above the sea, has three important mountain ranges—two transverse and one vertical—these latter being the watershed of the peninsula, the general rise of which is from west to east. The highest peaks in Oman do not rise above 6,000 feet. As a whole, Arabia is arid and sterile; is destitute of forests; has no large rivers, and few permanent streams. The coast-line presents little variety, being mostly mountainous, with a narrow, rarely fertile shore fringe, with few harbors that would float an ordinary schooner.

Subdivisions, Cities, etc.—The principal modern subdivisions are the Sinaitic peninsula, Hedjaz, Yemen, Hadramant, Oman, El-Hasa or Ahsa, Nejd, and Shomer. The chief cities are Mecca, the capital, (pop. 25,000), Medina (pop. 20,000), Mocha (pop. 7,000), Muscat (pop. 50,000), Yembo (pop. 10,000), and Rostak. Aden, a city belonging to the British government, near the Strait of Bab-el-Mandeb, has a population of 30,000. It is strongly fortified and called the Gibraltar of the East.

Climate.—The climate of Arabia is extremely hot and dry. Muscat and Mocha, both on the sea-coast, are among the hottest inhabited places on the earth. On the plains the thermometer frequently rises above 100° Fahr. in the shade, and in many parts of Arabia rain does not fall in the course of a year, nor is the sun obscured by a cloud. On the coast of the Red Sea there is a rainy season of two or three months in the summer, but on the southern and southeastern coast the rain falls in the winter and the hottest months in the year are also the driest. A peculiar feature of this climate is a hot, poisonous south wind called the simoon, the only escape from which is to lie prone upon the ground, with the head covered until the column of mephitic vapor has passed.

Flora and Fauna.—The flora of Arabia embraces all the characteristic plants of the neighboring countries. Among the wild plants are the mimosa, the euphorbiaceæ, lavender, jasmine, aloe, and the trees which yield gum-arabic and olibanum. The animal kingdom is represented by the camel, antelope, ibex, hyena, wolf, jackal, wild ass, wild boar, jerboa, monkey, ostrich and eagle. The Arabian horse is celebrated, and perhaps unrivalled for his beauty, endurance, docility and speed.

Agriculture.—Arabia cannot be called a fertile country, but some places which are well watered produce cotton, coffee, indigo, tobacco, tamarinds, the date palm, barley, rice and sugar. The methods of agriculture employed by the people are extremely rude, but by industry and the general practice of artificial irrigation, very good crops are produced.

Trade, etc.—Manufacturing is not carried on to any appreciable extent. The principal exports of Arabia are coffee, dates, gum-arabic, myrrh, aloes, almonds, balm of Mecca, frankincense, drugs and pearls. Arabia receives from Europe silver, iron, copper, lead, firearms and gunpowder; from Abyssinia, slaves, sheep, elephants' teeth, and musk; from the east coast of Africa, gold, slaves, amber and ivory; from Egypt, rice, lentils, sugar and oil; from Surat, linen, and from India cotton.

Minerals.—In mineral products of a valuable description the Arabia of our day is singularly poor. The agate, onyx, carnelian, and, rarely, the topaz, are to be met with; but of gold and precious ores, not a trace. Lead is, however, more common; and the richest ores of this metal come from Oman. Cinnabar and iron occur in the Sinaitic peninsula, and also sulphur. Rock salt is taken out of some parts of the coast range.

Fisheries.—The Arabian coasts are much frequented by fish, of which mackerel, mullet, sole, ray and perch are the notable kinds. Fishing forms the occupation of a large portion of the shore population, but ignorance of the proper methods of salting and curing deprive the product of its export value. The pearl fisheries alone add to the commercial riches of the country. They begin at the islands of Bahreyn, near the centre of the Persian Gulf, and extend east and south for 200 miles. The total annual production is estimated at $1,250,000, but probably exceeds that sum. Whatever trade exists between the United States and Arabia passes through indirect channels.

Government.—The government of Arabia is neither a monarchy, a republic, nor an aristocracy.

but the population is divided into tribes, each of which is subject to a chief called an emir, sheik or imâm.

Religions.—The Arabs are chiefly Mohammedans, but different parts of the country differ widely in the strictness with which they observe the tenets of the Mohammedan creed. They are very tolerant toward strangers, but apt to be bigoted among themselves.

The Army.—The force of available fighting men can of course be known only by estimates, and the best of these give the total military force of the peninsula at 400,000. There is, however, no standing army, and no force of regular disciplined troops.

Education.—There is little education, in our sense of the word, in Arabia. There are almost no schools, and where they exist little beyond the mechanical reading of the Koran is taught. In the very few instances where public schools of the higher class are found, writing, grammar and rhetoric sum up their teaching.

Revenues.—Of the revenues and expenditures of the various tribes in Arabia it is impossible to form any estimate whatever, owing to the absence of accessible data.

For map, see other departments of this work.

BELOOCHISTAN.

BY JAMES Q. RICE, A.M.

Danish—Beloochistan. French—Belouchistan. German—Beloochistan. Russian—Belotchistan. Italian—Belouchistan. Spanish—Belochistan. Portuguese—Belouchistan. Swedish—Beloochistan. Turkish—Belouchistan.

Situation, Size, etc.—Belochistan, or, perhaps, more correctly, Baluchistan, is a maritime country of Asia, whose coast is continuous with that of the northwestern part of the Indian peninsula. It is bounded on the north by Afghanistan, on the east by Sindh, on the south by the Arabian sea, and on the west by Persia. It extends from latitude $24^{\circ} 50'$ to $30^{\circ} 20'$ north, and from longitude $61^{\circ} 10'$ to $68^{\circ} 38'$ east. The estimated area is 106,500 square miles. There are no data for forming a very correct estimate of the population, but 400,000 is probably nearly correct.

Topography, etc.—The most remarkable features of this extensive country are its rugged and elevated surface, its barrenness, and its deficiency of water. The Hala mountains on the east and north-east include a quantity of comparatively fertile land, and a strip to the east of the Hala chain is also very fertile; but the ground being low and swampy, to which indeed the great fertility is due, makes the place extremely unhealthy, although it is more densely populated than any other portion. There are no rivers of any size; and, except in time of very heavy spring floods, their waters never reach the sea. The Bolan and Moola, in Kohistan, are rivers of fair size, but their waters are withdrawn for irrigational purposes as soon as they reach the plains. The coast line is remarkably regular, but affords no good harbors. There are, however, several roadsteads affording good anchoring ground.

Divisions and Cities.—The principal divisions of Baluchistan, with their capitals, which are the only cities of importance, are: Khelat, which is the capital of the whole country; Mustoong, capital of the province of Sarawan; Khozdar, of Jhalawan; Bela, of Bela; Kej, of Mekran; and Bagh, of Cutch-Gundava. Also deserving of mention are Dadur and Gundava, towns in the last-mentioned province.

Climate, Products, etc.—The climate is very unlike in the different provinces, and presents great extremes of heat and cold. Most of the fruits grown in Europe are found in the country, and also the plantain and guava. The valleys produce rice, cotton, tobacco, indigo, barley and pulse. The soil is in general mingled with stones, but the province of Cutch-Gundava is so exceedingly fertile that if properly cultivated it would produce more than enough for the whole of Baluchistan. The domestic animals are horses, mules, asses, camels, buffalo, black-cattle, sheep and goats. The wild animals are tigers, hyenas, leopards, wolves, tiger-cats, antelopes, deer, elk, and almost every species of bird known in India.

Minerals.—Gold, silver, lead, iron, tin, antimony, brimstone, alum, sal-ammoniac, are found in various parts of the country. The precious metals were only found while working for iron and lead near Nal, a town about 150 miles from Khelat. The other minerals mentioned above are very plentiful.

Government.—The government is a sort of military confederation. Each tribe chooses its own sirdar, and the Khan of Khelat is the leader in time of war, and a kind of feudal chief in peace. The whole population are Sunnite Mahommedans.

Army.—There is no standing army in Baluchistan, and the force that could be collected on an emergency would vary from 10,000 to 40,000, according to the nature of the trouble, money in the treasury, and other conditions.

Revenues.—The revenues of the Kahn are very small—probably not exceeding $150,000. The United States maintains no diplomatic, consular or direct commercial relations with this country. No newspapers are published within its limits.

BRITISH INDIA, INCLUDING BRITISH BURMAH AND PROTECTED STATES.

BY CHARLES E. WILBUR, A.M.

Danish—Indien. French—Les Indes Anglaises. German—Indien. Russian—India. Italian—India. Spanish and Portuguese—Las Indias Orientales. Swedish—Indien. Chinese and Japanese—Yin Tu⁴. Turkish—Hindistan; or, Hindustan. Dutch—Indien.

Situation, etc.—India is an extensive region of Southern Asia, celebrated during many ages for its riches and valuable natural products, its beautiful manufactures and costly merchandise, the magnificence of its sovereigns, and the civilization of its people. It possesses special interest to the Englishman from the intimate connection of its history with that of his own country. Its south part includes the central peninsula of Southern Asia, and lies between 3° 4' and 35° north latitude, and 67° to 92° east longitude. According to these limits its length is near 2,000 miles, and its greatest breadth on the parallel of 28°, about 1,750. It is bounded on the north and northeast by Thibet, Eastern Turkestan, and dependencies of the Chinese empire, on the east by Burmah and Siam, on the south by the Bay of Bengal and Indian Ocean, on the west by Afghanistan, Beloochistan and the Arabian Sea. Its area, including British Burmah and Assam, is about 1,479,806 square miles. Population in 1876, 241,120,525.

Physical Features.—India presents a most diversified surface and varied scenery; it has, indeed, been called, "an epitome of the whole earth," consisting as it does of mountains far above the level of perpetual snow, broad and fertile plains, bathed in intensest sunshine, arid wastes and impenetrable forests. Its great natural divisions are the Sub-Himalayan countries, the plain of the Ganges, the plain of the Indus, the highlands of Northern Hindustan, and the peninsular portion to the south of the Vindhya mountains. The river system of India is on a grand scale. The Indus traverses the northwest, and drains about 400,000 square miles of country. The Ganges on the northeast with its tributaries drains an area of about 500,000 square miles. The Brahmapootra, after flowing 1,200 miles through Thibet, has a course of upwards of 600 miles through the northeast provinces of India. The eastern side is watered by eighteen rivers, the principal being the Godavery, 830 miles long; Kistnah, 800; Cauvery, 470; Mahananda, 520; Brahmini, 400; North Pennar, 350; and the South Pennar, 240. About twenty rivers water the western side of India. The most noteworthy are the Nerbudda, 800 miles long; Taptee, 400; Myhi, 350; Luni, 320; Banas, 180; and the Bhadro, 130.

The Subdivisions of British India are Ajmere, Coorg, Berar, Mysore, Madras, Bombay, Bengal, Northwest Provinces, Punjab, Oude, Assam, British-Burmah and the Central Provinces. The capital is Calcutta, with a population in 1872 of 447,601, or with its extensive suburbs, about 800,000.

Other large cities are Madras, population 397,552; Bombay, population 644,405; Delhi, population 154,417; Lucknow, population 284,779; Allahabad, population 143,693; and Benares, population 175,188.

Climate.—In a country extending over 26 degrees of latitude, one extremity of which runs far into the torrid zone, while the other terminates in a range of lofty mountains rising far above the line of perpetual snow—a country embracing within its circumference lowlands, plains, elevated plateaus and mountain regions—the climate must differ greatly. India may be said to have three well-marked seasons—the cold, the hot, and the rainy. The cool months are November, December, January, and a part of February; the dry, hot weather precedes, and the moist, hot weather follows the periodical rains. The climate of the southern part is greatly regulated by the monsoons. The central table-land is cool, dry and healthy. At Ootacamund the mean annual temperature is 57° F.; at Madras, 83°; Bombay, 84°; Calcutta, 79°. Bangalore, 74°; Delhi, 72°. The fall of rain varies greatly in different parts. In the northeast it exceeds 75 inches. In the interior of the Deccan it is less than 30, and in Multan and Sindh less than 15 inches. As compared with Europe it is an arid country. Hence the necessity of tanks and irrigation canals to supply moisture to the soil and to guard against the danger of dry seasons.

Animals.—The domesticated animals of India are the horse, ass, mule, ox, buffalo, sheep and elephant. Of wild beasts, the most formidable is the Bengal tiger. The other beasts of prey are leopards, wolves, jackals, panthers, bears, hyenas, lynxes and foxes. Of poisonous snakes, the cobra da capello, or black-hooded snake, the cobra manilla, and sand snakes are the most common. The number of people killed by wild beasts is a feature of Indian life. In 1869 a tigress killed 127 people, and stopped a public road for many weeks. In 1871, 14,529 persons were known to have lost their lives by snake-bites. In the same year the total number of deaths reported as caused by dangerous animals of all classes was 18,078. And it is believed, if systematic returns were kept, the number would be found to exceed 20,000.

Vegetable Productions.—The vegetation of India is as varied as its soil and climate, and passes from the flora of a tropical to that of a mountainous region. The groves of palms that border the coast, and in the interior the umbrageous mango topes are striking features of Indian scenery. Rice is the chief article of food and is produced in all parts of the country in which irrigation is practiced. Maize and wheat are the grains cultivated in the northwestern provinces. Opium is one of the most profitable products of India. In 1871-72 the value of the chests exported from Bombay and Calcutta to China was $28,250,000. Coffee is largely produced in Ceylon, and the cultivation of the plant is rapidly spreading in Southern India. Tea is now cultivated with success in Assam, and its production is extending over all the hill countries of Northwestern India. Cinchona, introduced from South America in 1860, has been naturalized with great success. The cost of doing so was $308,000. "The return," says Mr. Markham, "represents a value which is simply incalculable and without price," a cheap supply of quinine being one of the most certain means of averting fevers, which prevail on the hot and moist parts of India. The growth of cotton has been much extended since the American war. The finest is produced in Berar. The reha or jute-plant is grown in Assam and Bengal, and has recently given rise to an important trade. India-rubber is another important product of Assam, the demand for which is increasing. Within the last fifteen years great attention has been paid to preserving the Indian forests. The destruction of the woods was found to give rise to destructive floods, and to render the water supply capricious and uncertain during the dry season. The Indian cultivators have been rapidly increasing in prosperity, and with that improvement there has been an increasing demand for timber for house construction and furniture—a demand further augmented by the requirements of railroads. The area of cultivation is being largely increased by canals which convey water to the rich but parched soil. Several are adapted for navigation as well as irrigation.

Exports and Imports.—The total value of merchandise imported into British India in 1878 was $196,630,015, and of treasure, $86,777,295. The chief items were coal and coke, cotton manufactures, metals of all kinds manufactured and unmanufactured, salt, raw silk, silk manufactures, spirits, sugar and saccharine matter. The total value of the exports in the year 1878 was as follows: Manufactures, produce and merchandise, $325,928,565; treasure, $10,775,680. The chief items were coffee, cotton wool, cotton goods, dyes of all kinds, grains and pulse, hides and skins, jute and manufactures of jute, opium, seeds, silk, tea, wool. The greater part of the trade is carried on with Great Britain, but there is also an extensive commerce with Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, China, the Persian Gulf, the Red Sea and several of the European States. In the year 1875 there entered the ports of India 19,875 vessels of 4,903,827 tons; cleared from the same ports 4,982,673 tons in 19,094 vessels. The direct trade of the United States with India is comparatively small. The total value of all exports into the British East Indies for the fiscal year 1879-'80 from this country was but $2,219,227; imports from same during that period $21,022,854; total of imports and exports, $23,242,081, being 1.55 per cent. of the entire foreign trade of the United States during the year stated.

Minerals.—The mineral resources of India are not so great as would be looked for in a country so wide-reaching, and what exist are poorly developed, Great Britain pursuing the policy of supplying her dependencies with manufactured articles from her own factories, rather than encouraging the home production of them. The mountains of India contain gneiss, mica-schist, clay-slate, or crystalline limestone. The great coal regions are bounded by the Ganges on the north, and extend beyond the Godavary on the south. Iron, copper and lead are worked in different parts of India. Salt is produced abundantly by evaporation in the salt lakes of the Thur.

Government.—By an act of parliament, which received the royal assent August 2d, 1858, Queen Victoria was declared sovereign of India, and various regulations were enacted for the better government of the country. In 1877, by act of parliament, the Queen formally assumed the title of Empress of India. The government of India is vested in a "Viceroy and Governor General," who is commander-in-chief of all the armies of India. He is appointed for a term of six years by the crown, and is assisted by a council of five, and by a legislative council, all of whose acts are subject to revision and revocation by the home government. The governor-general may be constituted a member of the council. The legislative council is composed of the executive, together with twelve members, one-half of whom must be unconnected with the public service. They are nominated for two years by the viceroy. In 1861, by an act of parliament, high courts of judicature were established at each presidency and in the north-west provinces, under the control of a chief justice and as many judges, not exceeding fifteen, as her majesty may appoint.

Religions.—Hinduism or Brahmanism is the religion of a great majority of the inhabitants of India. Mohammedanism comes next, and it appears from the latest census that the number of people professing this creed is much greater than had been supposed. Of the 66,000,000 forming the population of Bengal, 21,000,000 are Mohammedans. In the Punjab 9,000,000 are Mohammedans and 6,000,000 Hindoos. In the north-west provinces there are 25,000,000 Hindoos to 4,000,000 Mohammedans. In Oude there are 1,000,000 Mohammedans to 10,000,000 Hindoos. In the whole of India it is believed there are nearly three times as many Hindoos as Mohammedans. The Sikh religion is professed, according to the census of the Punjab, by 1,000,000 of the inhabitants. They hate alike the Hindoos and the Mohammedans. Buddhism, at one period, prevailed very generally throughout India; it is now confined to Bhotan, Ceylon, and the Burmese frontier. There is also a small sect called Parsees. Of religious freedom it is not necessary to speak. Wherever the British flag is planted round the world, it carries religious freedom with it, and under its ample folds the worshippers in all creeds may find protection. India was early a field for Christian missionary labor. Tradition assigns it as the scene of the apostle Thomas's labors and martyrdom. At an early date the Syrian church was planted in Malabar. Francis Xavier began the work for the Romish church. The Jesuit converts exceed half a million in Madras, Pondicherry and Travancore. Holland and Denmark furnished the first Protestant missionaries. These were followed by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel at the beginning of the eighteenth century. In 1872 the number of Indian Protestants in India was 318,363, and the number has since then largely increased. The British government gives great credit to the missionaries for their moral influence upon the natives and for their help in maintaining good government.

The Army.—The Indian military service, like the civil service, underwent a thorough reorganization upon the transfer of the government from the East Indian Company to the crown in 1858. In 1875 the established military force of India numbered 190,175, including officers, of whom 123,682 were natives and 60,000 English, exclusive of officers. India is divided into three military divisions, which, although named after the three old presidencies of Bombay, Madras and Bengal, and perpetuating their names, have not exactly the same limits. Of the native troops 47,000 belonged to the Bengal army, 27,000 to the Madras army and 24,000 to the Bombay army. The British forces are chiefly stationed in the Punjab and along the valley of the Ganges. In 1872 there were 37,000 English soldiers in these provinces, of whom 12,000 were in the Punjab, 10,400 were in the Bombay presidency, and 12,200 in that of the Madras. The police in British India include a force of 190,000 constables, or regular policemen, and the village watchmen who aid them. The minimum age of admission is 17, the maximum 21. Each district has a jail and a police superintendent, and the districts are grouped for police purposes into circles under deputy-inspectors-general, while the whole police force in each province is under an inspector-general. This constabulary is a purely civil force, subject in all respects to the civil authorities, except in internal discipline.

Roads and Railroads.—Since 1836 great trunk roads have been constructed in various parts of India. The most remarkable is that from Calcutta to Peshawar, 1,400 miles long. The importance of these great works is now diminished owing to the extension of a great railway system in India. The chief railroads now open are the East Indian, from Calcutta to Delhi; the Indian Peninsula, which forms a branch to Bombay; the Delhi, Punjab and Sind, which will ultimately connect the system with the mouth of the Indus; the Bombay and Baroda, which runs north from Bombay; the Madras Railway, running from Bombay southeast to Madras, and thence southwest to Beypur on the Malabar coast, with a branch to Tinneveli, and a line from Madras to Cuddalore, below Pondicherry. Up to March 31, 1877, $590,083,775 had been expended by the guaranteed and state railway companies. The net receipts in 1877 were $25,989,075. There are in all 8,228 miles of railway open in India, and nearly 3,000 more in course of construction.

Telegraphs.—Nearly 17,000 miles of telegraphs connect all the important cities of British India, this Indian system being connected by three lines with England.

Education.—The education of the people of India is based on the system set forth in a dispatch by Sir Charles Wood, dated July 19th, 1854. The main principle of the dispatch was that European knowledge should be diffused through the language understood by the great mass of the people, but that the teaching of English should always be combined with a careful study of the vernacular languages. With regard to the wealthier classes, it was declared that the time had arrived for the establishment of universities in India, conferring degrees and based on the model of the university of London. They were not to be places of education, but were to test the value of education attained elsewhere and to confer degrees in arts, law, medicine and civil engineering. Such universities have accordingly been established in Calcutta, Madras, Oude, Bombay, and since 1849 government schools have been established for the instruction of all classes of Indian people. In each province there is now a director of public instruction, assisted by school inspectors, one of whom has under his care one circle or subdivision of the province. There is a normal school for the education of teachers, and attempts are being made to spread female education. In 1874-'75 there were 53,764 government and private schools and colleges, giving instruction to 1,668,026 pupils, the gross expenditure on government schools, from imperial and other sources, being upwards of $5,000,000. In the northwest provinces the total number of pupils under instruction is about 220,000. There are 250 boys among every 3,000 people, and of these 16 are at government schools, 14 at vernacular schools, and 2 learn English. Among the same 3,000 people there are 200 girls, of whom but 1 is at school. In 1875-'76 838 candidates passed the entrance examination at the university of Calcutta, 663 at Madras, and 431 at Bombay. The postal statistics partly illustrate the native progress. The number of letters and newspapers carried by the post more than doubled in the ten years 1867-'76. The total number of letters sent through the post offices of British India in 1875-'6 was 119,470,921.

Revenues and Expenditures.—The gross amount of revenue for the year ending March 31st, 1875, was $251,132,940. The expenditure was $203,802,915. The chief items of revenue for the year ending 1875 were the following, in the order of their importance: Land revenue, $105,189,460; opium, $41,624,395; salt, $30,753,310; stamps, $13,790,210; customs, $13,392,395; excise on spirits and drugs, $11,730,715. The land tax alone produces nearly the half of the whole revenue. In British India the government has always been considered the owner of the soil and the actual cultivators pay a rent or tax, in collecting which different systems have been followed in different parts of the country. The simplest and oldest system of collecting land tax is that known as the village settlement. Each village is regarded in this system as a separate municipality, and each is assessed by the government at a particular sum, for the due payment of which the head man of the village is considered responsible. The individual distribution of the burden of taxation rests with the village authorities, and the government, if it receives its regular dues through the potail, interferes no further.

The Public Debt of India in 1872 amounted to $561,573,800, on which the interest paid was $2,666,745. In 1875 the total amount of the debt was $592,234,955, showing an increase of nearly $31,300,000.

Protected States.—The following are a few of the more important native states to a greater or less extent under the protection and surveillance of the British-Indian government: In the northwest is Cashmere, under a native rajah, with a population of 3,000,000, a mountainous region of the Western Himalaya; the hill states, under a large number of native chiefs, with a population of 750,000; Gurhwal, under a rajah, 200,000; Bawalpür, under a khan, south of Multan, 1,000,000; the Sikh states, the largest of which is Patiala, 1,250,000. The Rajpoot states, 18 in number, with a population of 8,500,000, each under a rajah. The states of Malwah are 21 in number; among the most important are Bhopal, 875,000, and the Bundelcund states, 1,142,000. There are numerous others too unimportant to mention.

BRITISH BURMAH.

Its Importance.—This province is of such importance, and varies so widely in many of its characteristics from the rest of the British empire in the East, as to demand separate treatment. The country was acquired by the British Indian government after a two years' war with the Burmese empire. It is situated between 10° and 22° north latitude, and 92° and 100° east longitude. It is bounded on the north by Independent Burmah, on the east by Siam, on the south by the Indian ocean, and on the west by the Bay of Bengal and the Chittagong division of Bengal. Area in square miles is 88,556. Population in 1872 was 2,747,143, giving an average of 31 inhabitants to the square mile. The greater part of the state is covered with hills, forests, estuaries and river beds. The eastern and southern part is particularly mountainous, thinly populated and much intersected by streams. For administrative purposes the country is divided into three commissionerships, Arakán, Pegu and Tenasserim. The climate is moist and depressing for part of the year, but cooler than that of India. Some of the forest tracts during the monsoons and after the cold weather has set in are impregnated with deadly malaria; but the coast and frontier ranges are not unhealthy. On the whole, however, the climate seems better adapted to the European constitution than any part of India, as shown by the low rate of disease among the British troops. Rice is the staple product of the province, and in 1871-'72 1,836,021 acres were devoted to its cultivation. Other food grains covered 4,860 acres; sesamum, 25,502 acres; sugar cane, 3,179 acres; and cotton, 14,120. Tobacco occupied 12,866 acres. The other crops produced are indigo, vegetables, hemp, mixed fruits, etc.

Trade.—The total value of the trade of British Burmah in 1871-'72 was $53,888,525; exports, $27,260,740; imports, $26,627,985. The most important article of export is rice. The trade increased from 380,000 tons in 1865 to 470,893 tons in 1871, and made a sudden rise to 700,784 tons in 1872. Other important articles of export are timber, cotton, cutch, hides, horns, ivory, jade stone, petroleum, paddy, precious stones, stick-lac, tobacco. The articles of import consist of betel-nut, cotton twist and yarn, crockery ware, cutlery, gunny bags, hardware, cotton, silk and woolen goods, raw silk, liquors, wines, beers, sugars and tobacco.

Mines.—The only mines in the province are those worked for tin in the southern portion of the Tenasserim division. European capitalists are now engaged in the mining of tin. Coal exists on the banks of the Tenasserim river and elsewhere, but has never been worked to any extent. Lead has been found in Toungoo. Gold, antimony ore and ironstone are also found. Mills are employed in the seaport towns for husking rice and sawing timber. Silk and cotton are manufactured in large quantities, but chiefly for home use. A coarse description of salt is made on the seacoast. The other manufactures consist of gold and silver bowls of peculiar and elaborate workmanship, lacquered ware, carved and gilt work, and dyes.

Government.—The highest authority in the province of British Burmah is the chief commissioner and agent to the Governor-General of India, established under a resolution of the government of India, dated January, 1862. He is assisted by a secretary and assistant secretary. For the protection of British Burmah 5,016 fighting men, Europeans and natives, were maintained in 1871 at a total cost of $1,381,000. The strength of the police in 1871 was 5,319.

Education has not made much progress in Burmah under the English plan of public instruction, but the people have a widespread system of primary education of their own in the monastic schools. Setting aside these monastic schools, the educational machinery of the province consists of seven government schools, educating 505 boys; fifteen aided missionary schools, teaching 1,494 pupils; and twenty-two other unaided schools under government inspection, teaching 499 pupils. For religion, see British India, above. The internal communications are chiefly carried on by water. Steamers ply on all the navigable rivers. There is also railway communication with Calcutta. The gross revenue from all sources in 1871-'72 was $6,817,260.

THE BURMESE EMPIRE.

BY CHARLES E. WILBUR, A.M.

Burmese—Myamma; or, Bramma. Danish—Birma. French—Le Birman. German—Birma. Russian, Italian, Spanish and Portuguese—Birmanian. Swedish—Birma. Chinese and Japanese—Meen-teen. Turkish—Boormah.

Position, Size, etc.—Independent Burmah is in the southeast of Asia. On the north it is bounded by Assam and Tibet, on the east by China and Shan States, on the south by the British province of Pegri, and on the west by the British provinces of Arakan and Assam and the petty states of Tipperah and Munnepon. It is included between the parallels of 19° 30' to 28° 15' north latitude, and 93° 2' to 100° 40' longitude east from Greenwich. Its area is 190,520 square miles, and population (1874) 3,500,000.

Topography.—The Burmese empire is in the main an upland territory. Its aspect is much diversified, having plains in the south, rolling and hilly land in the center, and wild and mountainous in the north. It is well watered by four large rivers, namely, Irrawaddy, Kyen-dwem, Sittang, and the Salween. The capital is Mandalay, with a population of 90,000.

The Climate is moist and depressing for part of the year, but cooler than that of India. Some of the forest tracts, after the commencement of cool weather, are impregnated with a deadly malaria, but the higher regions are not unhealthy. The average temperature is 90° Fahr.

Flora and Fauna.—The forests of Burmah abound in an abundance of fine trees. Among these the teak holds a conspicuous place. Almost every tree known in India is produced in the Burmese forests, which furnish shelter for many wild animals, namely: the elephant, rhinoceros, both one and two-horned, tiger, leopard, wild hog and several species of deer. The rivers and lakes abound in fish. Domesticated animals are the ox, buffalo and horse.

Agriculture.—The chief agricultural products are rice, maize, millet, wheat, pulse, tobacco, cotton, indigo, sugar and tea. The fruits produced are orange, citron, pine and custard apple.

Minerals.—Burmah is rich in minerals, having gold, silver, copper, tin, lead, antimony, bismuth, amber, coal, petroleum, nitre, salt, limestone and marble. Its precious stones are in their sapphire and ruby. The mines are not worked to any considerable extent.

Government.—The Burmese government is a pure despotism, the King dispensing torture, imprisonment or death, according to his sovereign discretion. The only restraint of the exercise of his prerogative is the fear of an insurrection. In religion the Burmese are votaries of Buddha, and the rites, doctrines and priesthood are in their main features the same as in other countries where Buddhism prevails.

Education.—Education throughout the empire is still in the ecclesiastical stage, but the educational statistics compare favorably with those of many portions of Europe. Fluency of speech and great skill in carrying on an argument according to their own system of dialectics are the common possessions of the educated Burmese, and an unshaken conviction of the truth of their religion is almost universal.

The Revenue of the State is about $1,250,000, which is mostly raised by direct taxes on families and agriculture. The government is loose, there being only a small army to enforce authority, and the King is little feared or obeyed at a distance from his capital.

Don't forget that Persistency is Necessary to Hold the Fort, and that there are but few lines of business in which success can be attained without the aid of the newspapers. There is nothing so effective in presenting the merits of an article as an attractive advertisement; it reaches many people whose attention cannot be commanded in any other way, and who are finally influenced by the repeated announcements of the persistent advertiser. By these means a demand can be created for special brands of even the commonest staple articles, for repeated inquiries from their customers will compel retail dealers to order the goods called for, and so that which has been long in the market, may be replaced by an article, possibly not any better, but the virtues of which are constantly before the people. Having established a trade, don't stop advertising, unless you are willing to lose the ground already gained.

THE ISLAND OF CEYLON.

BY JAMES Q. RICE, A.M.

Location and Topography.—Ceylon is an island in the Indian ocean belonging to the British government, about 55 miles south of the southern extremity of Hindostan. It lies between latitude $5^{\circ} 56'$ and $9^{\circ} 50'$ north, and longitude 80° and 82° east. Its greatest length is 266 miles, greatest width 140, and its total area 24,702 square miles. Its population by the census of 1871 was 2,406,695, and the estimate for 1876 increases this to 2,459,542. In its general outline the island resembles a cone whose apex points to the north. The southern and eastern coasts are bold and rocky and present a very picturesque appearance, which is increased by the luxuriant tropical vegetation, the verdant slopes of the mountains, and the groves of noble palms draped in perennial green. There are two principal harbors—Point de Galle on the southern coast, and Trincomalé on the eastern. The latter is one of the finest harbors in the world, and is capable of admitting the largest ships. The mountain zone is toward the south of the island and covers an area of about 4,212 miles. Toward the north the offsets of the mountain system radiate off for a short distance and speedily sink to the level of the plain. Detached hills are rare. The two principal table-lands are the Neuera Ellia and the Horton plains at an elevation of from 6,000 to 7,000 feet. These are the most healthful portions of the island and possess many of the characteristics of Alpine country. There are no rivers of importance, and though the streams are very much swollen by the rains which fall at the change of season, they soon resume their natural size and can almost all be forded on horseback. The most important is the Mahawelli-Ganga, which, after a course of 200 miles, empties into the bay of Kottiar.

Subdivisions and Cities.—Ceylon is divided into seven provinces, viz: the Central, North Central, Western, North-western, Southern, Eastern and Northern. The principal cities, with their populations are Colombo, 93,843; Galle, 47,059, and Jaffna, 34,864.

Climate.—The climate differs very little from that of India, being hot and humid. It is, however, more pleasant and moderate. The principal rain-fall is during the last three months of the year and averages about 80 inches.

Flora and Fauna.—The country is remarkable for the luxuriance and variety of its flora. Its indigenous trees are all species of palms, bread-fruit, cinnamon, coral, ebony, satin-wood, etc. Among the animals the elephant is the chief, although the specimens are inferior to those of India and Africa. Buffaloes, deer, monkeys, bears and numerous smaller animals are found.

Agriculture.—The inhabitants are more addicted to agriculture than to any other pursuit, and though their implements are very rude, they raise good crops where they can obtain sufficient water. The principal productions are rice, coffee, tea, sugar, cinchona, cocoa-nuts, cinnamon and tobacco. The manufactures are of the most primitive description.

Imports and Exports.—The chief articles of export are coffee, cinnamon, cocoa-nuts, cocoa-nut oil, hides, pearls and plumbago. Manufactured cotton goods, grain, metals, hardware, glassware, etc., are the chief imports. The value of the exports for 1876 was $22,547,975, and of the imports was $27,814,420. The trade is chiefly with Great Britain.

Minerals.—The principal mineral deposits are plumbago and iron, which exist in large quantities and of very fine quality, so that indeed the ruddy worked native iron is considered equal to the best Swedish. Precious stones are also found in great abundance in the district of Sabaragamuwa.

Fisheries.—Fish abound in great variety and the pearl fisheries are of considerable importance, but vary greatly in different years.

Government, etc.—Ceylon is a crown colony, that is, a possession of the British crown, and its affairs are administered by a governor appointed by the crown. The inhabitants are chiefly Buddhists. There is one line of railway 118 miles in length connecting Colombo with the interior. The colony has 1,468 schools, and the annual expenditure of the government for education is about $150,000. The revenue for 1878 amounted to $8,213,045, and the expenditures to $7,725,515. There is a public debt of $1,650,000, for which a sinking fund is provided.

THE CHINESE EMPIRE.

REVISED AND CORRECTED BY MR. KWONG KI CHIU, LATE A MEMBER OF THE CHINESE EDUCATIONAL COMMISSION IN THE UNITED STATES; HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT.

Chinese and Japanese—Chung Kwo¹¹; or, Chung Wah. Danish—Kina. French—La Chine. German—China. Russian—Kitai. Italian—Cina. Spanish and Portuguese—China. Swedish—Kina. Turkish—Chin. Dutch—China.

Its Constituents.—The Chinese Empire at present consists of five countries, to wit: (1) China proper. (2) Manchooria. (3) Mongolia. (4) Tibet. (5) Eastern Toorkistan. We shall consider these in the order named.

China Proper, lying in the eastern part of Asia, is bounded on the north by Mongolia and Manchooria, on the east by the Pacific ocean, on the south by the gulf of Tonquin, Anam, Siam and Burmah, and on the west by Tibet and Eastern Toorkistan. Including the island of Hainan, it extends from 18° to 40° north latitude, and from 90° to 124° east longitude. The area and population of China cannot be given with perfect accuracy, but the estimates of the best authorities place the area at 1,534,953 square miles, and the population at about 360,000,000 or 400,000,000.

Topography and Geography.—China is a four-sided figure, with a coast line of 2,500 miles, and a frontier line of 4,400 miles. From north to south its length is 1,474 miles, and its width from east to west is 1,355 miles, but the distance from its northeastern to its southwestern extremity is 1,699 miles. On the northern boundary is the famous Great Wall, 1,500 miles in length, from 12 to 25 feet in height, with a thickness at the base of 25 feet, and at the top of 15 feet, and surmounted with towers at intervals of 100 yards. The surface of China slopes from Tibet to the sea, and is naturally divided into three portions: (1) The mountainous country, including the major part of the territory between Tibet and meridian 113°; (2) the hilly country, extending east of meridian 113° and south of the Yang-tse-Kiang river; and (3) the great plain in the northeastern part, with an area of 210,000 square miles, and supporting a population of 177,000,000. Two ranges of mountains extend from Tibet across China, the Thsin-ling, or Blue mountains, in the north, and the Nan-ling, a spur of the Himalayas, in the south, some of whose peaks attain an elevation of 12,000 feet. The two great rivers of China are the Hung Ho, or Yellow river, and the Yang-tse-Kiang. Rising near one another, in the eastern mountains of Tibet, then separating to a distance of 1,100 miles, and including Thsin-ling mountains between them, they again approach closely as they empty into the sea. The basin of the Hung-Ho has an area of 200,000 square miles, and that of the Yang-tse-Kiang 750,000 square miles. South of the Nan-ling mountains the Si-kiang is a river of considerable size. China has five great lakes, on whose surface are often seen artificial, floating islands, which are inhabited and cultivated. These lakes are the Hung-ting-hu, the Tsan-hu, and the Tai-hu, near together on the northeast coast, and the Tung-ting-hu and the Po-yang-hu, in the interior.

Climate.—A country of so great an extent as China must necessarily have a varied climate. The interior is found to be warmer than the coast of the same latitude. The annual rainfall ranges from 18 inches at Peking to 70 inches at Canton. The range of the thermometer, in a given place, is also very great, as in Peking, from 105° F. to 6° below zero. A monsoon blows down the coast from October to June, and up the coast from June to October. Typhoons also occur on the coast, particularly in the provinces of Quang-tung and Foo-kien, in June, July, August and September.

Tea, Timber and Fruits.—The most important vegetable production of China is the tea-plant. Among the most important trees are the tallow tree, the varnish tree, the camphor tree, the Chinese pine, the Chinese banyan, the funeral cypress, and the mulberry tree. There are 63 varieties of the bamboo, which is very abundant. Among fruits, there are apples, grapes, pears, peaches, plums, bananas, sugarcane, water-melons, lyche, peanuts, pomegranates, mangoes, pineapples, three species of orange, and many others which are not found in other countries.

Animal Life.—Ferocious beasts are still found in the jungles of Yun-nan and along the Nan-ling mountains. Bears exist in the hills of the north, and wild-cats abound in southern forests. The musk-deer, and a few other species, represent the ruminants. Among birds are found the gold and silver pheasant, the argus pheasant, and others of the gallinaceous kind; also fly-catchers, thrushes, quails, larks, and several species of crows, jays and magpies. Waterfowl abound. While the larger reptiles are unknown, lizards are found in the south, and turtles and tortoises exist in great numbers on the coasts. Among insects, spiders are large and numerous, and locusts are so abundant as often to commit extensive ravages.

Subdivisions and Population.—China proper is divided into eighteen provinces, whose relative location, area and population, as estimated in 1877, are given in the following table:

	Area, square miles.	Population.
Northern Provinces:
Chih-li	58,949	28,114,023
Shan-tung	55,104	28,958,764

Total.....	1,534,953	495,213,152

Chief Cities.—Peking, in Chih-li, is the capital of China, and has a population estimated at 1,500,000. Other principal cities are Canton, estimated population 1,000,000; Tien-tsin, in Chih-li, 400,000 to 930,000; Foo-chow-foo, in Foo-kien, 500,000; Shanghai, in Kiang-soo, 320,000; Hang-chow-foo and Ning-po, in Che-kiang, and Amoy (250,000), in Foo-kien.

Agriculture.—From an agricultural point of view China may be divided into three belts—the northern, the central, and the southern. The northern extends to the 35th parallel, embracing the provinces of Chih-li, Shan-tung, Shan-se, Shen-se and Kan-su, and producing the grains, fruits and animals of Northern Europe. The central belt, lying between the 35th and 27th parallels, includes Sze-chuen, Quai-chow, Hoo-nan, Hoo-pe, Kiang-se, Ngan-whi, Ho-nan and Kiang-soo. Tea and silk are the great products of this, the richest portion of China. They are principally produced in Sze-chuen, Hoo-pe, Kiang-se and Kiang-soo. The southern belt includes Yun-nan, Quang-tung, Quang-se, Foo-kien and Che-kiang. The productions are tropical, rice especially being raised in enormous quantities. Every available inch of Chinese soil, excepting tracts in the western colony, is cultivated with the greatest care. Manures are very freely employed. Such is the importance attached to agriculture, that at the beginning of each year the Emperor and his ministers go through a great state ceremony in his honor. Tea and raw silk are the staple exports from China, while manufactured cotton and woolen goods, and opium from British India, are the chief articles of import. The trade in opium is enormous, the importation in 1880 reaching 80,000 chests of 140 pounds each, valued at from $500 to $750 per chest. Notwithstanding the opposition to this trade, on the part of the Chinese government, it is steadily increasing. A table of exports and imports will be found at the end of this article.

Minerals.—The mineral wealth of China, now known to be very great, may be said to be almost wholly undeveloped. The iron and coal resources of the province of Shan-se rival those of Pennsylvania in quantity, quality, and the ease with which the minerals may be extracted. Valuable deposits are also found in Shan-se of copper, tin and quicksilver. But Yun-nan is supposed to be more richly endowed than any of the other provinces with mineral wealth. The extent of the mineral region is, of course, not yet determined. The metal that has been most extensively worked is copper. Coal is now being mined by machinery in Chih-li, near Tien-tsin. In some provinces of Southern China are found quarries of marble, porphyry, jasper, granite and quartz. And among precious stones there are the crystal, ruby, amethyst, sapphire, topaz, turquoise, jade, garnet, opal, agate and jasper.

Fish.—Fish of all kinds and in great quantities are found in the waters of China, such as the sturgeon, mullet, carp, trout, perch, pike, eel, and several kinds peculiar to that country. The goldfish came originally from China. Oysters are found in limited quantity on the coast. The Chinese use meat and fish in about equal proportion as articles of diet. The raising of fish in ponds is extensively carried on, especially in the interior, and the supply from this source far exceeds that from the natural waters. Nearly all the oysters consumed in China are raised in ponds near the coast.

Government.—The government of China is monarchical, but not despotic, all power centering in the Emperor, who is at once chief legislator, chief executive, and chief judge. The government is not hereditary or confined by law to any particular one of the issue of the Emperor, but he is at liberty to appoint from among his sons that one whom he thinks most worthy to succeed himself. The government may be said to have a moral basis, the Emperor being morally bound to guide his actions by the fundamental laws and precepts laid down in the books called the Ta-ising-kwei-tien, or "Collected Regulations of the Great tsing Dynasty." It is firmly believed that if any emperor dares to violate these principles, and to do injustice and wrong, the God of heaven will punish him. The administrative machinery of the government, from the emperor down, forms the largest and most perfect bureaucracy in the world. The Emperor is assisted by the members of the Interior Council Chamber, composed of two Chinese, two Manchurians, and assistants, one being a Chinese and the other a Manchurian. The members are called Ministers of State, and it is their duty to see that nothing is done contrary to laws of the empire. They correspond somewhat to Cabinet officers of the United States in being advisers of the Emperor. Acting under their directions are six boards of government, each presided over by a Chinese and a Manchurian, and each controlling a distinct department of administration. These boards are: (1) The board of civil service, taking cognizance of the conduct of all civil officers; (2) the board of revenues, which regulates all financial affairs; (3) the board of rites and ceremonies, regulating imperial household affairs, court matters and diplomacy; (4) the military board, having charge of the administration of the army; (5) the board of justice, or court of appeals; (6) the board of public works. Matters may be referred by the Emperor to the appropriate boards, for advice. They may also, individually or collectively, propose laws to the Emperor. Then there is the Lu-chan-yuen, or Public Censorate, composed at present of 90 or 100 members. This censorate has a general supervision of the whole system of administration, and its members alone possess the right, individually or otherwise, of presenting remonstrances to the Emperor concerning his (the Emperor's) conduct, or that of any high official.

Provincial Administration.—The empire (China proper) is divided into 18 provinces, and each province contains, on an average, 60 districts, a district being about the size of an English county. The union of several of these districts forms a division, or department; and a circuit embraces one or more departments, according to size. Fifteen of these provinces have each a governor, who is almost as absolute with reference to those under him as is the Emperor to the whole empire. He is chief executive and commander-in-chief, but has no power to execute a sentenced criminal (pirates excepted) without first having the sanction of the Emperor. An officer of finance, a provincial judge, prefects, district magistrates, an educational examiner, and other subordinate officers assist each governor in his province. Two or more provinces united form a vice royalty, presided over by a viceroy. The three provinces which have no governor of their own are each governed by a viceroy. Each circuit is ruled by an intendant, each department by a prefect, and each district by a district magistrate. The total number of government officials is enormous. In addition to the regular officers, special commissioners may be sent by the Emperor, if he deems it advisable, into all parts of the empire, to look after the affairs of the government. Appointments to certain offices are made through the instrumentality of competitive examinations. There are three degrees that are conferred. Those that pass the first examination, which is held in the capital of each department twice every three years, receive the degree of bachelor. The bachelors then present themselves at the second examination, which is held triennially in each provincial capital, and the successful ones obtain the degree of licentiate. The licentiates then make trial in the third examination (also held triennially) at Peking, and the fortunate win the degree of doctor, which insures speedy preferment.

Religions.—There are three great religions, if they may be so called when the Chinese have no word equivalent in meaning to our word "religion." They are: (1) Confucianism, universally held by the educated, which is more properly a philosophy than a religion; (2) Buddhism, imported from India, which is degenerating into a coarse idolatry and losing its hold on the people; and (3) Taoism, which makes use of incantations and a sort of alchemy, and is entertained only by the illiterate. Mahomedanism prevails quite extensively in the north of China, and its presence is not objected to. Roman Catholicism, also, has made considerable progress in Northern China, under the lead of the Jesuits, who commend themselves to the people by adopting the full Chinese dress, shaving the head and wearing the cue. These statements concerning Mohammedanism and Romanism are from Mr. Kwong Ki Chiu, a gentleman of much travel and reading, as well as the author of several educational works, such as a "Dictionary of English Phrases, with Illustrative Sentences," and a series of Conversation Books. He also states that the reason of the special prejudice among his countrymen against the Christian religion, though tolerant of others, is due to the wars of entrance and conquest carried on by Christian nations of Europe against China, and especially to the so-called "opium war." They see an elegant and costly cathedral occupying the site of the governor's palace and official buildings in Canton, which were destroyed in one of these wars. This government building was in the most central and beautiful part of the city, of which it was the pride and the ornament. It was destroyed in 1857. The imperial summer palace with its surroundings, called Yuen-ming-yuan, a few miles from Peking, was also destroyed in the last war. The Chinese also fear that the introduction of the Christian religion will render its adherents allies of foreign Christian nations, and traitorous to their country, in case war should arise. In the wars referred to, some Chinese leaders, calling themselves Christians, went over to the enemy; at least, so it is reported. The Chinese are utter strangers to religious zeal. No man concerns himself about the religion of another. All agree in the worship of deceased ancestors, the rules for which were established by Chow Kung, about 1113 B. C. There is no state religion, with priesthood attached, maintained at public expense. The government is as tolerant and indifferent as the people, unless political designs chance to lurk in a creed. There is no public adoption of a religious system or life in China, as in Christian lands, where admission to the church is accompanied with religious ceremonies. The people who worship do so because it is the custom, and can give no other reason. Neither are children educated on this subject in any other way than by custom and example. There is no special religious instruction.

Education.—The Chinese have an almost sacred respect and reverence for education. It is a passport to all kinds of distinctions, to wealth, power, office and rank. Schools are scattered broadcast. The government appoints examiners, and some of the colleges receive aid from the local government, and are called government colleges. The students receive tuition and many prizes from the government.

The Army.—The Chinese have nominally a very large army, which has not hitherto been as good as some European armies. But under the training and drilling of English, American and French officers a large portion of the army has been very much improved for effective service. The army is composed of two great divisions—first, the Tartars, from among whom the present Emperor comes; and second, the Chinese proper. Garrisons of the former are stationed in all the provincial cities of the empire. The standing Chinese army is widely distributed over the country, and acts mainly as a constabulary force. The total army, according to statistics taken in 1871, amounted to 858,000 men.

Navy.—The Chinese government has begun to form a war navy of foreign-built vessels, principally for defense of the coast. It has several war vessels of European construction, including a number of iron-clad steamers. A large one has just been contracted for in Germany, at a cost of $2,000,000, for coast defenses. There are also many forts built on the most approved plans, and provided with rifled steel guns.

Means of Transportation.—Imperial roads and canals penetrate the country and ramify in all directions. The country is very well adapted to the construction of railroads, and it is probable they will soon be introduced. The government is now putting up telegraph wires between Shanghai and Tientsin, a distance of nearly 1,000 miles; a short line has also been constructed from Foo-chow to the harbor.

Revenues, etc.—The total public revenue in recent years is estimated at £25,000,000 annually, derived from taxes on land, grain, licenses, and customs duties upon exports and imports. The amount received from customs (chiefly upon exports) in 1876 was £3,645,876. The army absorbs most of the government expenditure. The estimated annual cost of maintaining the army is £15,000,000. In 1874 China for the first time contracted a foreign debt to the amount of £627,675, secured by the customs revenue.

Foreign Residents.—At the end of 1872 there were in China 1,771 natives of Great Britain and Ireland, 541 of the United States, 481 of Germany, 239 of France, and a few of other nationalities, making a total of 3,661, of whom 2,047 resided at Shanghai, 308 at Canton, and the rest were scattered.

Trade and Commerce.—Imports into China from foreign countries in 1879 were as follows:

Opium (from India under monopoly of British government), 11,073,333 pounds, value	$50,700,000
Cotton goods (from England and United States)	31,400,000
Woolen goods (chiefly from England)	7,000,000
Metals	5,700,000
Matches (chiefly from Europe)	550,000
Kerosene oil (from United States)	1,000,000
Sundries (from all countries)	18,000,000

Total.....$114,350,000

Exports from China to foreign countries in 1879:

Tea, 265,000,000 pounds, value	$46,000,000
Silk	40,000,000
Sugar	3,000,000
Sundries	11,200,000

Total.....$100,200,000

Value of foreign trade in 1879.....$215,000,000

Value of exports to the United States in 1880.....$24,020,707

Value of imports from the United States in 1880.....3,978,775

For map, lists of newspapers and value of money, see other departments of this work.

The resident representatives of the United States are as follows:

Peking—James B. Angell, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary.

Shanghai—Owen N. Denny, consul general.

Amoy—W. E. Goldsborough, consul.

Canton—William L. Scruggs, consul.

Chin-Kiang—Enoch J. Smithers, consul.

Che-foo—A. M. Eckford, consular agent.

Foo-Chow—Joseph C. A. Wingate, consul.

Hankow—Isaac F. Shepard, consul.

Hong-Kong—John S. Moseby, consul.

New-Chwang—Fred. Bandinel, vice and deputy consul.

Ningpo—Edward C. Lord, consul.

Tamsui and Keelung—John Dodd, consular agent.

Tien-Tsin—James C. Zuck, consul.

[NOTE.—Foreign trade with China is confined wholly to 21 open trade ports, upon the seacoast. No foreign consuls or commercial representatives are found in the interior cities, none but the diplomatic legations being permitted to reside at Peking.]

An Advertising Agent of long experience says in relation to Cheap Contracts and Hard Bargains: "I used to think I knew a great deal more as to what every advertiser ought to do than I do now. But one cannot be mistaken in insisting that—as in all other things, so in newspaper advertising—the best is the cheapest. I have expended a great deal of money for a great many extensive advertisers, and it is not my experience that those have been the most successful who used poor newspapers because they seemed cheap, or drove hard bargains with the good ones. To a certain judicious extent liberality is profitable, and an advertiser may miss his aim by a kind of narrowness of view and action, and show a good deal of skill in tucking away his money in cheap contracts, as if the object of advertising were to do it so economically that it will not be found out one is advertising at all."

CHALLENGE.—I, Elizabeth Wilkinson, of Clerkenwell, having had some words with Hannah Hyfield, and requiring satisfaction, do invite her to meet me upon the stage, and box me for three guineas; each woman holding half a crown in each hand, and the first woman that drops the money to lose the battle.

Answer.—I, Hannah Hyfield, of Newgate Market, hearing of the resoluteness of Elizabeth Wilkinson, will not fail, God willing, to give her more blows than words, desiring home blows, and from her no favour; she may expect a good thumping!—Advertisement in London Post Boy, 1722.

A queer advertisement appears in the London Pacquet in 1803, and contains some verses of a kind superior to that generally met in these appeals. It is called a public bridal.

Jonathan and Grace Musgrave purpose having a Public Bridal at Low Lorton Bridge End, near Cockermouth, on Thursday, the 16th of June, 1803, when they will be glad to see their friends, and all who may please to favour them with their Company;—for whose Amusement there will be various Races, for Prizes of different kinds: and amongst others, a Saddle, and Bridle; and a Silver-tipt Hunting Horn, for Hounds to run for.—There will also be Leaping, Wrestling, &c. &c.

Commodious Rooms are likewise engaged for Dancing Parties, in the Evening.

THE EMPIRE OF CHINA.

BY R. CHATTERTON WILCOX, OF THE "HONG KONG DAILY PRESS."

[The subjoined article presents China as viewed from the standpoint of a European resident of Hong Kong.—Ed.]

Governmental Organization.—This vast and venerable empire comprises, in addition to the 18 provinces which form China proper, and each of which is as large as a European kingdom or an American State, Mongolia with an area of 1,288,035 square miles; Manchuria, with an area of 362,313 square miles, and the dependency of Thibet. The present emperor, who reigns under the style of Kwang Si, is the son of Prince Ch'un, seventh son of the Emperor Tao Kwang, and was chosen, by adoption, to succeed the late Emperor Tung Chi, on the death of the latter in January, 1875. The Empresses-Dowager, widows of the Emperor Hien Fung, who held the reins of power during the long minority of the Emperor Tung Chi, act as regents during the minority of the present monarch who succeeded at a very early age. There is reason to believe he was adopted in order to enable these two ambitious women to gain a fresh lease of power.* The administration of the empire is under the supreme direction of the interior council chamber, under whose orders are six boards of government presided over by one Manchu and one Chinese official. To these, however, must be added the Tsung Li Yamên, or board of foreign affairs, to whom is entrusted the management of all foreign affairs. The government of China is patriarchal, mild in theory, but despotic in practice. Each province is ruled by a viceroy, or governor, whose authority is practically unlimited, but who is held in some restraint by fear of the censors exposing grave abuses or the people breaking out in revolt, either of which circumstances would procure his recall and degradation. The officials are, however, paid at a very low rate, and some posts are farmed out for a term, the result being that boundless corruption prevails, and it is impossible for justice to be obtained save on payment of heavy bribes. Individuals have no appeal, but communities or classes, when unjustly taxed, not infrequently combine to resist the imposition, and often succeed in obtaining its removal. There is, however, no real public opinion in China, and the work of reform has never been attempted, except here and there by some zealous official newly installed in office and anxious to make a name for upright administration.

Revenue and Expenditure.—There is no possibility of arriving at a correct estimate of the revenue. It has been variously estimated at from one hundred millions sterling to half of that amount. There are constant deficits reported by the provincial governors, who complain that the present system of the collection of customs subtracts from their revenue.

* Since the preparation of this article, the death of one of the personages named, the "Empress of the West," has occurred.

The total revenue from customs in 1879 was 13,531,670 Haikwan taels.† China has three small foreign loans, the first contracted in 1874 for £627,675, and the others in 1877 and 1878. There is considerable wealth in the country, but the policy of the Chinese authorities in periodically levying forced contributions from wealthy citizens tends to stifle enterprise and leads to the concealment of money by those who possess it. The treaty just concluded with Russia, whereby China agrees to pay a heavy indemnity for Russia's expenditure in Kukdja and her preparations for war, will probably necessitate the contraction by the Peking government of another foreign loan.

Population, Towns and Cities.—The population of the central kingdom has been differently estimated, but no reliable returns have ever been made. The latest estimate gave the empire a population of 400,000,000 souls, but this is doubtless considerably over the mark, the Taiping rebellion and frightful famines in the northern provinces of late years having greatly thinned the swarming ranks of this fecund people. Kiang-su and Ngan-whi are, relatively to their size, the most populous provinces, while Yun-nan, Kwei-chow and Kwang-si are the most thinly peopled. The estimated population of Peking, the capital, is 1,500,000. Canton contains 1,600,000, Tientsin 920,000, Hankow 600,000, and Shanghai (foreign settlements and native city united), 273,000. The following ports have, by various treaties, been opened to foreign trade: Canton, Hoikow (in Hainan), Pakhoi, Swatow, Amoy, Foochow, the three ports of Takao, Tamsui and Keelung in Formosa. Winchow, Ningpo, Shanghai, Chinkiang, Wuhu, Kiukiang, Hankow, Schang, Chefoo, Tientsin, and Newchwang. The right to trade at Nanking was also conceded by the treaty of Tientsin, but has never been claimed by foreigners.

Army and Navy.—The Chinese army is said to number 850,000 men, and the main portion consists of the troops of the Eight Banners. But a large proportion of this army exists only on paper, or is miserably inefficient, consisting in most cases of a disorderly and undisciplined rabble. Of late years efforts have been made to render some corps effective, and at Canton, Foochow, Shanghai and Tientsin there are now some well drilled bodies of men armed with Snider rifles, and capable, if properly officered, of doing good service. This force, however, is comparatively small, and can hardly be considered a sufficient leaven to materially improve the lump. The navy is scarcely advanced beyond infancy yet, but is in process of formation. The most formidable vessels in point of armament are the gunboats of the alphabetical class built for the Chinese government by the Elswick company, on the Tyne. Four of these little craft carry one 27½-ton gun, and the other four are armed with one 35-ton gun and two 12-pounder Armstrongs and four Gatlings. They are intended for river and coast defense, and as such are likely to prove very effective, as they draw little water and present scarcely any target to the enemy. A very unwieldy corvette and a number of wooden gunboats make up the rest of the fleet. An iron-clad and some more gunboats have been ordered in Europe.

Commerce.—Essentially a commercial people, the Chinese have a genius, it may even be said a passion, for trade, which survives alike the depressing influence of the government's exclusive policy and the merciless exactions of the officials. The internal trade of the empire is enormous, and is now rapidly recovering the terrible blow given it by the devastation caused by the Taipings. The foreign trade of China goes on increasing yearly. In 1865 it reached a total value of 109,818,732 Hk. taels, and in 1879 this had swelled to 154,508,686 Hk. taels. The bulk of this trade is with Great Britain and her colonies, no less than 121,829,380 taels being credited to these countries. The leading exports are tea, silk and cotton; the principal imports, cotton and woolen manufactured goods and opium. The import of other goods is, however, increasing. Owing to the numerous barrier duties levied on foreign goods they are unable to penetrate in any quantity to the inland provinces, the price, through high duties and cost of carriage, becoming prohibitive.

Manufactures.—Numerous manufactures, both in cotton, silk and other fabrics, flourish, but the Manchester cottons and American drills have to some extent superseded native cloths. Similarly foreign hardware has in many cases found favor with the Chinese, being superior in every respect. China will probably one day be a good customer for foreign machinery of various kinds. At present scanty encouragement is given by the authorities to the natives to employ foreign labor-saving machinery, labor being excessively cheap and hungry mouths extraordinarily numerous.

Agriculture and Productions.—Agriculture is pursued in China on the most laborious and the most minute scale. The industry of the people, prompted, it must be allowed, by necessity, is untiring, and every spot of ground is, in many provinces, turned to account, the sides of the steepest hills being cut into narrow terraces, which are carefully irrigated by water pumped up from the streams below or from rills arrested in their descent down the declivities. The implements used are of very primitive construction, but in the hands of the thrifty Chinese peasant they are made to accomplish wonders. Human excreta is used everywhere for manure, and the Chinese fields are at no time pleasant to linger in. The soil being fertile and the climate very varied, there are few productions either of the tropics or of more temperate zones which are not, or cannot be raised successfully in one or other of the eighteen provinces.

Postal System.—As yet China has not attained the dignity of possessing a postal system, and the excellent example of Japan has failed to arouse any emulation at Peking. About two years ago, however, a trial was made, under the auspices of the imperial maritime customs, of a system to provide communication between Shanghai and the northern ports by courier overland, and this has been continued, but never extended, and it is exceedingly doubtful when the Chinese will attempt to establish a proper postal system.

Telegraphs and Public Works.—There is a line of telegraph connecting Tientsin with Taku, at the mouth of the Peiho, another short one at Foo-chow, and one in Formosa, all of which were constructed principally for the convenience of the mandarins and are of comparatively little commercial utility. The recent embroglio with Russia convinced the authorities at Peking of the desirability of the capital being brought into closer communication with the outside world, and a contract has therefore been signed with the Great Northern Telegraph Company to construct a line of telegraph from Shanghai overland to Peking. A railroad from Tientsin to Peking has also been mooted, and one high military official urged the importance of this work upon the emperor; but now that the difficulty with Russia has been amicably arranged it is doubtful whether the project will be entertained. It is now three years since the only railway ever laid in China—the little line from Woosung to Shanghai—was torn up by the Chinese officials and shipped off with the plant to Takao in Formosa, where it has since been spoiling from rust and dirt. No new public works are undertaken in China, and the old ones, such as the Grand Canal, are allowed to fall into decay. If a new fort is built, it usually soon begins to crumble to ruin, owing to the bad material employed by dishonest contractors, who bribe the officials. Even the most sacred buildings in the imperial city at Peking are allowed to fall into a state of discreditable disrepair, and hence there are few monuments of antiquity in the country, and none that have been preserved with any care.

Newspapers.—There is practically no newspaper press in China. In the whole of this great empire, with all its populous cities, there is but one paper published regularly in the Chinese language outside the limits of the treaty ports, and that is the official Peking Gazette, in which appear the memorials of the officials and censors, and the imperial decrees in reply. This paper boasts of the highest antiquity, but it has never advanced beyond its original form, which is of the rudest. It is printed from rough wooden blocks on the flimsiest of paper. It flourished centuries before the art of printing was known in Europe, but, like others, the art has long stood still in this most conservative of countries. The other Chinese papers are printed at Ningpo and Shanghai. In the former port a small monthly paper has just been launched, but it is doubtful whether it will last. At Shanghai two daily papers in the vernacular flourish—the Shen-pao and Sin-pao. The former is a very flourishing journal, and enjoys a circulation computed at 5,000 copies. It is the independent and fearless advocate of reform and progress, and is conducted by natives, but under the auspices of a foreigner. The Sin-pao is a mandarin organ, and has latterly displayed a laudable desire to expose abuses and urge the necessity for reform. There are also some magazines published in Shanghai in Chinese by the missionary body, one called the Child's Paper, enjoying a considerable circulation. Native papers have likewise at different times been started at Foo-chow, Amoy and Canton, but have had at best an ephemeral existence. Four Chinese papers published in the colony of Hong-Kong circulate to a considerable extent in the southern treaty ports of China, but as all save one are under foreign management and all more or less under foreign influences, they cannot be said to form part of the press of China. Although a very considerable proportion of the people can read, most of them are very poor, and cannot spare a few cash—10 to a cent—to purchase a paper. Moreover they delight in a species of cheap literature the morality of which is more than questionable. The formation of a public opinion in China by means of the press will be a matter of time and patience. The foreign press in China is well represented at Shanghai; at the other treaty ports there are no journals of any influence.

THE COLONY OF HONG-KONG.

The island of Hong-Kong was ceded to Great Britain by the Chinese government in 1841. It is situated at the mouth of the Chukiang or Pearl river, close to the mainland, from which it is separated by about a mile of water. The island, which is eleven miles long and two to five broad, consists of a lofty ridge of broken hills, with few valleys, and these of small area. Included in the colony is the opposite peninsula of Kowloon, which was ceded to Great Britain in 1861. It is a barren strip of land of no great value, but its possession by England was deemed necessary as it commands the harbor. The city of Victoria, the only one in the colony, is well built, though the streets were originally badly laid out; and, seen from the water, it has an imposing and highly picturesque appearance. It contains a population of about 120,000, and the total population of the colony is estimated at 150,000. The British and foreign residents, including the floating population and the naval and military establishments, number about 7,000. Hong-Kong is a great emporium of trade, as will be readily understood by a glance at its commanding position on the map. During the year 1879 no less than 19,322 vessels, aggregating 3,652,402 tons, entered, and 19,688 vessels, aggregating 3,535,485 tons, cleared with cargoes; while 7,915 vessels, with 470,266 tons, entered, and 7,019 vessels, with 582,247 tons, cleared in ballast. The trade consists chiefly in opium, sugar, salt, flour, oil, cotton goods, earthenware, amber, ivory, etc. The bulk of the European trade of China and Japan passes through Hong-Kong. The press is well represented in this colony, there being two daily papers and two fortnightly papers published in English, three Chinese daily papers and one bi-weekly. Hong-Kong is, moreover, a centre from which foreign influences and foreign ideas percolate into China with the trade which passes through this small but important colony.

THE COLONY OF MACAO.

This colony is a rocky peninsula separated from the island of Heungshan by a wall drawn across a narrow neck of land. It is on the coast of Kwangtung, about 40 miles distant from Hong-Kong, and about 80 from Canton. Macao was first settled by the Portuguese in 1557, and they claim it both by gift for services rendered in former days in the suppression of piracy, and by right of conquest, the Chinese customs officers having been driven out in 1848. Since the settlement of Hong-Kong by the British, the trade of Macao has dwindled down to small dimensions, and great poverty now exists among the inhabitants. Trade has latterly, however, shown some signs of revival, but the port is never likely again to become a great seat of commerce. The total population is 68,000, of whom less than 5,000 are Portuguese. There is now no paper published in the colony except the government Boletín, which is issued only as occasion requires, at long intervals. The bulk of the trade is done through the Chinese.

COCHIN CHINA.

This part of Asia consists of the kingdoms of Annam and Tonquin, which are semi-independent, the kingdom of Cambodia, which is under the direct protection of France, and the extensive French colony which comprises the provinces of Giadiuh, Bienhoa, Mytho, Chaudoc, Hatien and Vinhlor, and the island of Pulo Condor. Saigon, the principal town of French Cochin China, and the seat of government, is situated on the river of the same name, about 40 miles from the sea. The population, including that of Cholen, adjoining it, is about 70,000. The town is admirably laid out, and a large cathedral has recently been built more with a view to the future than to present wants. The trade of the port is almost confined to the export of rice, which is raised in vast quantities on the fertile swamps of Cochin China. The French intend to take Tonquin and either annex it altogether or govern it as a protected state like Cambodia. The kingdom of Annam, to which crown Tonquin at present belongs, is in a degraded condition. The government is corrupt throughout, devoid of enterprise, and averse to all improvements. The people are wretchedly poor, miserably ignorant, and apathetic to a degree. There are neither railways, telegraphs, postal system, or newspapers in this benighted land, and few houses better than mud hovels. In Angkor, in Cambodia, are the ruins of stately piles of masonry built by a far superior race to that which now crawls the earth in Cochin China. Under French rule it is possible that the resources of the country may be developed, but never by native industry or enterprise. Three French papers are published in Saigon—the Courrier de Saigon (the government organ) fortnightly, a small daily called Le Journal de Saigon, and a weekly paper entitled L'Ere Nouvelle. The circulation of all is very limited, and so far journalistic ventures in this colony have proved extremely unremunerative. It has been in contemplation for some time to start a Chinese paper in Saigon, the Chinese community being very numerous, but the prospects of success are regarded as very dubious.

THE TERRITORIAL DEPENDENCIES OF CHINA.

BY JNO. A. AMUNDSON, A.B.

Manchooria, one of the dependencies of the Chinese Empire, is bounded on the north and east by the Amoor and Usuri rivers, which divide it from the Russian Amoor territory; on the south by Corea and the Yellow sea, and on the west by Mongolia. It lies in north latitude between the parallels of 40° and 53° 30', and in east longitude between the meridians of 118° and 135°. It has an area of 362,313 square miles, and an estimated population of 3,000,000. For the most part it is a wild, uninhabited country, as yet but little explored by Europeans. One river, the Amoor, with its branches, drains almost the whole of it, and the lakes are few in number. Lake Khanka, 40 miles long and 25 miles broad, is the most important. Several mountain chains traverse this territory, the principal of which, forming part of the western boundary, is the Khingan range, with an elevation of 15,000 feet. Forests cover the greater part of the country. The climate resembles that of Canada—warm in summer, cold in winter. In summer the thermometer indicates from 70° to 80°; in the winter, from 45° above to 10° below zero, at the same time that the ground is thoroughly frozen and snow abundant. Wild animals, such as bears, wolves and deer, inhabit the woods, and are valuable for their furs. Among birds of prey there is a vulture whose size and fierceness rivals the condor of the Andes. Fish, such as carp, salmon, sturgeon, pike, and shell fish are abundant in the rivers and on the coasts. Manchooria is rich in undeveloped beds of coal and iron. Agriculture is carried on in the southern part, and the crops produced are of wheat, barley, pulse, millet, buckwheat, and silk, while large herds of cattle, horses and sheep are raised. The three provinces into which Manchooria is divided are Liaotung or Shinking, Girin, and Saghalin-ulu, whose capital cities respectively are Mukden or Shinyang, Girin, Tzitzikhar. All possess considerable size.

Mongolia, a second dependency of the Chinese empire, lies to the north and northwest of China proper. Siberia bounds it on the north, Manchooria on the northeast and east, the Chinese provinces of Chih-le, Shan-se, Shen-se and Kan-suh on the south, and East Toorkistan and Dzungari on the west. It extends in north latitude 37° to 54°, and in east longitude from 85° to 125°. Having an area of 1,288,035 square miles, its population is estimated at 2,000,000, about one-fourth of whom are Chinese. Mongolia is for the most part a vast plain, with an elevation above the sea of 3,000 feet, and almost wholly wanting in woods, rivers and lakes. In the center is the desert of Gobi, in extent equal to one-third of the total area of the country. The chief mountain ranges are in the north, the best known being the Altai. Here also are found the principal rivers. In the south, the Hoang-ho river traverses Mongolia during a part of its course. The climate is dry and excessively cold, the mercury being often frozen for weeks in succession in winter, and that winter of nine months' duration. The short summer, on the other hand, is as excessively hot as the winter was long. The weather is always liable to sudden and great changes. The wild animals are multitudinous, and include the elk, the stag, the wild goat, the wild ass, the yak, the brown and black bear, the ounce, two species of tiger, wolves of great fierceness, and hares, squirrels and foxes. The double-humped camel is found both wild and domesticated, yielding very fine milk and supplying great quantities of butter and cheese. Eagles and pheasants are abundant. The soil of Mongolia is too dry for agriculture to flourish. The country is believed to be rich in minerals. The religion of the Mongolians is like that of the people of Tibet. The Chinese trade with Russia passes through Mongolia, on whose Russian border is the town of Kiakhta. Through this channel of trade small quantities of European goods reach Mongolia.

East Toorkistan, or Chinese Tartary, the third dependency of the Chinese empire, is situated in the central part of Asia. The Thian-shan range bounds it on the north, the desert of Gobi on the east, Cashmere and Tibet on the south, and the Beloor mountains on the west. It extends in north latitude from 36° to 44°, and in east longitude from 74° to 95°. With an area of 555,284 square miles, it has an estimated population of 1,000,000. The northern, western and southern frontiers are very mountainous, while the interior is a plain, with an elevation of from 3,000 to 5,000 feet. The principal river is the Tarim, flowing into Lake Lob in the desert of Gobi. The climate is so dry as to make the country a desert, except where artificially irrigated or traversed by rivers. In the west the thermometer indicates as high as 150° in summer and as low as 26° below zero in winter, but the temperature is more even in the east and south. The wild animals consist of gazelles, horses, asses, pigs, foxes, hares, the tiger, panther, and a peculiar species of stags. The soil is fertile along the streams, and crops of cotton, rice, wheat, hemp, flax, barley and maize. Apples, pears, apricots, peaches and other fruit are also raised in great abundance. There are great herds of cattle, which form the chief article of export. Among the minerals found are gold, silver, iron, copper, nitre, sal-ammoniac, sulphur, asbestos, agate and precious jasper. The country is divided into seven provinces, which are under the ruler of Kashgar. The principal cities, both as regards trade and population, are Kashgar, Yarkand, Khoten, Yang-shahr, Ush-Turfan, and Asku, most of them situated on branches of the Tarim.

Tibet, the fourth dependency of the Chinese empire, is situated in Central Asia, being bounded on the north by East Toorkistan and China proper, on the east by China, on the south by Burmah, Bootan, Nepaul and British India, and on the west by Cashmere. Extending in north latitude from 27° to 38°, and in east longitude from 78° to 104°, it has an estimated area of 643,734 square miles, and a population of 6,000,000. Tibet forms part of the Central Asiatic plateau, and has an elevation of 15,000 feet. The Himalaya mountains border it upon the south, the Kuen-lun upon the north, and a range connecting these two upon the west, while another great snow-capped range runs between the Kuen-lun and Himalaya. The streams rising upon the north side of the central range of great mountains empty into salt lakes. The southern portion of Tibet is divided by a transverse ridge into two parts, the western of which is in part drained by the Indus and Suttlej rivers, and the eastern by the Bramapootra. The climate in the higher regions is excessively cold and dry, but the valleys are fertile and warm enough for raising European fruits and vegetables. Among minerals are gold silver, mercury, cinnabar, lead, iron, salt, borax and precious stones. Gold, silver and salt are abundant and are exported. Though vegetation is very scant, wild animals abound, such as the tiger, ounce, lynx, wolf, fox, bear, buffalo, wild ox, wild goat, long-haired sheep, and yak. Fish and fowl abound, the more so, perhaps, as Lamaism, the religion of the country, prohibits their use for food. Agriculture is rude and backward, but manufacturing and dyeing are well and largely carried on. The exports consist of drugs, blankets, and other woollens, furs, musk, salt, silver, gold, borax, wool of the shawl goat, ponies, and yak tails; while the imports comprise cotton goods and thread, porcelain, tea, woolen cloths, calicoes, indigo, rice and precious stones. The trade is chiefly with China and British India. Lassa, the capital of all Buddhistic countries, is the capital of Tibet. There are several large towns. A Chinese military force is stationed in the country, and also representatives of the Chinese government to control the local rulers. The religion of the country is Lamaism, with a small intermixture of Moham-medanism and Roman Catholicism. Polyandry is common in some districts.

THE KINGDOM OF COREA.

BY CHARLES E. WILBUR, A.M.

Location, etc.—Corea, a kingdom of Eastern Asia, occupies a peninsula stretching south from the northeastern portion of the Chinese Empire. It is bounded on the north by the plains of Manchuria, east by the Sea of Japan, south by the strait to which it gives its name, and west by the Yellow Sea. It extends from 34° to 42° 25' north latitude, and from 124° 35' longitude east from Greenwich to 130° 50'. Its area is 79,400 square miles, or about 2½ times the size of Scotland. No exact statement can be given as to population, or statistics of any kind, as records are not accessible on account of jealousy of foreigners common to that part of Asia. Its population has been variously estimated at from 5,000,000 to 20,000,000.

Topography.—Corea is a mountainous country, and is compared by a French missionary to a sea under a strong gale as to surface. It is well watered with rivers and small streams. King-ki-Tao or Han-Tching is the capital. The chief towns are Weat-siou, Tai-kou, and Hai-tsiou.

Climate, etc.—The temperature of Corea, though much more equable than that of the neighboring continent, is lower in winter and higher in summer than under the same latitudes in Europe. In the north the rivers remain frozen for several months in the year, and in the south snow remains for a considerable period. The lowest reading of the thermometer is 13° Fahr. below zero.

Fauna and Flora.—Of wild animals the most remarkable are a small species of tiger, the bear and the wild boar; domestic kinds are cattle, horses, swine and dogs. The last are a favorite article of food. Sheep and goats, which are used for religious purposes, can only be raised by the king. The principal articles of cultivation are rice, wheat, millet, rye, tobacco, cotton, hemp and ginseng. Almost all the fruits of Europe are found here.

Minerals.—Corea has the reputation of being richly furnished with mineral resources; gold, silver, copper, iron and coal are all said to be common. Gold and silver mining, however, is strictly prohibited; the copper mines are neglected and Japanese copper is imported. The general use of coal is confined to certain districts.

Manufactures.—The industrial arts are but slightly developed, the peasant himself, in most cases, supplying by his own labor the greater part of his needs. The only manufacture in which the Korean ranks really high is that of paper, a material employed in Japan in a great variety of ways.

Government.—The king of Corea, though a vassal of the Chinese empire, is, within his own country, an absolute monarch, with power of life and death over the noblest in the land.

Religions.—Buddhism, formerly the religion of Corea, gave way to Confucianism in the 14th century. The religion is mainly identical with the Chinese system, but it is mingled with local superstitions.

The Army, etc.—The army nominally includes every individual capable of bearing arms, who does not belong to the nobility, but only a small proportion of the men are brought under discipline. A postal system is maintained by the government. The roads of the country offer but few facilities for traffic; wheeled vehicles are unknown, and much of the transportation is effected by portage. As in China so in Corea, learning is ostensibly in high esteem, and all public officials must pass certain examinations. The student may study as, where and of whom he pleases, the examiners, who are appointed by government, taking account of nothing but results. The United States has no direct trade with Corea.

THE EMPIRE OF JAPAN.

BY JAMES Q. RICE, A.M.

Japanese—Nippon; or, Dai Nippon. Danish—Japan. French—Le Japon. German—Japan. Russian— Japónia; or, Eaponia. Italian—Giappone. Spanish—Japón. Portuguese—Japaon.
Swedish—Japan. Chinese and Japanese—Yih Pên⁸. Turkish—Djapaon.

Situation, Size, etc.—This great empire lies in the northwestern part of the Pacific ocean, off the coast of Asia, from which it is separated by the Straits of Corea and the Japan Sea. It consists of four large islands which are named Nippon, or Hondo; Yesso, or Yezo; Kiushiu and Shikoku, and a great number of smaller ones. The main islands lie between latitude 31° and 50° north and longitude 122° and 153° east. The total area of the empire is estimated at 160,474 square miles, and the total number of islands at 3,850. The population by a census taken in December, 1878, numbered 34,338,304, being an average of 212 persons to the square mile.

Topography and Geography.—The surface of the empire is almost an uninterrupted succession of hills and valleys. Mountains extend from one end of Japan to the other across all the principal islands, many of them being volcanic and rising to a great height. The highest of these, called Fusiyami, about 80 miles from Yedo, is 14,172 feet in height and has its summit covered with perpetual snow. The most extensive range, known as the Hakoni mountains, traverses the main island from east to west, nearly bisecting it. There are many volcanoes, and earthquakes are of so frequent occurrence that all structures of any size are built with special reference to withstanding the shocks, many of which are very severe. The mountains of Yesso rise to a height of 3,000 feet, and a large portion of the island consists of unexplored country covered with forests. The most extensive plains are those of the Kunto, or plain of Yedo, the plain of Echigo, in the north of Oshiu. The provinces of Mino, Mikawa and Ovari are also very flat. Besides these there is also the table-land of Shinano, which lies about 2,500 feet above the sea level. The narrowness of the main island, the smallness of the others, and the general direction of the mountains, which tend to turn the rivers at once into the sea, are circumstances which combine to deprive Japan of large rivers. There are numerous small streams, but the most of them are little more than mountain torrents. The three largest are the Torregawa, Shinangawa and Kisogawa (gawa being the native word for river). The only fresh water lake of any size or importance is the Biwako, near the city of Miako. It is 10 geographical miles in width and 35 in length. Small lakes and ponds abound, and hot springs are found in various parts of the main island. The coasts of Japan abound with promontories and are much indented with bays and inlets, so that they afford many excellent harbors. Of these the Japanese reckon 56 large and 290 smaller ones. There are excellent charts of the coast, which is fringed with dangerous sunken rocks, and on all the large promontories there are lights or beacons of the most approved construction, all having been erected since 1869.

Departments and Cities.—The empire is divided into five departments which surround the capital and eight dôs, or large departments, which are again divided into provinces. The capital is Tokio, or Tokei, formerly called Yedo, which had a population of 595,905 in 1872, but in 1878, with suburbs, had 1,036,771. The other chief cities with their populations according to the latest reports are; Kumamoto, with 300,000; Kioto, or Miako, with 238,663; Osaka, with 281,119; Kajosima, with 200,000; Yokohama, with 61,553; Kanasawa, with 60,000; Nagasaki, with 47,472; Nûgata, with 33,772.

Climate.—The climate of Japan is unequal, but in general, in the central and most densely populated parts, is mild and agreeable. In the extreme south the heat is often very oppressive, while in the island of Yesso the mercury frequently sinks to zero and the snow falls to a great depth. June is considered the rainy month, but the autumn is a kind of second summer, while the delightful weather of October and November more than compensates for the rains of May and June. September generally brings with it rough weather and those terrible hurricanes called typhoons, which do most extensive damage. There are also many earthquakes, which are occasionally followed by tidal waves, attended by a great loss of life and an immense destruction of property. There is a considerable inequality in climate between the east and west shores, owing to the fact that the polar current, sweeping down through the Japanese Sea, cools off the west shore, while the warm "black stream" of the Pacific raises the temperature on the east side.

Flora and Fauna.—There is a fair variety of vegetation in Japan. Perhaps no country in the world produces so many cone-bearing trees, the roads being lined with hedges of them and the temples surrounded by them. Timber is plentiful, cheap, and of great variety. The mulberry tree grows wild, as does the varnish tree, from which the famous Japanese lacquer is made. The camphor tree attains great age and size, and camphor is an export of considerable moment. The chief fruit trees are the apple, pear, plum, peach, apricot, chestnut, walnut, persimmon, pomegranate, fig, orange, lemon and citron. The grape is the best fruit in Japan. Strawberries grow wild, but are tasteless. The loquat and kumquat are common. The box-tree, juniper, ivy, elm, palm, and a black wood like ebony, are also found. Beans, peas, sweet potatoes, carrots, lettuce, beets, yams, tomatoes, ginger, egg plant, gourds, cucumbers, mushrooms, spinach, leeks, radishes, garlic, etc., are the principal vegetables raised for the table. The poverty of Japanese animals is well-known, but, like the flora, they correspond more nearly to the American than the Asiatic continent. In the woods and wilds are found the bear, wild boar, wolf, deer, fox, badger, ground squirrel and hare. The birds are numerous and of great variety. As to domestic animals, goats are found around Nagasaki, cows and bulls in every province, swine in many places, and sheep in a few.

Agriculture.—The agriculture of Japan is conducted with diligence and skill, and the land is in general fertile and well cultivated; but Japan could easily support double its present population. Labor is carried on chiefly by hand and with the rudest tools. Irrigation, however, is judiciously applied, and manures of all kinds carefully collected and used in the production of generally good crops. The grain principally raised is rice, which is of a superior quality and is now an article of export. Next to rice, tea is the great object of cultivation; and since the opening of the country to foreign trade an immense number of new plantations have been set out. Millet and buckwheat are grown in great quantities, and maize and barley are also raised. Rape for oil, hemp, cotton, indigo and tobacco, which is of a very mild quality, are cultivated. The silk industry is of the greatest importance, and raw silk is the most important export staple.

Manufactures.—The Japanese are very skillful workers in metals, especially in alloying and coloring. Their skill in manufacturing is of the highest order; and when they shall have learned to increase the number of useful articles in every department, under the influence of modern improvements, it is likely they will not be surpassed by any nation of the world. They excel in bronze and lacquer, wood and stone carving, mosaics, inlaid and ivory work, fans, silk flowers, toys, etc. They manufacture a great variety of cotton goods; and in crapes, camlets, brocades and figured silks they are preëminent. Paper, which is applied to manifold uses, they manufacture from the native mulberry, and it is noted for its excellent quality. Manufacturing is constantly improving, the people showing great aptitude for imitating all European manufactures, so that now very good brass and iron cannon, rifles of all sorts, gunpowder and many kinds of foreign goods are made by unassisted native workmen.

Exports and Imports.—The chief exports are rice, silk, tea, camphor, lacquered work, vegetable oil and tallow, wax, porcelain, sulphur, silkworm-eggs, tobacco, metals and metal goods, and a variety of articles which find a market in China. The imports are cotton and woolen fabrics of all descriptions, manufactures of iron, sapan wood, window glass and glass ware, cordage, sugar, cigars, paints, steam engines, printing machines, machinery, copper roofing and sheathing, drugs, dye powders, carpets, boots and shoes, watches, clocks, furniture, wine, beer and brandy, mirrors, matches, coal and coal oil, and coral. The total imports for 1879 amounted to $29,815,353; exports to $24,614,700. There has been quite a large falling off in the export trade during the last two or three years, owing to the failure of the silk crop. This is the result, it is supposed, of the large export of silkworm eggs, and governmental measures have been taken to prevent this traffic. The exports to the United States for the year ending June 1st, 1880, amounted to $14,510,834, and the imports for the same period were $2,552,888.

Minerals.—The mineral wealth of Japan is very extensive, for the country is rich in gold, silver, copper, lead, mercury, tin, coal, sulphur and salt. Iron is found in many provinces, but in the form of magnetic oxide, so that the cost of smelting is very great, and Japan will hardly be able to supply her own wants in this direction. The quality, however, is excellent, being equal to the best Swedish. Copper is found and smelted in forty provinces, and is so very abundant that it was formerly of the same value as iron. Large quantities are still exported in the form of bars, blocks, bells, old idols, etc. Gold is obtained in many places, both from washing the sands of the rivers and from quartz; and silver is extracted from argentiferous galena and also from the ore. Copper, gold and silver have been exported on a large scale since 1545, and from 1400 to 1600 much larger quantities of the precious metals were smelted than at present. Lead ores are abundant, but that metal has never been popular among the natives. Tin is plenty, and much larger quantities are used now than formerly, owing to the introduction of tinned goods. Coal is mined largely in Yezo, Amakusa, Koratzu, and near Nagasaki, and is sold for the use of steamers. Petroleum, green and blue vitriol and alum are made by the natives. All varieties of building stones are obtained in almost all parts of the empire. Agates, carnelians and jasper of great size and beauty are found. Pearls are fished up all along the coast, and pearl fisheries may yet become an important factor in Japanese industry. These facts point to the conclusion that under the cultivation of modern inventions the mineral wealth of Japan will be likely to greatly increase the resources of the empire. This, indeed, is beginning to be understood, and much greater attention is being paid to mines and mining than formerly.

Fisheries.—Fish is the staple article of animal food throughout the whole country, and a surpassingly great variety are obtained from the rivers, lakes and seas. Fishing is carried on with nets, hooks and lines, spears, bows and arrows, and with cormorants. The fish thus taken are seldom cooked or preserved, but are eaten raw. Whales are pursued wherever met with, and sea-otters and seals are shot in great numbers in Karafuto and the Kuriles. The fisheries have not yet, however, become of much commercial importance.

Government.—The system of government of the Japanese empire is that of an absolute monarchy. It was adopted in 1869 when the present ruling sovereign overthrew the Tycoon and the power of the Daimios, who were a sort of feudal rulers. The sovereign is known by the title of Mikado. There exists no regular law of succession, and the crown devolves, in case of the death of the sovereign, upon the eldest or most distinguished member of the royal house. The government is at present organized on a basis which is partly European. The Mikado is theoretically an absolute sovereign who reigns and governs, but the work of the government is carried on by the Great Council, which is divided into three sections, viz: the Centre, the Right, and the Left. The Centre is composed of the prime minister, vice prime minister, and five advisers. The Left is made up exclusively of the Council of State, the functions of which are analogous to the French Conseil d'Etat, as far as the preparation and discussion of laws is concerned. The Right includes all the ministers and vice-ministers of the eight departments into which the administration is divided. The ministers either singly or in cabinet decide all ordinary questions; but those of importance come up before the Great Council presided over by the Mikado.

Religions.—The two great religions of Japan are Buddhism and Shintoism, of which the latter is supposed to be the ancient religion of the country, while Buddhism is thought to have been imported from Corea. The essence of Shintoism is ancestral worship, and its devotees sacrifice to departed heroes. They have very shadowy notions about the immortality of the soul, a supreme deity, or a future state of reward and punishment. Their chief end, in opposition to that of the Buddhists, is happiness in this life. Probably in no other country has there been a richer development of Buddhism than in Japan. In 1869 there were 168,000 priests and about 460,000 temples; but as they had encroached, during the reign of the Tycoon, upon the grounds of the Shintoists, the present Mikado, upon overthrowing the power of the Tycoons, caused many of the temples to be pulled down or removed, and the number is now considerably less. The authorities of state are indifferent as to how many doctrines are professed, so long as the public peace is not disturbed.

Army and Navy.—The armed force of Japan has been composed, since 1869, of a single element, viz: the troops kept by the Mikado, which constitute the imperial army. By a decree in 1872 the liability to arms was made universal, but in 1878 this had not been carried out. At present the military force is very small, probably not exceeding 80,000 men, comprising all arms. A number of Japanese officers and sub-officers have lately been instructed by French officers in Yokohama. The navy consisted at the end of 1878 of one iron-clad frigate, two iron-clad corvettes, two wooden corvettes, three schooners, one gunboat, one transport, and one yacht. The largest of these, the Foo-soo, is of 3,700 tons displacement, with engines of 3,500 horse power. The armor is from seven to nine inches thick, and the armament consists of four 5½ ton and two 3½ ton

Krupp steel breech-loaders, so mounted as to command every point of the horizon.

Railways and Telegraphs.—The first line of railway, from Hiogo to Osaka, was opened in 1875 and is 25 miles long. At the end of June, 1878, there were 66½ miles of railway in operation, and the government had authorized the construction of 142 miles more. There are eight lines of telegraph having an aggregate length of 2,934 kilometres, or 1,822 miles.

Education.—A new educational law was promulgated in September, 1879. All educational establishments, including public and private schools, are to be under the care of a minister of education. The schools are divided into primary and higher schools, colleges, and normal, or technical, schools. Primary schools are to be established in all cities and villages, but this provision need not be carried out where there are already good private schools. The school age comprises from the 6th to the 14th year, and all children are required to attend school at least 16 months of that period. Corporal punishment is not permitted. Money has been liberally expended by the government for educational purposes both in educating their youth abroad and employing good foreign teachers at home. The system of education in the colleges and technical schools is high and complete. The upper classes are highly educated and a very large proportion of the common people are able to read and write Japanese. The whole educational machinery is under the control of a bureau of education, with 221 officials and a minister of education at the head. The expenditure of the government for this purpose in 1879 amounted to $1,139,970.

Revenues.—Since the year 1875 regular accounts of the public receipts and expenditures have been published; and though, as yet, only in the form of estimates, these are believed to be very correct. From these the total revenue for 1879 was placed at $55,651,379, and it is believed that the expenditures will not require that sum.

Public Debt.—The public debt, July 1, 1879, was $363,327,974, of which $11,829,120 was foreign debt, contracted in England. From this, however, should be deducted the reserve fund and outstanding loans, to the amount of $58,394,092, leaving a total of debt unprovided for of $304,933,882.

PERSIA.

BY JAMES Q. RICE, A.M.

Persian and Arabic—Iran. Danish—Persien. French—La Perse. German—Persien. Russian—Persia. Italian, Spanish and Portuguese—Persia. Swedish—Persien. Chinese and Japanese—Po¹ Ssu¹ Kwo. Turkish—Adjemistan; or, Iran.

Location, Area, etc.—Persia is a country of Southwestern Asia, extending eastward from Turkey to Afghanistan and Beloochistan, and from the Caspian sea southward to the Persian gulf. It lies between 25° 30' and 39° 50' north latitude, and 44° and 62° east longitude. The area is estimated at 600,000 square miles, the greatest length being about 1,200 miles and the greatest breadth about 850 miles. The population is variously estimated at from 5,000,000 to 11,000,000, of which, it is said, 1,000,000 are gathered within the large cities.

Topography and Geography.—Persia is, for the most part, an elevated, mountainous plateau, rising from 3,000 to 4,000 feet above the sea-level, and bounded on all sides, except the east, by lofty ranges of mountains, prominent among which is the mighty chain of the Elburz. From the principal ranges a multitude of branches run, covering the country with a network of rocky lines. A vast portion of the area is occupied by salt deserts, the largest of which lies in the center of the country, and is 400 miles in length by 250 miles in breadth. Outside the deserts the soil is of good quality and productive wherever it is well-watered. The infrequency of rain and absence of artificial irrigation, give the country a barren aspect, but wherever moisture is present, either naturally or artificially, the country is exceedingly fertile. The most productive regions are those which lie between the Azerbaijan mountains, at the foot of the Elburz, and the celebrated garden district of Shiraz. Also the coast land bordering the Caspian, being low, and well-watered, and subject to great heat, is covered with a tropical verdure. The coast line extends about 800 miles on the Persian gulf and the gulf of Oman, and 400 miles on the Caspian sea. The principal gulf port is Bushire, through which nearly all the trade with India is carried on. The chief Caspian ports are Enzelee and Meshedi Sar. The deficiency of rivers is very marked, for there is scarcely a navigable stream in the whole kingdom. In the north the Aras and the Atrek are the principal streams, and in the basin of the Tigris the Karoon and Kerah. There are large numbers of salt lakes scattered throughout the country.

Subdivisions and Cities.—The principal provincial divisions of Persia are Ghilan, Mazanderan, Astrabad, Azerbaijan, Irak-Ajemi, Luristan, Khuzistan, Farsistan, Laristan, Moghistan, Kerman, Khorasan and Yezd. The capital is Teheran, with an estimated population of 85,000. The other important cities, with their populations, according to the most recent estimates, are Tauris or Tabreez, with 120,000; Meshid, with 70,000; Ispahan, with 60,000, and Yezd, with 40,000.

Climate.—The climate is everywhere very dry, except in the Caspian coast lands. In the valleys it is hot, with mild winters. On the plateau the winter, from the middle of December to the middle of February, is generally very severe; while during the summer the temperature sometimes rises to 110° in the shade. Spring and autumn are very delightful, and the climate, despite its great extremes, is generally healthy.

Flora and Fauna.—Although trees are, as a rule, scarce, the slopes of the mountains in many places are covered with forests of oak, elm, beech, walnut and fir, and on the plateau large tracts are wooded with tamarisks, terebinths, acacias, shrubs and thorny bushes. In the valleys myrtle and cypress abound, the fig grows wild, the mulberry and olive are cultivated, and the vineyards yield strong, highly-flavored wines. Apples, pears, apricots, peaches, cherries, oranges and pomegranates are cultivated. The northwestern part of Persia contains the same species of animals as southern Europe, the tiger alone being added. The southwestern contains those of Hindostan, while in the central desert and on its borders the wild-ass, antelope, hyena, wild-hog and various kinds of deer abound.

Agriculture.—Notwithstanding its generally barren appearance, the cultivated soil of Persia is exceedingly fertile where it is supplied with water. The principal cereals are wheat of excellent quality, rice, maize and barley. Cotton is produced sufficient for the wants of the people, and the production might be largely increased. Tobacco, of excellent quality, and sugar are easily cultivated. The date-palm abounds, and dates are an important article of food. Opium is also largely produced, as well as silk, the manufacture of which into various fabrics is the chief industry of the country.

Manufactures.—The principal articles manufactured are carpets, shawls, jewelry, arms and elegant knick-knacks.

Trade.—The chief articles of export are wheat, raw-silks, silk-worm eggs, opium, woolens and tobacco. The imports are tea, sugar, broad-cloths, cotton goods, jewelry, arms, cutlery, earthen, glass and metal wares. The total imports may be roughly estimated at $12,500,000, and the exports at $7,500,000; but there has been a large falling off in the latter during the last three years, owing to the failure of the silk crop. The commerce of the United States with Persia passes through the hands of the merchants of intermediate nations.

Minerals.—The mineral products comprise lead, copper, antimony, salt, sulphur and marble. Extensive coal fields have been discovered near the city of Kasbin. The turquoise is largely produced.

Government.—The government of Persia is in all important respects the same in character as that of Turkey. The laws are based upon the precepts of the Koran, and the power of the Shah is absolute so long as he does not go contrary to these. He is regarded as the viceregent of the Prophet, and as such is implicitly obeyed.

Religions.—A large majority of the Persians are Mahometans. There are only about 70,000 dissenters, mostly Armenians, Nestorians, Jews and Guebres. There is a wide tolerance toward the first two, but the Jews and Guebres are greatly oppressed.

Army.—The Persian army numbers 105,000 men, of whom, however, only about one-third are actually under arms. The army is at present being reconstructed under the direction of Austrian officers, and the work is progressing favorably.

Telegraphs.—Persia has a system of telegraph established by Europeans; and in July, 1878, there were 2,940 miles of lines in operation, with 4,782 miles of wire.

Education.—Education is in a comparatively advanced state, at least so far as the upper classes are concerned. There are a large number of colleges supported by public funds, in which instruction is given in religion, Persian and Arabian literature, and some scientific knowledge. Private tutors are also considerably employed by the richer families. A larger portion of the population is estimated to be in possession of the rudiments of education than in any other Asiatic country, China excepted.

Revenues, etc.—The revenues and expenditures are known only from estimates, as no official accounts have ever been made public. From consular reports the average receipts of the government from 1872-75 are estimated at $9,500,000, and the expenditures for the same period at $8,780,000. Each annual surplus is paid into the treasury of the Shah. The government has no public debt.

RUSSIA IN ASIA.

BY J. A. AMUNDSON, A.B.

Location, Area and Population.—The Russian Possessions in Asia are vast and growing. They comprise the whole of Northern Asia, known as Siberia, and large portions of Central and Western Asia. The total area of these possessions is nearly equal to the areas of Europe and the United States combined. The areas and population of the several provinces into which these possessions are divided are shown in the following table:

Siberia:	Area, square miles.	Population.
Amoorskaya.....	173,552	44,400
Irkutsk.....	309,177	378,244

Total Central and Western Asia.....	1,344,595	3,800,628
-------------------------------------	-----------	-----------

Total Asiatic Russia.....	6,170,882	7,229,495
---------------------------	-----------	-----------

This total, however, is only that of statistics gathered previously to accessions made by the Russian armies within the last few years.

Topography.—Siberia is a vast, slightly undulating plain, sloping gradually from the mountains of Central Asia to the Arctic ocean. On its northern coast Siberia is a desolate region of salt steppes and frozen swamps. Open forests cover a great part of the country. The principal rivers are the Obi, Yenesei, and Lena, flowing into the Arctic ocean, and the Amoor, emptying into the Okhotsk sea on the east.

Fossil Remains, etc.—Alluvial deposits, containing fossil remains of elephants and other animals, are found along the Arctic coasts and extend for some distance inland. From these ivory in large quantities is obtained. Siberia is noted for the severity of its climate, the thermometer often indicating 60° and 70° below zero.

Agricultural Resources, Animals, etc.—Southwestern Siberia is well suited for agriculture, and wheat, barley, rye, buckwheat, oats and hemp are raised. Of animals, the white bear, lynx, wolf, wild hog, and the glutton are common in all parts. There are vast herds of sheep kept in the country, some individual proprietors owning as many as 10,000 head. Fish and fowl abound.

Populations, etc.—The population is composed of various races. A large part is composed of Russian exiles and the descendants of exiles. Manufactures are beginning to develop in the larger towns, including cotton and woolen cloths, linen, glass, iron, earthenware and leather.

Commerce and Trade.—The internal commerce of Siberia is very important, and the articles that chiefly enter into it are skins, furs, cattle, dry and salted fish, caviare, soap and tallow. The chief exports to China comprise cotton and woolen cloths, linen, furs, gold and silver articles and leather. The imports include tea, sugar, silks, cotton, wool, cattle, leather, furs, grain, dried fruit and colors.

Gigantic Railway Scheme.—In Central Asia, Russia is pushing her frontiers toward India. In order to provide for quick transportation and to secure her possessions, a railway has been constructed from St. Petersburg to Orenberg, upon the eastern border of European Russia, and surveys have been made as far as Samarkand for a continuance of the line. The interval between the terminus of the survey and the frontier of India is only about 400 miles. The Indian system of railway, with lines from Madras, Bombay and Calcutta concentrating at Lucknow, has its northern terminus at Peshawer, near the northwest frontier of Punjab, west of the river Indus. Should the British Indian and Russian railways ultimately connect, travel from Europe to India would be greatly facilitated.

THE KINGDOM OF SIAM.

BY CHARLES FOSTER HUBBARD.

Siamese—Thai. Burmese—Yó dra. Danish, French and German—Siam. Russian—Siem. Italian, Spanish, Portuguese and Swedish—Siam. Chinese and Japanese—Tsim Lo². Turkish—Siam.

Location and Topography.—Siam is located in the southeastern part of Asia. It is bounded on the south by the Gulf of Siam and the Malay peninsula. On the west, north and east the boundary line is ill-defined because of constant war on the border. It is in latitude 4° - 21° north, and in longitude 96° - 106° east. The area is estimated at 225,000 square miles, with a population stated at from 5,000,000 to 6,300,000. There are branches of the Himalayan mountains on the eastern and western borders, although the kingdom of Siam proper is a vast plain, and the valley of the Meinam is not exceeded in fertility in any quarter of the globe.

Government.—Siam is divided into 41 small provinces, each governed by a rajah (who is under the command of the king), the chief of which are the Laos and Shan States. Bangkok, the capital, has a population of 500,000, a large part of whom live on rafts made of bamboo wood, five or six houses being sometimes crowded on one raft, and others in houses built upon posts. There are two newspapers published in Bangkok, one Siamese, the other a Christian paper.

Cities.—The principal cities are Paknam, population 65,000; Paklat, population 7,000; Meklong, a beautiful city, with floating bazaars, fine pagodas and gardens, and a population of 10,000; Chantaburi, population 6,000, and Bangpaso, 27 miles east of Paknam, engaged in a profitable fishery and agriculture, population 6,000.

Climate.—The climate of Siam is, for a tropical region, salubrious; the missionaries residing there speak highly of it. Hurricanes, monsoons and typhoons are almost unknown in Siam, although it is yearly visited by a tremendous storm of wind and rain.

Flora and Fauna.—The arboreous products of Siam are eagle wood, (Lat. aquila), used for perfumes; gutta-percha, cardamoms, gamboge, bamboo, rattan, palm, guava, mango, dourien, mangosteen and teak. Among the animals, the elephant reigns supreme, and the white elephant is "supposed to be the incarnation of some future Buddha," therefore it is held in great reverence. Tigers, tiger-cats, rhinoceroses, buffaloes, boars, wild pigs, elks, and deer of many kinds tenant the woods. Crocodiles, lizards and serpents of various kinds are numerous. Excellent fish are found in the rivers.

Agriculture.—Few instruments are in use in agriculture, and in many parts of the country, a few years ago, the ground was prepared for the seed by turning herds of buffalos into the fields to trample down the weeds and move the soil; and afterward by harrowing with thorny shrubs. But the soil is so rich here that the smallest outlay of capital and labor is rewarded by abundant harvests. A much improved system of agriculture, however, has been introduced recently, and the quantity of agricultural products exported has greatly increased. Rice and sugar are the staples. The chief exports are mostly grain and grazing products. In the year 1870 the exports amounted to $5,536,500, and in 1878 to $4,618,832. The value of the imports in 1876 was $7,400,000. Siam has no direct trade with the United States.

Minerals, etc.—Gold is found among the mountains, and silver in combination with other metals. Copper, tin, lead and iron are abundant and are extensively worked by the Chinese. Precious stones are found in great variety.

Fisheries.—The fisheries of Siam are very profitable, as numerous varieties of excellent fish are found in its waters.

Government.—The government of Siam is an absolute and hereditary monarchy, and there are two kings. The "First King" is the real monarch; the "Second King," who has about one-third of the revenue and an army of 2,000 men, seems to fill the office of first counsellor. Both of the present kings can speak and write English, and they are assisted in the administration of affairs by a cabinet and council.

Religions.—The religion of the Siamese is Buddhism, which inculcates the highest veneration for life in whatever form, and a true Siamese will not kill vermin or serpents of any kind. By the treaty with the English in 1855 Christians may enjoy their religion undisturbed. There is no standing army, but every male is liable to serve a portion of the year, on the plan of the American militia, though the troops are trained in the European manner. There are ten fully equipped war steamers.

Public Works.—There are no railways or telegraphs in Siam; but there is an excellent chance for a ship canal across the isthmus of the Malay peninsula.

Education, etc.—Nothing is done for the public education, and the masses are largely ignorant and bigoted. The amount of the public expenditure, or that of the public debt, cannot be ascertained.

For map, lists of newspapers and banks, see other departments of this work.

The only resident representative of the United States is John A. Halderman, consul, Bangkok.

THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

BY JAMES Q. RICE, A.M.

Danish, French and German—Singapore. Russian—Singapore. Italian, Spanish and Portuguese—Singapore. Swedish—Singapore. Chinese and Japanese—Singapore. Turkish—Singapore.

Location, etc.—The Straits Settlements are the British possessions at the Straits of Malacca, on the southeastern extremity of Asia, comprising Singapore, Malacca, Penang (Prince of Wales Island), and the province of Wellesley. The total area is about 1,350 square miles, and population in 1871, 308,096.

Singapore, the most important part of the colony, is an island, in latitude 1° - 15° north, and longitude 104° east; area, 224 square miles; population, 97,111. It is separated from the mainland by a narrow but deep strait. The town of Singapore contains about 65,000 population and is the seat of government for the entire Straits Settlements. The surface of the island is low and undulating; the soil is not fertile, yet vegetation is rich. Education is being steadily advanced. The population is composed of 16 different nationalities, 54,000 of whom are Chinese; Malays, 37,000; the Chinese are the most useful, prosperous and trustworthy of the people. There are two fine harbors and good fortifications, and the island has great commercial and political importance. In 1876 the revenue amounted to $170,178, and expenditures, $174,361. Exports, in 1876, $40,614,783; imports, $45,466,070.

Malacca, in latitude 2° - 3° north, and longitude 102° - 103° east, has an area of nearly 800 square miles; population (1871), 77,755. Along the coast the surface is flat and swampy; through the interior are low hills. The soil is fertile and climate fine. The greater part of the country is still in the condition of jungle.

The town and seaport of Malacca has a population of 15,000.

Penang lies near the west coast of the Malay peninsula, in latitude 5° $30'$, longitude 100° $20'$; area, 106 square miles; population, 61,797. The land is low on the east, with a wooded mountain ridge on the north and west. The climate is healthy and soil rich. Georgetown is the chief city and capital. Classed with Penang is the province of Wellesley, situated on the peninsula opposite; its area is 236 square miles, and population, 71,433. The imports are valued at $7,744,000; exports, $9,680,000.

Trade, etc.—The Straits Settlements are an independent crown colony, controlled by a governor-general. The chief products and exports are fruits, rice, coffee, sago, pepper, gambie, cloves, nutmegs, bananas, oranges, lemons, etc. Tin is the chief mineral. The imports are mainly cotton, woolen and linen manufactures, metals, hardware, earthenware, etc. The climate is hot, but healthy; there is almost no variety of seasons, and much rain. The tiger is a terrible scourge, destroying many lives every year. Its trade with the United States is included in the annual report of commerce with the British East Indies, for which see "India."

THE MALAY ARCHIPELAGO.

BY REV. E. EDWIN HALL.

Danish and German—Malay. French—Malais. Russian—Malaia. Italian and Spanish—Maléya. Swedish—Malay. Turkish—Maleya.

How Constituted.—This is sometimes called the Indian, or Eastern Archipelago. It comprises a vast number of islands, some of which, as Borneo, Java, Sumatra, Celebes and others, are of very large dimensions. It lies S. E. of the continent of Asia, between the China sea, the Indian ocean and the Pacific. In the widest sense it includes the Philippine Islands and Papua. It lies within the tropics between 95° and 151° 20' east longitude, and 11° south and 19° north latitude. All the great islands included within these limits are connected together by innumerable smaller ones, so that no one of them seems to be distinctly separated from the rest. With but few exceptions all enjoy a uniform and very similar climate, and are covered with a luxuriant forest vegetation. They appear to form a connected whole, all the parts of which are intimately related to each other.

The extent of these islands may be better understood by comparing them with well known portions of the world. The Archipelago includes three islands larger than Great Britain; and in one of them, Borneo, the whole of the British Isles might be set down, and would be surrounded by a sea of forests. Papua, or New Guinea, though less compact in shape, is probably larger than Borneo. Sumatra is about equal in extent to Great Britain; Java, Luzon and Celebes are each about the size of Ireland. Eighteen more islands are, on the average, as large as Jamaica; more than a hundred are as large as the Isle of Wight, while the isles and islets of smaller size are almost innumerable. Including Papua they have an area of more than 1,000,000 square miles. The population of all the islands is variously estimated at from 28 to 35,000,000.

Topography, etc.—A striking characteristic division of the Archipelago is into volcanic and non-volcanic regions. A long line of active and extinct volcanoes, constituting one of the most remarkable volcanic systems in the world, extends eastward from Sumatra through Java and other islands, then trends northward to the northern peninsula of Celebes, and thence to the Philippine islands. The islands traversed by this belt are subject to frequent earthquakes. The non-volcanic regions lie on both sides of it. In some of the islands there are no volcanoes, and earthquakes are unknown.

Flora and Fauna.—The Archipelago is mountainous, and very generally covered with deep forests and immense trees. It is distinguished from all other clusters of islands by its periodical winds and peculiar natural products. The Archipelago is also divided into two great zoological provinces, known as the Indian and the Australian. The line of division passes between Celebes and Borneo, and through the narrow strait of Lombok. West of this strait the fauna is strictly Indian; east of it, a distinctly Australian fauna is found. It is supposed that the two great regions thus distinguished once formed parts of the Asiatic and Australian continents respectively.

Ethnological Differences.—The geographical distribution of the two typical races of men inhabiting the Archipelago corresponds closely with that of the animals—the Indo-Malays being found in the western islands, while the Papuans dwell further eastward. The two races differ widely in conformation, one having a fair or brown complexion, while the other is black. The former inhabit chiefly the west, the latter, though found in all the islands, become more prevalent in the eastern part of the Archipelago. The fair or brown tribes are short and robust, 5 feet 2 inches being the greatest common height of the men, and 4 feet 11 inches that of the women. The black or Papuan race is a kind of dwarf African negro, never more than 5 feet in height, spare and puny, complexion sooty, hair woolly, and each hair with a spiral twist. The Polynesian language, which, in various dialects, is spoken in nearly all the islands, is in every respect different from all others, and probably derived from an ancient nation originally settled in Java, where it is spoken in the greatest purity.

Religions.—The prevailing religion is Mohammedan, which was introduced there in the 13th century, and continued to spread till the end of the 16th century. Christianity prevails only in the Philippine and Spice islands.

Agriculture.—The greater portion of the land included in all the islands is yet uncultivated. Many natives still roam the forests, but the greater number have made some progress in social order, and applied themselves to some forms of agriculture.

Java, one of the islands of the Malay Archipelago, is the most important colonial possession of Holland, or the Netherlands, in the East Indies. It is the most fertile and prosperous tropical island in the world. It is situated between the 6th and 9th degrees south latitude, and 103th and 115th east longitude. It is separated from Sumatra on the west by the straits of Sunda; east by a strait two miles wide, which separates it from Bali; south by the Indian ocean; north by the sea of Java which separates it from Borneo. Its general configuration resembles that of Cuba, and it is not unlike that island in its extent, fertility, products, and commercial value, while its population is twelve times greater. Its length from east to west is about 666 miles, and its breadth varies from 56 to 136 miles, having an area of 49,730 square miles. In 1878 the population was reckoned at 19,067,829, being 383 persons to the square mile. Java is highly volcanic; a chain of mountains runs entirely through the center of the island, with peaks varying from 4,000 to 12,000 feet in height. Its whole surface is magnificently varied with mountain and forest scenery. The abundant moisture and tropical heat of the climate cause these mountains to be clothed with luxuriant vegetation, often to their very summits. The soil is exceedingly fertile, and all productions of the tropics can easily be cultivated. The Javanese are a nation of husbandmen. It is probable that if the whole island were under cultivation, no area of land of the same extent in any other quarter of the globe could surpass it, either in the quantity, quality, or value of its vegetable productions. The chief cereal is rice; it is one of the principal coffee-growing countries of the world; the cultivation of sugar is next in importance; indigo, cotton, pepper, tea and tobacco are also raised. The animal life of Java is as varied and abundant as its vegetation. Among the 100 species of mammalia in the island are nine species of quadrupeds; also the tiger, leopard, wild ox, wild hog, rhinoceros, several species of deer, and 22 species of bats. There are 170 distinct species of birds. Serpents and other reptiles are numerous. The principal cities are Batavia, the capital, with a population in 1875 of 66,000; Surabaya, population 90,000; Samarang, population 60,000; Jokjokerta, population 120,000. The ports of Java are the depot for the produce of all the Dutch possessions in the Malay Archipelago; as spices from the Molucca islands; coffee and pepper from Celebes and Sumatra; gold-dust and diamonds from Borneo; tin from Banca, tortoise shell, bees-wax, dye-woods, etc., from Timor and Sumbawa. In 1873 there was regular connection with other islands of the Archipelago by means of 15 steamers belonging to the Netherlandish India steamboat company. Among the principal exports are coffee, rice, sugar, indigo, tea, tobacco, spices, india rubber, birds' nests, camphor and rattans. The value of exports in 1871 was £7,604,691, and the value of imports was £4,489,693, consisting of linen and cotton manufactures, iron and iron manufactures, woolen goods, glass, copper wares, and other articles for exportation. The governor-general acts as vice-roy, assisted by a vice-president and council of four, appointed by the king of Holland. The army and navy in all the Dutch possessions are under the orders of the governor-general. At Surabaya are government dock yards and work shops, where ships and steamboats are built and repaired; here, also, are artillery works, and machine shops, for making castings and steam boilers. There are government primary schools in all the large towns. In 1872 there were 38 telegraph offices, and 161 miles of railway in operation. The prevailing religion is Mahomedan, but full religious toleration exists. In 1872 the total revenue of the island was 121,258,300 guilders, ($3,191,000), and the total expenditure 108,164,690 guilders. The value of direct exports to the United States in the year ending June 30, 1880, was $6,280,672; imports from the United States $2,600,878, of which coffee, sugar, tin, spices and gums were the most considerable.

Borneo is the largest island in the Malay Archipelago, and, if the continent of Australia be excepted, the largest on the globe. It is divided by the equator into two nearly equal parts. The greatest length of the island is 850 miles, and its greatest breadth 680 miles. The area is about 300,000 square miles: population supposed to be 4,000,000. The climate is hot and moist. Tropical fruits are found in the greatest variety, and some of the richest and finest in the world. Cotton, sugar, indigo and hemp are extensively cultivated. Among the most remarkable vegetable productions is the camphor tree, found only in Borneo and Sumatra. Besides the wild animals common to these islands, there is a great variety of the ape and monkey tribes, and among them the orang-outang, or the "man of the woods," not found elsewhere except rarely in Sumatra. Diamonds, gold, and inexhaustible mines of antimony are found in Borneo. Little comparatively is known of the interior. The Dutch is the only European nation permanently established on the island except that the English possess Sarawak.

Sumatra is the most eastern island of the Malay Archipelago. It has an area of 177,000 square miles, estimated population from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000. The north-eastern side is a low and level plain; the south-western is either mountainous or hilly. The climate is equable, and not so hot as might be expected in a country in the midst of the torrid zone. The forests cover nearly three-fourths of the surface. The soil produces rice, cotton, indigo, sugar, coffee, and the most exquisite fruits of the tropics. Gold and copper are abundant. Camphor and benzoine are the product of trees growing in the northern districts. The most important vegetable product is pepper; the amount supplied from Sumatra being greater than from all other countries in the world. The animals usually found in Borneo are common in Sumatra. Padang, with a population of 10,000, is the capital or place of residence of the governor of the island, which is a Dutch possession.

Celebes is another large island of the Malay Archipelago; its area is 70,000 square miles; population estimated to be 3,000,000. It is practically under the control of the Dutch. Vegetation is rich, but very little attention has been paid by the natives to agriculture. Plants furnishing food are numerous, and a superior quality of coffee is raised in the residency of Manado, bringing a higher price than the Java growth.

The Molucca Isles, constitute the most eastern group, lying between Celebes and Papua, and are also called the Spice Islands. From these islands cloves, nutmegs and mace have been carried to all countries, the trade in nutmegs and cloves having been a monopoly of the Dutch government. Ceram, one of its group, is noted for its sago palm, which furnishes a vast supply of food to this and other islands to the east.

The Philippine Islands, forming a part of the Malay Archipelago, are fully described in a separate article.

TURKEY IN ASIA.

BY JAMES Q. RICE, A.M.

Location, Size, etc.—The largest portion of the Turkish empire, known as Turkey in Asia, lies in the western part of Asia, and comprises Asia Minor and all the vast adjacent territory. The western frontier is formed by the Mediterranean, to the south extending to the isthmus of Suez; on the southeast and east it is bounded by Arabia and Persia, and on the north by Russia and the Black Sea. It lies between latitude 50° and 42° north and longitude 26° and 48° east. The area is estimated at 710,320 square miles. The population numbers about 15,715,000.

Topography, etc.—Much of Asiatic Turkey consists of elevated plateaus, many of them scantily watered, while other regions, once very fertile, are now covered by the sands of the desert. The plains, which embrace the once wonderfully fertile regions of Babylonia and Mesopotamia, now generally suffer from want of irrigation, and though the mountain slopes afford good pasturage, the raids of Bedouins and Kurds decrease the productions. The mountain system is composed of the Taurus and Anti-Taurus ranges and their Armenian continuation, and the Syrian range extending southward from the Taurus and culminating in the Lebanon mountains. The principal rivers flow into the Black Sea; the Euphrates and Tigris, the only well-known streams, flow into the Persian Gulf. The rivers seeking the Red Sea and the Archipelago are small and unimportant. The extent of coast line is immense and contains many good harbors and numerous gulfs and bays. Large salt lakes are numerous, the most important being the Dead Sea in Palestine and Lake Van in Armenia. In general, Turkey in Asia is a mountainous country, fairly fertile, affording some good pasturage, but rather deficient in water.

Divisions and Cities.—The political divisions of Asiatic Turkey are 12 in number, called vilayets. The principal cities are Scutari (a suburb of Constantinople), population 60,000; Smyrna, population 160,000; Damascus, population 150,000; Bagdad, population 40,000; Beyroot, (or Beirût) population 100,000; Aleppo, population 70,000; Brusa, population 60,000; Erzeroom, population 75,000; and Trebizond, population 40,000.

Climate.—In a country so large, with such a variety of natural features, the climate must necessarily be very various. The winter is cold and humid in the mountainous districts, but in the sheltered valleys it is warm and delightful. The summer heats are excessive, especially in Asia Minor and Syria. The valley of the Jordan and the regions of the Tigris and Euphrates are intolerably hot and dry in the summer. Little or no rain falls from April to the middle of September, but the night dews are heavy. The peaks of Mt. Ararat and the higher summits of the Lebanon and Taurus ranges are covered with perpetual snow.

Flora and Fauna.—Though producing forest trees of the same families as those of European Turkey, the predominant trees are of a different genus. On the slopes of the Lebanon and Taurus cedar, cypress and the evergreen oak are found, while the olive, fig, citron, orange, pomegranate and vine flourish on the lowlands. Mesopotamia abounds in dates, wheat, barley, rice, maize, tobacco, hemp, flax and cotton. Among the animals the lion is found east of the Euphrates; the hyena, lynx, panther, wild boar and wild ass occur in Mesopotamia; in Asia Minor the bear, wolf, wild hog and jackal; in Syria the leopard, hedge-hog, jerboa, wolf and hare. The domestic animals include the camel, horses of the best breeds, the ass, ox, sheep and goats, including the famous Angora species.

Agriculture.—As far as natural qualifications go there are few countries so well off as Asiatic Turkey, but its natural resources are almost wholly undeveloped. The methods employed are of the rudest description, and though the soil where well watered is exceedingly fertile, only small crops are produced. The islands and coast lands produce large quantities of fruit, on which might be based a large trade in preserved fruits, olive oil, figs and raisins. Tobacco grows everywhere. The mulberry tree is extensively cultivated, and the export of raw silk, especially from Beyroot and Brusa, is of importance to the silk market of the whole world. In spite, however, of all the natural advantages in the shape of fertility of soil and excellence of maritime position, commerce and industry are little developed.

Trade and Manufactures.—The principal exports from Asiatic Turkey are silk, wheat, barley, hemp, sesame, cotton and grain. The imports consist almost wholly of British and colonial manufactured goods. There are no available statistics as to the foreign trade of this country with the exception of that with the United States, which, in the year ending in June, 1880, amounted to $1,147,657, of which $984,024 were imports.

Minerals.—The mountains, especially in Asia Minor, are more richly endowed with mineral deposits than any country in Europe. Immense coal deposits are found in Asia Minor. Copper, lead, alum, silver, emery, rock salt, nitre and iron are largely found. Lack, however, of progressive energy, means of communication, and governmental justice cause these sources of wealth to remain undeveloped.

Fisheries.—Fish are numerous, embracing all the known varieties of the Mediterranean. Coral, tunny and sponge fisheries are extensively carried on. The streams and lakes are also well stocked with a good variety of the finny tribe.

Government.—With regard to government, Asiatic Turkey is divided into vilayets, at the head of which are governors who are entirely dependent upon the Sublime Porte. These vilayets are divided into sandshaks, and the sandshaks again into kazas.

Education.—The Turkish system of education is of the most superficial kind, and rarely reaches beyond the elementary studies. American missionaries, however, have introduced and have for many years had in successful operation, not only many schools for thorough training in the elementary branches, but colleges of high character, whose work is already exercising a marked influence upon the social, literary and religious life of Turkey. Besides the colleges, the missionaries have 115 schools in operation, with 4,653 pupils, and the number both of schools and pupils is steadily increasing.

Railways.—Turkey in Asia has two lines of rail-

THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

BY JOHN C. TALCOTT, A.M.

Location, etc.—The Philippine islands are a part of the Malaysian Archipelago, forming a group of about 1,200 islands lying between the Pacific ocean and the Sea of China, and between latitude $5^{\circ} 30' - 19^{\circ} 40'$ north, and longitude $117^{\circ} - 127^{\circ}$ east. The chief islands are Luzon, having an area of 51,300 square miles; Mindanao, 25,000 square miles; Samar, 13,000 square miles; Mindoro, 12,600 square miles; Panay, 11,300, and Leyte, 10,000 square miles. The total area of the group is about 150,000 square miles.

Governments, etc.—More than one-half the islands are under Spanish rule, and the remainder are small, independent states under native rulers. Part of the island of Mindanao is now under British dominion. The population is nearly 4,500,000. The islands are of volcanic origin, and active volcanoes are found throughout the whole group, such as Mayon, in Luzon, and Buhayan in Mindanao. Earthquakes are frequent, and often of great violence. In 1863 Manila, the capital of Luzon, was nearly destroyed, and in 1864 the whole province of Zamboangu, in Mindanao, was almost completely devastated.

Soil, Climate, Products, etc.—The soil of the islands is extremely fertile, and the climate hot and moist. Vegetable life reaches here a wonderful development. The mountains rise to the height of about 7,000 feet, and are covered with forests of large trees producing excellent timber and many valuable woods. Many minerals are found, among them gold, iron, copper, coal, and sulphur in large quantities. The animal kingdom is well represented, and nearly all useful species thrive there. Cattle, horses, sheep and swine are reared. The islands were discovered in 1521 by Magellan, who died there from a wound received in a battle with the natives.

Population, Trade, etc.—The population is composed of Negroes. There are also many Malays (who make beautiful mats and linen fabrics), a few Chinese and Mestizoes, who are mostly engaged in commerce, and a very few Spaniards who govern the country in the name of Spain. Almost all the ports of the islands are closed to foreigners, except to Spanish traders. In 1871 the exports to Great Britain amounted to nearly $6,500,000, composed of sugar, tobacco, manila hemp, etc. The value of the imports was about the same. Over 30,000 tons of manila hemp are exported annually. Tobacco is a monopoly in the hands of the Spanish government from which it receives $5,000,000 gross receipts per annum, while it pays out only about 67 per cent., thus making 33 per cent. profit; or about $1,670,000 per annum.

ABYSSINIA.

BY W. H. M'CARTHY, A.M.

Location, Size, etc.—Abyssinia is one of the historic countries of Eastern Africa. To the north-west of Abyssinia lies Nubia, to the east the territory of the Danakils; to the south, the country of the Gallas; to the west the region of the Upper Nile. The Red Sea is generally put upon maps as the eastern boundary of it, but the stretch of low-lying country along the shore of the Red Sea has really been for centuries occupied by hostile tribes, and is claimed by the viceroy of Egypt as part of his dominions. It lies between $7^{\circ} 30'$ and $15^{\circ} 40'$ north latitude, and 35° and $40^{\circ} 30'$ east longitude, covering an area of about 200,000 square miles. Population from 300,000 to 400,000. Beginning at the low stretch of land along the Red Sea, the country of Abyssinia rises abruptly into lofty mountain ranges which slope away to the westward, forming extensive table lands from 6,000 to 7,000, and even 10,000 feet above the level of the sea. Many of the tributaries of the Nile course through this country and have formed numerous deep valleys. Tigré, Amhara and Shoa are the three principal provinces. Gondar, the capital, is in Amhara, the central province. The population of Gondar is about 7,000.

Climate, Products, etc.—Abyssinia is, perhaps, the healthiest country in the world. The vegetation is of a temperate character upon the slopes of the highest mountains, but the trees and shrubs of warmer climes occur upon the slopes of the hills and in the ravines. In the northern portion of the country there is but a thin scattering of trees and bushes upon the plateaux and plains, but the glens and ravines of the plateau sides offer a delicious contrast to the open country. In the central and southern portion, the fertility is very great. Three crops even are raised annually in some parts. Large quantities of maize, wheat, barley, peas, beans, etc., are grown. A plant called teff (Poa Abyssinica) is largely cultivated as a bread-stuff. A kind of corn also called tocussa, is extensively used by the lower classes for bread. Coffee grows wild upon the mountains. Cotton and sugar cane are cultivated in some localities.

Animals and Trade.—Many of the domestic animals of Europe are found in Abyssinia. Among the wild animals the hyena is the most common and the most destructive. Many of the birds of Abyssinia are remarkable for their beautiful plumage. The chief exports of Abyssinia are gold, ivory, slaves, coffee, butter, honey and wax. The chief imports are lead, tin, copper, silk, gun-powder, glass-ware, Persian carpets and colored cloths. Abyssinia has been governed for centuries by an emperor. A very corrupted form of Christianity is the prevailing religion. This is professed by the reigning princes of the different states. There are many Mohammedans, however, and some Jews. Not much can be said of the educational advantages of Abyssinia. The only libraries are those connected with the monastic institutions, and contain mostly copies of the Holy Scriptures, prayer and hymn books, missals, lives of the saints and translations of various of the Greek fathers. It has no direct trade with the United States.

Location, Size, etc.—Algeria, or Algiers (French L'Algérie), is a country of Northern Africa, and the most important of the French colonial possessions. Algeria extends along the coast 665 miles, and inland from 320 to 380 miles. At the north lies the Mediterranean sea, at the west the state of Morocco, at the south the desert of Sahara, and at the east Tunis. It lies between 32° and 37° north latitude, and 2° 10' west, and 8° 50' east longitude, and covers an area of about 320,000 English square miles. The population in 1877 was 2,867,626.

Topography, etc.—Algeria is generally mountainous. The lofty ranges of the Atlas system run along the coast and sometimes reach the height of 7,000 feet. The Great and Little Atlas are the two principal chains. The interlacing ranges of these two systems form numerous and extensive table-lands, elevated valleys, deep defiles, and many mountain streams. Algeria is divided into two distinct regions or zones. The Tell, or northern zone, toward the Mediterranean, is the region of cultivation—the corn-growing portion—and the Sahara, or southern zone, is the region of fruits and pastures. Algiers is the capital of Algeria. Rising abruptly from the sea in the form of an equilateral triangle, with a base of a mile in length, and its apex formed by the Casbah, a venerable fortress in which the last of the deys lived, it has a fine and picturesque appearance. The houses are built of white stone, and rising one above another, the town has been compared to a ship in full sail.

Climate, etc.—The climate of the northern part of Algeria much resembles that of the south of Spain, but further south toward the great desert the heat is often excessive. There is a variety of birds and beasts. Lions are rarely found now. Locusts are very common, and at times exceedingly destructive. Camels are common, and horses and mules are of noted excellence. The Arab tribes possess immense herds of sheep, which are their chief source of wealth. The principal crops of Algeria are wheat, barley, grapes, cotton, flax and tobacco. Some oranges are grown. Cork is exported in large quantities; also vegetable horse-hair, (crin végétal), produced by a species of palm. The rearing of silk worms is also carried on to some extent. The principal exports are sheep, oxen, skins, wool, tobacco, flour, fresh and dried vegetables, olive oil, flax, cotton, ores and crin végétal. The principal imports are cotton goods, wines, spirits sugar, glass, crystal, cheese, salt fish, soap, etc. The total of the exports for 1878 was £6,396,168. The total of the imports for 1878 was £9,272,230. Mining operations have never been carried on very largely in Algeria, although the mineral wealth is enormous. Iron, copper, lead, mercury and antimony exist extensively. The head of the civil government is a governor-general, but in important matters he has to take the advice of a colonial council appointed by the French government. There is a variety of religious worship in Algeria. In 1878 there were 374 miles of railway in operation. There has been since 1862 a telegraph cable between Algiers and France. The revenue of 1880 is set down at £2,400,000, and the expenditures at £1,099,354. It is estimated that Algiers has cost the mother country £120,000,000 in money and 150,000 lives.

THE KINGDOM OF ANGOLA.

BY CHARLES E. WILBUR, A.M.

Danish, German and French—Angola. Russian—Angolia. Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, Swedish and Turkish—Angola.

Location, Size, etc.—Angola is a native kingdom on the west coast of Africa, lying between latitude 8° 20', and 19° 20' south, and longitude 14° to 18° 30' east from Greenwich. It is about 350 miles long from east to west, and 60 broad. It has an area of 18,000 square miles. The population is estimated at 200,000. The capital city is St. Paul de Loando, the population of which is 20,000.

The Fauna and Flora contain all the variety of beasts, birds, reptiles, plants and flowers known in the tropics. The country was discovered by the Portuguese in the year 1486. They have several factories on the coast and in the interior, and chiefly carry on the commerce and manufactures of the country. Angola is mountainous and well watered, the soil is fertile, and the climate tolerably healthy. Gold, silver, iron, lead and sulphur are the chief minerals. The government is an unrestrained despotism, the ruler having unlimited power of life and death in his hands. The monarch is called imcue. The religion is a Fetishism, a worship of the objects of nature, together with reptiles and beasts. Angola was formerly noted as a mart for slaves; many thousands of slaves brought from the interior, having been each year shipped to Brazil. Its chief exports are ivory, gold and iron. The natives have few of the negro peculiarities of form or feature. In color they are brown. Blue eyes and red hair are not uncommon. Marked cloth, cowries, red-wood and iron are used as money. The natives divide the year into 12 months, but the week has only four days.

THE GOLD COAST OF AFRICA.

BY CHARLES E. WILBUR, A.M.

Danish—Guld Kysten. German—Gold Küste. French—Côte d'or. Russian—Берег Золоті. Italian—Costa d'oro. Spanish—Costa de Oro. Portuguese—Costa de Ouro. Swedish—Guld Kysten.

Location, etc.—Gold Coast is a name applied to an undefined portion of the west coast of Africa. It stretches from the mouth of the Gambia to Cape Negro, all the part north of Cape Lopez being called Upper or Northern Guinea, and the remainder Lower or Southern Guinea. It is bounded on the north by Senegambia and Soudan; on the east by Soudan, Fumbina and the unexplored regions of Central Africa; south by the Gulf of Guinea, and west by the Gulf of Guinea and the Atlantic. It is but 200 or 300 miles in breadth, but has a coast line which exceeds 2,500. It comprises the greater part of Senegambia, the district of Sierra Leone, the Malaghetta, Liberia. The coasts in some places are high and rocky, and in others low and flat. A portion of the seaboard is sterile and the soil is variable. But further inland the country is susceptible of the highest cultivation. The climate is not so hot as that of many other portions of Africa near the tropics. The average temperature in the hottest months is from 80° to 90°. There are three seasons, two wet and one dry. Oranges, lemons, grapes, pepper, sugar cane, cotton, indigo, tobacco, maize, millet, rice, yams, potatoes, various gums, dye woods, and ginger are among the vegetable products. The animals are cattle of tough and ill-flavored flesh, sheep, horses and goats; elephants, buffaloes, jackals, tiger cats, hyenas, leopards, deer, hares and monkeys. The most valuable minerals are gold and iron. The interior is rich in virgin mines of gold, but the inhabitants lack sufficient skill to work them. The inhabitants are divided into many tribes of from 2,000 to 30,000 souls each. The commerce is carried on wholly along the coast. Polygamy is universal, and Fetishism is the prevailing religion. Population, 408,070.

The Barbary State of Tripoli, with Barca and Fezzan.

BY W. H. M'CARTHY, A.M.

Danish, French, German, Russian, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese and Swedish—Tripoli. Turkish—Tarabooloo-s-u-gharb.

Location, etc.—Tripoli, a country of Northern Africa, and one of the Barbary States, is on the Mediterranean coast, between 28° and 33° 30' north latitude, and 10° 30' and 20° east longitude. At the north lies the Mediterranean Sea, at the east Barca, at the south Fezzan and the Libyan desert, at the west Tunis. The name Tripoli is sometimes used to include Barca and Fezzan. The area of Tripoli is 225,000 square miles. Its population is estimated at from 500,000 to 750,000, not including Barca and Fezzan. Tripoli has 800 miles of sea coast. At its eastern limit is the large bay of Sidra, the ancient Syrtis. The country about the Gulf of Sydra is exceedingly barren and waste. In many parts of Tripoli, however, the soil is very fertile, is well cultivated, and produces abundant harvests of wheat, barley, millet and maize. There are also plantations of palm and orange trees, and luxuriant gardens of oranges, lemons, pomegranates and many other fruits.

City, Climate, etc.—The city of Tripoli, and capital of Tripoli, is upon the Mediterranean; population, 15,000. Its efficient police force and its character for cleanliness are well spoken of. The climate of Tripoli is very healthy, although in summer the heat is intense.

Trade, etc.—The principal exports by sea are wool, cattle, hides, gold dust, ostrich feathers, ivory, gum, dried fruits, saffron, senna, drugs, baretta, and sheep's fat. The principal imports are cloths, spices, sugar, coffee, spirits, arms, cutlery and hardware. Of the useful minerals Tripoli has none of any importance, with the exception of sea salt, obtained along the coast, and sulphur.

Government, etc.—Tripoli is governed by a pasha and is an unlimited despotism. The pasha pays a tribute to Turkey and is supported by Turkish soldiery. Mohammedanism is the religion of the people. Education is much neglected. Barca and Fezzan were formerly a part of Tripoli, but are now separate provinces dependent on Constantinople.

Barca extends from the Gulf of Sidra to the Egyptian frontier, and has an area of about 60,000 square miles. Parts of Barca are extremely fertile. Corn is produced there in great abundance. Bengazi is the chief town.

Fezzan lies to the south of Tripoli proper, and is bounded on all other sides by the Sahara. It covers an area of 156,000 square miles, and is much less fertile than Tripoli. Dates are the staple product. Moorzook and Sokna are the chief towns. Each contain about 3,000 inhabitants. Fezzan is regarded by modern travelers as the best starting point for the interior of Africa. The United States have but a trifling direct trade with Tripoli.

For maps, lists of newspapers and value of money, see other departments of this work.

THE KINGDOM OF ASHANTEE.

BY C. C. OTIS, A.B.

Danish, French and German—Ashantee. Russian—Ashanti; or, Ashantia. Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, Swedish, Turkish and Arabic—Ashantee.

Location, etc.—Ashantee, or Sianti, as it is sometimes called, is the most notable of the existing savage kingdoms on the west coast of Africa. It extends from about 5° to 10° north latitude, and from 0° to 4° west, covering an area of about 70,000 English square miles. The population is variously estimated at from 1,000,000 to 3,000,000. It was not until the beginning of the present century that Ashantee was known among European nations to any great extent.

Products.—Most of the territory is covered with dense and almost impenetrable forests; but around the towns in the interior the soil is cultivated with care and yields an abundance of grain, yams, vegetables and fruits. Gold mines are quite abundant, but many of the richest mines are held sacred to the gods, and, therefore, are not worked. There is a considerable commerce carried on with the neighboring countries—Hoomassia, Hoossa, Bornoo, and other points in the interior.

Government.—The government is a mixture of monarchy and military aristocracy. Slavery has in former years existed on a large scale, but is now dying out. Polygamy is indulged to an enormous extent, the importance of a man being measured by the number of his wives. The king, however, is limited to 3,333 wives, who during the working season are scattered over his plantations, but at other times they occupy two streets in Coomassie, the capital.

Religions, etc.—The system of human sacrifice is practiced to a dreadful extent among the Ashantees. It seems to be founded on a wild idea of piety to parents, the chiefs believing that the rank of their dead relatives in the future world depends upon the number of attendants sent after them. The crown does not descend to any of the king's offspring, but to his brother, or to his sister's son. No newspapers are published within Ashantee, nor are the United States represented.

CAPE COLONY.

BY REV. E. EDWIN HALL.

Danish—Kapland. French—Colonie-du-Cap. German—Kapland. Russian—Kápskaia Zemliá. Italian—Capo di Buona Speranza. Portuguese—Cabo de Boa Sperança. Spanish—Cabo de Buena Esperanza. Swedish—Kapland. Turkish—Oomid Boornu.

Location, Size, etc.—Cape Colony is an extensive territory which forms the most southern part of the continent of Africa. It has belonged to Great Britain since 1806, and is named from the Cape of Good Hope, a small promontory on its southwest coast. It now comprises nearly all that portion of the great continental peninsula which lies south of the Tropic of Capricorn. It is bounded east by the Indian Ocean, west by the Atlantic, north in part by the Orange river and by imperfectly explored regions of the interior, and south by the stormy waters of the ocean which wash the immediate shores of the Cape of Good Hope. The better known portions of the Colony lie between 28° and 34° 50' south latitude, and 16° 30' and 29° 50' east longitude. Large regions of surrounding territory were annexed to the colony in 1871 and in 1875; in 1877 the Transvaal was added, at which time the total area was 329,495 square miles. In 1878 the immense but thinly populated region of the Great Namaqua Land, or the Walfisch Bay country, and other countries to the east gave an additional area of 750,000 square miles. The population of the colony proper in 1875 was 496,381, and of the whole territory about 1,600,000.

Topography and Geography.—The country consists of plateaus increasing in elevation according to their distance from the sea, and are separated by ranges of mountains. On the south coast is an irregular belt of land from 20 to 60 miles in width, indented by several bays, covered with a deep and fertile soil, intersected by numerous streamlets, well clothed with grass and small arboreous or frutescent plants, well wooded in many parts with forest trees, and supplied with frequent rains. In the valleys and extensive plains between the ranges of mountains the soil is frequently rich and well adapted for the growth of various kinds of grain and other produce. In the vicinity of many of the colonial towns and villages may be seen fruitful vineyards, orchards, gardens and cornfields, which would bear comparison with those of any country in Europe. At the same time, nearly two-thirds of the surface of Cape Colony consists of vast arid plains, covered often with shallow beds of soil, which only requires the fertilizing power of water to render it available for pasture or agriculture. The first requisite of every settlement in the interior is the formation of a "dam" or reservoir for the collection and saving of a water supply. There are vast regions to which the name of desert will strictly apply, presenting the appearance of nothing but rugged rocks and plains of shifting sands. The most extensive of these is the Kalihar, or Great Desert, north of the Orange river, extending nearly 1,000 miles in length and more than 300 in breadth. Nearly the whole west coast of Namaqua Land consists almost entirely of dreary sand hills and barren wastes, to a distance of from 30 to 40 miles from the ocean.

Subdivisions, Cities, etc.—Formerly the Cape Colony was divided for purposes of administration into two provinces, a western and an eastern; but in 1874, in order to give a more equable distribution of political influence, the country was divided into seven electoral provinces. The capital is Cape Town, also the seat of government, and lies at the head of Table Bay, and about 30 miles north of the Cape of Good Hope. The city is paved, lighted with gas, and has a regular water supply. It is a municipality, governed by a mayor and council. The population is 35,000. Simon's Town is about 25 miles from Cape Town, and contains military and naval establishments and the government dockyards; it has a sheltered bay, affording a secure harbor for shipping in all weathers. Graham's Town is situated in a pleasant valley, about 600 miles from Cape Town, and has an extensive trade with various parts of the interior; population, 7,000. Elizabeth, in Algoa Bay, is the principal port of Southeastern Africa, through which most imported goods pass to the colonial towns for which they are destined, and to the distant interior; population, 13,000.

The Climate of South Africa varies in different localities, but on the whole may be said to be generally healthy. The heat of summer is often oppressive. The winters are cold, and often attended by violent and destructive storms, though frost and snow are unknown in the immediate vicinity of the Cape. The low coast region in the west is subject to great droughts, and only on the high lands of the interior is the ground sometimes covered with snow in July and August, the coldest months of winter. To frequent and sudden changes in the temperature is attributed the numerous ailments of a rheumatic type which are prevalent among all classes of the people.

Flora and Fauna.—The flora of the fertile portions is remarkable and varied. The patches of forests in various parts contain a variety of useful woods and good timber, among which are yellow wood (a species of yew), black iron-wood, heavy, close-grained and durable stinkhout, a white wood used for wheel work, and the assegai or Cape lancewood. Bulbous plants are plentiful and of many beautiful varieties. Of pod-bearing plants there are more than 80 genera; many plants of great value in medicine are indigenous: a kind of yam, wild plums, hard pears, gourds, watermelons, chestnuts, a species of almond and lemon are also native. The larger wild animals which once gave the Cape Colony the character of the great hunting ground of the world, such as the lion, elephant, camelopard, rhinoceros, are now found only in the remote interior. The Cape leopard, wolf, baboon are still common. Zebras, antelopes and herds of springbok are frequently met with at certain seasons. Ostriches are common in the distant deserts, and ostrich farming and artificial incubation have become a profitable industry. In 1875 the domesticated ostriches numbered 22,275, and the value of feathers exported was $350,000. Birds of prey, cranes, flamingoes, pelicans, partridges, pheasants, quails, reptiles and insects in almost innumerable varieties abound.

Agriculture.—The greatest drawback to agricultural labors is scarcity of water, the irregularity of the seasons, long continued droughts and the natural indolence of the native population. The Cape Colony produces wheat, barley, oats, rye, corn, wool, wine, aloes, hides, horns, skins and tallow. In Natal a beginning has been made in the cultivation of sugar, coffee, arrow-root, indigo and hemp.

Trade.—The exports of Cape Colony are numerous, but the chief articles are copper ore, ostrich feathers, hair, skins, goats and sheep, wool and diamonds. The imports consist mainly of manufactured goods, cloths, hardwares, sugar and tobacco. Value of exports in 1877, $18,170,365; value of imports, $25,791,740. The direct trade with the United States is very inconsiderable, and chiefly through the port of Boston; total value of imports from the United States to the British possessions in Africa and adjacent islands during the fiscal year 1879-80 was $2,386,774; exports to the United States, $2,053,904.

Minerals.—Copper ore is found in Namaqua Land, and this branch of mining is now a settled industry, the annual exports amounting to upwards of 13,000 tons. Silver has been discovered, and coal is known to exist in several districts, but not in easily workable situations. Diamonds have been discovered north of Orange river, and it is believed that more than £10,000,000 in value were taken from the mines prior to 1875.

Fisheries.—More than 40 kinds of edible fishes are caught in the seas surrounding the Cape Colony, the waters of which abound in whales, seals and sharks, the taking of which forms an important branch of industry.

The Government is vested in a governor nominated by the crown, with a ministry, including a colonial secretary, a commissioner of crown lands, an attorney-general, treasurer, and secretary for native affairs, with two chambers called the legislative council and the house of assembly, both elected by the people.

Religions.—Most Protestant denominations and Roman Catholics are represented in Cape Colony, the largest community being the Dutch Reformed church. Government has hitherto provided an annual grant to all religious bodies, the Congregationalists alone declining to receive aid from the state. By the provisions of the "Voluntary Act" recently passed, grants from the state are to be continued only to present incumbents. Important military and naval stations, with a small number of imperial troops, are maintained by the home government.

Railroads, Education, etc.—Railways and telegraph wires connect all the important towns, and five steamers run between England and the Cape each month. The system of education now in operation provides for the wants of all grades of the population. There are undenominational public schools in each division of the colony. Certain schools for secular education established by missionary societies receive aid from the government. There are day and industrial schools for the aborigines, also several colleges for higher education. In 1880 the public revenue was £2,509,216 sterling; public expenses, £2,354,780. Public debt in 1876, £4,068,159.

THE KINGDOM OF DAHOMEY.

BY C. C. OTIS, A.B.

Danish—Dahomien. French—Dahomey. German—Dahomien. Russian—Dahoméia. Italian—Dahomeyá.
Spanish—Dahomé. Portuguese—Dahomeya. Swedish—Dahomien. Turkish—Dahomeh.

Situation, Size, etc.—Dahomey is on the west coast of Africa, and is second in power only to Ashantee. Its exact limits are not clearly defined, but the most recent investigations place it within 6° 15' and 7° 30' north latitude, and 1° 30' to 2° 30' east longitude. It is bounded on the west and northwest by the semi-independent races of Aja and Atakpamé, on the north by the Mahees or Makhis, on the northeast and east by the Eyos and the Egbas, and on the southeast by Porto Novo, over which the king of Dahomey claims dominion. It has a coast line of about 35 miles on the Gulf of Guinea. Its population is estimated at from 500,000 to 800,000, with marked evidences that it is gradually decreasing. This is doubtless owing to a peculiar custom of this strange race in compelling large numbers of the women to serve as soldiers. Abomey, the capital, lies about 65 miles inland, and can be reached by a road extending from Whydah on the coast. Whydah is the principal seaport town, and has a population of 12,000, about the same as that of Abomey.

Topography, etc.—The surface of the country is considerably broken in certain localities, while in others are large marshes, interspersed with lakes and streams.

Animals, etc.—The woods are very dense, and are filled with a large variety of wild beasts and poisonous reptiles. Lions, leopards, panthers, hyenas, elephants, deer, buffalo, wild sheep, goats, hippopotami, alligators and boa constrictors of enormous size are all found here in abundance. The rivers and lakes furnish plenty of fish, while the seacoast is infested with sharks.

Agriculture.—The soil is naturally fertile and capable of high cultivation, being a rich clay of a deep red color. The principal products are palm oil, maize, guinea corn, cassava (the substitute for bread), yams, sweet potatoes, cocoanuts, oranges, and the African apple. The cattle are of an inferior quality, and scarce; so also are sheep, goats and fowls.

Manufactures, etc.—Cotton cloth, pottery, mats and rude agricultural tools, knives and weapons of iron are manufactured by the inhabitants. The climate is considered very unhealthful for those unaccustomed to it. In the northern portions the heat is excessive, but along the coast the average temperature is about 80° Fahr.

The Government is a pure despotism. The life of every man, and the person of every female, belongs to the sovereign. His body guard is composed entirely of women, forming a regiment of 1,200 to 2,500 strong. He is not limited as to the number of his wives, and usually has from 3,000 to 4,000. Polygamy is very general, each man having as many wives as he can afford. He has absolute authority over his wives and children, even to the extent of selling them into slavery. Dahomey has neither newspapers nor United States consuls or agents.

THE COUNTRY OF DARFOOR.

BY CHARLES E. WILBUR, A.M.

Danish—Darfur. French—Darfour. German—Darfur. Russian—Darfur; or Darfuria. Italian, Spanish and Portuguese—Darfur. Swedish—Darfur. Turkish—Darfoor.

Location.—Darfoor, or Darfur, the land of the Fur or Foor, is a country of Soudan, in Africa. It extends from 9° to 16° north latitude, and from 22° 30' to 28° 30' east longitude. On the north it would be continuous with Waday were it not for a strip of independent territory; on the west it reaches into the desert of Sahara; on the east is separated from Kordofan by a barren steppe; and on the south is bounded by Darferit and several petty states. Its area is 105,000 square miles, and its population is roughly estimated at about 4,000,000.

Topography, etc.—The centre of the state is occupied by the Marra mountains, which lift their granite peaks to a height of 3,500 or 4,000 feet, with an average breadth of 70 miles. On all sides this mountain mass is channelled by numerous wadies, which, for the most part, dry up in the hot season, but in many cases measure from 200 to 300 paces in breadth.

Climate, Vegetation, etc.—The climate, except in the south, where the rains are unusually heavy, and the soil is a damp clay, is regarded as healthy. The rainy season lasts for three months, from the middle of June to the middle of September. In the neighborhood of the wadies the vegetation is fairly rich, but elsewhere it is rather scant and steppe-like. The prevailing trees are the acacias, the hackub, sayal, kittir, hommed, jakjak, and the maklût; while the sycamore, the ochar, the hadjlidj are also to be found. In the highlands the culture of wheat, elsewhere so rare in Central Africa, is quite extensive; but doukhu and durra are the usual cereals. In the south and west onions, pepper, bananas, citrons and various fruits are grown freely; and in several places an indigenous kind of tobacco of great strength is cultivated. Cattle, sheep and camels are both numerous and of excellent breeds. Horses are comparatively rare, and, with the exception of those imported from Dongola, they belong to a small but sturdy native race. The elephant has been exterminated, but the ostrich is common in the east in the country of the Hame Arabs.

Minerals.—Copper is obtained in sufficient quantities to make it a matter of export; antimony was worked in the time of Mohammed-el-Fadhi; iron is wrought in the southwest provinces; and deposits of rock salt are met with in various places. The most important towns are Kobe and Kakkabia, on the caravan route across the country.

Government.—Darfoor was formerly an independent kingdom, but in 1874 was conquered and incorporated by Egypt. The country was divided under the "Sultan" into five provinces, each governed by a separate chief, with the exception of one, which is directly under the authority of the king. Mohammedanism is the prevailing religion. The inhabitants are proud, treacherous, and ill-disposed toward strangers. The United States has no trade with Darfoor, nor does it maintain any consuls or agents within its territory.

BY GEO. L. FOX.

Arabic—Misr; or, Musr. Coptic—Cham; or, Kehn. French—Egypte. German—Aegypten. Russian—Egipet. Italian—Egitto. Spanish—Eg^{to}. Portuguese—Egitto. Swedish—Egypten. Turkish—Kibt; or, Keebt. Hebrew—Mizr; or, Mizraim. Chinese and Japanese—An³ Chi².

Location, area, etc.—Egypt is a country at the north-eastern extremity of Africa, bounded on the north by the Mediterranean sea, on the south by Nubia, on the east by Palestine, Arabia and the Red Sea, and on the west by the Great Desert. Its natural position is favorable to a large commerce. It lies in the direct route between Asia and Europe, and the river Nile, which drains its entire length, is the natural means of communication with the outside world for many interior tribes of Africa. Besides Egypt proper, the countries of Nubia, Ethiopia, Darfoor, and other territories are under the rule of the sovereign of Egypt. The government estimate of 1875 placed the area of this entire territory at 1,406,250 square miles; its population, 16,952,000. The area of Egypt proper is estimated to be 175,130 square miles; its population in 1878 to be 5,517,627.

Topography, etc.—The surface of the country is remarkably uniform, especially in Lower Egypt. In Upper Egypt it is more rugged, though the mountains do not take the form of peaks, but approach closely to the river in the shape of bluffs. The Nile is the great natural feature, and its yearly overflow is the great phenomenon that gives the country its life. It begins to rise about the time of the summer solstice, reaches its greatest height at the autumnal equinox, and sinks slowly away during a period of nine months, leaving its enriching deposit of alluvium upon the soil of the valley. With rare exceptions, only the land covered by the overflow is cultivable. The rest is mountain and desert. About 100 miles from the sea the Nile divides into several channels, and its narrow valley expands into the vast level and alluvial plain of the Delta.

Sub-divisions, etc.—Egypt proper is divided into three geographical districts, viz: Lower, Middle and Upper Egypt, designations drawn from the course of its great river. These are sub-divided into eleven administrative provinces, each with its capital, governed by a mudefr, who administers the criminal law. The eight largest cities are excepted in this division and have governors of their own.

Cities.—Cairo, the capital, has a population of 349,883; Alexandria, 212,054; Damietta, 29,383; Suez, 12,478.

Climate.—The climate of Egypt is healthy to those who can bear great heat and avoid the low, marshy regions. The dry climate of the desert tracts is unvaryingly healthy, and the least healthy time of the year on the overflowed land is when it is drying. The atmosphere is very dry and clear, except on the sea coast. Here rain falls frequently, but it is rare in other portions of the country.

Flora and Fauna.—No rain-fall naturally results in no forests. Of the few trees found along the road, or in groves, the most common are the date palm, sycamore, doan-palm, cypress, myrtle, and tamarisk. Among plants, the papyrus, from which paper was made, and the lotus, famous in history, are almost extinct. Besides the grape, there are many tropical fruits such as dates, figs, lemons, pomegranates, etc. From the absence of forests there are few wild beasts. The wolf, fox, jackal and hyena lurk in the desert places, and the wild ass, antelope and wild boar furnish sport for the hunter. The hippopotamus and crocodile, once common, have retreated before the population to the interior and distant regions of the empire. The most characteristic of the domestic animals is the camel, which is the great carrier of freight across the deserts. There are also horses, horned cattle and sheep.

Agriculture always has been, and is now, the chief industry of the inhabitants. The tillers of the soil, however, profit little by the richness of the inundated land, for the tax gatherer takes the largest share of the income. Irrigation, made necessary by the absence of rain-fall, is accomplished by canals, dikes, and by shadoofs, machines much like an old-fashioned well-sweep, which line the banks of the Nile for miles. The crop planted after the subsidence of the river consists chiefly of wheat, barley, tobacco, flax, and various vegetables, which are harvested in three or four months. After this, by artificial irrigation another crop, consisting of sugar-cane, maize, cotton, indigo and madder is cultivated.

Trade.—The principal exports are cotton, cereals and sugar. Minor items in the list of exports are corn, barley, dates and flax. The value of the exports during the year 1879 was about $69,273,500. The imports, estimated at a yearly value of about $26,000,000, are chiefly cotton fabrics, manufactured goods, machinery, coals, oil and wine. Nearly 70 per cent. of the commerce is with Great Britain; but much of it consists of goods in transit.

Government.—The khedive of Egypt, at present Mohamed Tewfik, who succeeded on the abdication of his father, Ismail I., 1879, is, so far as Egypt is concerned, its personal, independent and absolute sovereign. He owes nominal allegiance to the sultan of Turkey, but holds his power on the easy tenure of tribute and military aid in case of war. Though he is nominally assisted by a privy council and eight ministers, the administration is at present carried on under the supervision of France and England, represented each by a controller-general. These officials have full power to investigate into every public service of the state, to require full reports of every department, and they may report to the khedive, whenever they think best, and are required to do so at least once a year.

Religions.—The great majority of the Egyptians are followers of Mohammed. The Christians in the Empire number over 600,000, and all religions are tolerated.

The Army of Egypt, raised by conscription, consists nominally of 18 infantry regiments, 4 of cavalry, and 144 guns. The number, which varies greatly was, at the close of the Russo-Turkish war, 18,000.

Railways, etc.—The 1,100 miles of railroad owned by the government, traverse chiefly the northern portion of the country, and extend up the Nile as far as Asyoot. Among the public works the Suez canal is world-renowned, but the shares which formerly belonged to the khedive are now the property of the English government. A breakwater at Alexandria gives a safe anchorage of 1,400 acres of water in extent. With 8,690 miles of telegraph there is connection between Alexandria and the Mediterranean sea, and Khartoom, in the interior of Africa.

Education.—In late years Egypt has spent annually $250,000 upon its educational system, exclusive of the military schools. The government supports besides elementary and industrial schools, schools of higher grade—polytechnic, surveying and bookkeeping, law and medicine. There are also, in connection with the mosques, primary schools and colleges, while foreign mission boards support many schools. The proportion of girls' schools is small.

Revenues, etc.—The whole annual revenue raised chiefly from the land tax, in 1878 was estimated at about $41,000,000. The annual expenditure in the same year was $51,000,000. The finances of Egypt are in a bankrupt state. Within 15 years the enormous debt of nearly $430,000,000 has been contracted.

THE ISLAND OF RÉUNION.

BY CHARLES E. WILBUR, A.M.

French—Île de la Réunion. German—Reunion. Russian—Reunionski Óstrof. Italian—Isola della Riunione. Spanish—Réunion. Swedish—Isle de la Réunion, (Bourbon).

Location, etc.—Réunion, or Isle de Bourbon, as it was formerly called, is an island in the Indian Ocean, the southernmost of the Mascarene Isles, lying about 80 miles southwest from Mauritius, and 460 miles east from Madagascar. It has an area of about 950 square miles. Its population in 1873 was 193,362.

Topography, etc.—It may be described as one great mountain mass, of which the highest peaks rise to more than 10,000 feet above the sea-level. Pitou de Furnaise, 7,200 feet high, is one of the greatest volcanoes in the world, having two eruptions a year. The soil is generally extremely fruitful. About a fourth part of the island is cultivated, chiefly along the coast. The climate, which was once mild and salubrious, is now very unhealthy to dwellers in the temperate zones, who cannot reside long there without an attack of the typhoid fever or dysentery. The capital of the island, and seat of government, is St. Denis, in the northwest coast, with a population of 9,000, a college and a botanical garden.

Products, etc.—The plants of Arabia, of the Asiatic Archipelago, and of the south of Europe succeed equally well here; coffee and cloves are produced along with the fruits of Italy and Spain.

Trade.—The trade is estimated at about $10,000,000, but little of which is directly with the United States. By far the most important article of export is sugar; coffee, vanilla, cloves and saltpetre, wood for cabinet-making and dyewoods are the other exports. The value of the exports have been decreasing since 1867, as crops have repeatedly suffered from cyclones and drought. The cereals grown on the island are not sufficient for its own wants. The island belongs to France and is considered one of her most important insular colonies. The mean temperature is 77° F. There is an almost total want of harbors, there being but two tolerable anchoring places on the coast. The United States has no representatives here.

THE KINGDOM OF GANDO.

BY. C. C. OTIS, A.B.

Danish, German, French, Italian, Russian, Spanish, Portuguese, Swedish and Turkish—Gando.

Location, Size, etc.—Gando is a kingdom in West Central Africa, lying on both sides of the river Niger. It consists of the following separate districts or provinces, viz: Libtako, in the north, Yaga, Saborma, Gurma, Dendima, the greater part of Yoruba, with the town of Ilori, Yansi, part of Nupe or Nyffe and part of Borgu. The political unity of these various parts is maintained with great difficulty, owing to the anarchy and mutual hostilities into which they are plunged. The kingdom was established in 1817 by the foolah or fulatah, upon the dissolution of the Houssa kingdom of Hatchena. Most of the population are Mohammedans.

Soil, Products, etc.—The soil is fertile, and produces a luxuriant growth of vegetation, including the yam, the date, and the banana. The town of chief importance is Gando, situated upon the Sokoto river. Among the other more important towns may be mentioned Rabba, Egga, Busah, Igbigbo and Bida. The whole territory is estimated to cover 81,500 square miles, and its population is estimated at about 5,800,000. The United States are not represented by consuls or agents. Neither newspapers nor banks are found here.

THE REPUBLIC OF LIBERIA.

BY REV. E. EDWIN HALL.

Danish, German and French—Liberia. Russian—Leberia. Italian, Spanish and Swedish—Liberia.

Location, Size, etc.—Liberia, a republican State on the west coast of Africa, founded in 1821 by free blacks from the United States, is situated between latitude 4° 20' and 7° 20' north. It extends from the southern boundary of the British colony of Sierra Leone to the Pedro river, a distance along the coast of about 600 miles. All this territory has been purchased from the original proprietors. The interior boundary of these purchased tracts extends from 30 to 60 miles from the coast, widening as new purchases are made. In 1863 the area actually under the control of the republic was about 9,700 square miles. Population in 1874, 720,000, of whom 20,000 were colonists and their descendants, and 700,000 aboriginal inhabitants.

Topography and Geography.—The land on the coast is generally low and sandy, except near the capes, where the shore is bold and rocky. From the coast the land gradually rises into forest-covered hills, with fertile valleys, presenting an undulating region abounding in streams and rivulets, said to be salubrious and comparatively free from the malaria of the mangrove swamps near the coast.

Climate.—The climate is that common to regions near the equator. There are two seasons, wet and dry. The rainy season is not without some pleasant days in every month, and in every month of the dry season there is more or less rain.

Divisions, Cities, etc.—The republic is divided into four counties; the capital and largest town is Monrovia, a seaport on Cape Mesurado; population in 1873, 13,000. There are 13 smaller towns or villages in the other counties.

Productions.—The soil is rich and produces in abundance all kinds of tropical fruits. Cotton, coffee, indigo and the sugar cane thrive well, and on the highlands good crops of wheat, barley, corn and oats are raised. There are several varieties of palm, all useful, especially the nut-bearing palm, from which palm oil is made. Mahogany, rosewood, teak and other valuable trees abound. Dyewoods, the acacia, yielding gum-arabic, the copal tree, and medicinal plants are numerous. Camwood, ivory, palm oil, hides, rice, coffee, sugar and other articles, procured in part from the natives, are sold to American and English merchant vessels, or exported direct to foreign ports. Iron ore of good quality abounds in Liberia, and gold is said to exist in the interior.

Transportation.—The want of roads and means of transportation prevent the occupation and development of the more healthy parts of the country distant from the coast. About 30 coasting vessels have been built and manned by the colonists, and they have some ships engaged in commerce with the United States and Great Britain.

Government, Schools, etc.—The government is republican; the president, senate and house of representatives are elected by the people. There is an established system of common schools. In Mesurado county there are 36 public schools and 1,155 pupils; there are also a high school and a college, and religious privileges adequate to the wants of the people. Public revenue, $110,000, which is expended for civil service, justice, schools, and the support of an armed force. Debt in 1871, $500,000. The direct trade of the United States with Liberia is as yet inconsiderable.

For map, lists of newspapers and bankers, see other departments of this work.

The resident representatives of the United States to Liberia are:

Monrovia—Henry Highland Garnet, Minister Resident and Consul General.

Monrovia—M. A. Amney, vice consul general.

THE ISLAND OF MADAGASCAR.

BY CHARLES E. WILBUR, A.M.

Native—Madecasse-Madegasse; or, Malagâs. Danish—Madagaskar. French—Madagascar. German— Madaskar. Russian—Madagaskar. Italian—Madagascar; or, Madecasse. Spanish, Portuguese, Swedish, Turkish and Arabic—Madagascar.

Location.—Madagascar is an island situated east of the southern African coast, and extending over an area larger than that of the British Isles. It is in latitude $21^{\circ} 57' - 25^{\circ} 38'$ south, and longitude about $43^{\circ} 51'$ east from Greenwich; length, 1,030 miles; greatest breadth, 350 miles; area estimated at 225,000 square miles; population, 2,500,000. The capital is Tananarivo, with a population of 80,000.

Topography.—Madagascar comprises two distinct parts—the northern, which is mountainous, and the southwestern, which is comparatively flat. Five great mountain chains traverse the country, all in a north-northeast and south-southwest direction. They have a very sterile soil. The central provinces of Madagascar have been the scene of volcanic phenomena on an immense scale. The Ankarat mountains, forming an extinct volcanic centre, cover an area of 600 square miles. In a region of 25 miles from this range more than 40 craters have been visited and mapped.

Vegetation, Climate, etc.—Madagascar has been celebrated for its luxuriant vegetation; but it appears that it is sterile and desolate in the central and southwestern parts. In the north and east the climate is moist. Magnificent forests clothe the hills. Elsewhere this vegetation forms a narrow belt along the shore. The climate is temperate and healthy in the highlands of the interior, but low fever renders the hot coast undesirable as a residence for Americans or Europeans. The flora and fauna, although resembling those of Africa, and more remotely of India, are so peculiar as to form a region apart. They comprise many species, and even many genera, nowhere else to be found. The exports of Madagacar are horned cattle and a small quantity of rice, shipped principally to Mauritius and Bourbon. The island is rich in iron, but the present means of working it are very deficient.

Government.—The government is a despotism, modified by customs and usages which have the force of law. The kingship is hereditary in the royal family, though not in the direct line of descent. The ruler exercises the prerogative of appointing his own successor from the royal family. It is allowable to select a female, and the present ruler is a queen. Since the large increase of the army the precedent of usage and custom is largely disregarded, and the government is practically a despotism.

Religion, Army, etc.—The religion was formerly a low form of heathenism, modified by a belief in a supreme God; but in 1869 the queen and a large number of the nobility were baptized into Christianity, and that has now become the prevailing religion. The army is large, well armed, and disciplined after the European manner. The officers form a sort of aristocracy. At present the only mode of traveling is in palanquins, borne on the shoulders of men, and the paths by which this simple method of journeying is performed are often so bad as to cause much delay. No direct commerce exists between Madagascar and the United States.

THE ISLAND OF MAURITIUS.

[BELONGING TO THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT.]

BY REV. E. EDWIN HALL.

Danish—Mauritus. French—Île Maurice. German—Mauritus. Russian—Ôstrof Mavrikia. Italian—Isolo di Francia. Spanish and Portuguese—Maurício. Swedish, Turkish and Arabic—Mauritius.

Location, Size, etc.—Mauritius, or the Isle of France, is an island in the Indian Ocean, belonging to Great Britain, lying in 20° north latitude and 57° east longitude, from 70 to 80 miles northeast of the Isle de Bourbon, and 500 miles east of Madagascar. In form it is an irregular oval, about 36 miles in length and from 18 to 27 miles in breadth; area, 676 square miles; population (est.) in 1878, 354,623. The island is surrounded by a coral reef, generally running parallel to the shores, at the distance of one or two furlongs. In this reef occur 11 breaks or passes, through most of which vessels may approach the island and find good anchorage within.

Topography.—From whatever direction the island is approached, the aspect is singularly abrupt and picturesque. The land rises rapidly from the coast to the interior, where are formed three chains of mountains from 1,800 to 2,000 feet above the level of the sea, intersecting the country in different directions. Though from its mountainous character much of the interior is not available for agriculture, yet extensive plains are found in the highlands; and the valleys and the lands along the coast are well adapted to the ordinary purposes of cultivation, or to growing all kinds of tropical fruits and productions. Extensive forests cover considerable portions, and in the center of the island are several small lakes.

Climate.—In temperature, rain, physical aspect, and diversity of climate, the island has some resemblances to Jamaica. The heat is tempered on the coast by the sea breezes, and in the interior by the elevation of the surface. The climate is not prejudicial to the health of the white population. The mean annual temperature at Port Louis is about 74° Fahr. Between December and May the island is subject to hurricanes. The island is divided into nine districts. Port Louis is the capital, and the port through which all foreign trade is carried on. It is a flourishing city with a population of 66,000, two railways, nine churches, six newspapers, a theatre, a public library, a citadel, good barracks, two colleges, and several well-established and strong banks.

Flora and Fauna.—Nearly every beautiful tree of the tropics flourishes here; the native timber is of good quality and includes ebony, oak, iron-wood and pine. Deer, wild hogs and goats are abundant in the mountains, and short-legged hares are numerous in the plains. Apes are also found in the forests.

Agriculture, etc.—Indigo, cotton and spices have been cultivated; sugar is now the chief product, and in 1879 there was exported unrefined sugar to an amount valued at £486,295. The total value of exports in 1878 to all countries was £3,777,379; total value of imports the same year was £2,229,346.

The Government is vested in a governor, aided by an executive council, and a legislative council of seven official members and ten members chosen from the chief landed proprietors, and confirmed by the crown.

Religion, Schools, etc.—The prevailing religion is the Roman Catholic; the English church is represented by a bishop. At Port Louis is a convent school, a royal college, and numerous public schools in a flourishing condition. The main roads of the island are good; there are two railway lines, aggregating 92 miles in length, along which and generally throughout the island telegraphs are established. Public revenue in 1879, £2763,769; expenditures, £746,199.

For map, lists of newspapers, banks and value of money, see other departments of this work.

THE EMPIRE OF MOROCCO.

BY W. H. M'CARTHY, A.M.

Native—Maghrub. Arabic—Moghreeb-el-Aksa. French—Maroc. German—Marokko. Russian—Marótkko. Spanish—Marruecos. Italian—Marocco. Swedish—Marocko. Portuguese—Marocco. Turkish—Fess.

Location, Size, etc.—Morocco, or Marocco, is one of the Barbary States of North Western Africa. At the north of Morocco are the straits of Gibraltar and the Mediterranean sea, at the east Algeria, at the south the Sahara, at the west the Atlantic. Morocco lies between 28° and 36° north latitude, and 1° 20' and 11° 30' west longitude, covers an area of 222,560 square miles, and has a population of about 6,000,000. The topography of Morocco comprises mountains, plains and valleys in variety. The Mons Abyla of antiquity, one of the pillars of Hercules, is the most northern point of Morocco. The level portions of Morocco are chiefly inhabited by Arabs and Moors. The Berbers and the Shelluhs occupy the mountain regions.

Cities.—The two capital cities are Morocco and Fez. The city of Morocco is surrounded by a strong wall 30 feet high. Its principal mosque stands in 31° 37' 4" north latitude, and 7° 36' west longitude. The city of Morocco contains 19 mosques, 2 enadrassas or colleges, and 1 hospital. The population is about 80,000. The city of Fez is about 85 miles from the Mediterranean. Population 100,000. The views from Fez are magnificent. Ruins of every sort are seen in every direction. Fez was once famous as a place of learning, and it is filled with the tombs of holy men. Pilgrimages have sometimes been made to Fez instead of Mecca.

Climate, etc.—The climate of the western part of Morocco is very temperate. Cool sea breezes blow here with great regularity. On the south-east side of the mountains there are greater extremes of heat and cold. At the city of Morocco the mean annual temperature is about 64°. Most of the fruit trees of Southern Europe grow in Morocco, and of the forest trees there is a great variety. There are many wild animals, especially in the southern part. Various domestic animals are reared in Morocco. The inhabitants are generally more extensively engaged in rearing cattle than in agriculture.

Agriculture, etc.—Agriculture is in a backward state, notwithstanding the great fertility of the soil. Wheat, barley, rice, maize and durra (millet), grow in great abundance in the level regions. In Morocco each family is supplied with the necessities of life by the labors of its own members. Woolen and cotton thread is spun by the women and woven by the men. Manufacturing is carried on, however, to a considerable extent in the towns. Tanning occupies an important place. This art is carried on to great perfection.

Shipping and Trade.—during the year 1879-80 there were cleared from the ports of Morocco 1,097 vessels with cargoes valued at $2,825,860. During the same period there were entered at the same ports 1,068 vessels with cargoes valued at $4,339,088. The total imports into the empire of Morocco during the same year reached a value of $4,714,863, of which $13,273 were from the United States direct. The value of lumber, flour, cotton and petroleum from America imported into Morocco from Great Britain, Gibraltar and France are included in the values of importations credited to those countries respectively. The total exports from Morocco in the year 1879-80 amounted in value to $3,747,685, of which $1,949,945 were to France, $1,563,490 to Great Britain and none to the United States. The principal articles of exports were almonds, beans, bird seed, bones, dates, goat skins, hides (of which the whole stock came to the United States through the hands of French merchants), and wax. The principal importations during the year were flour, cotton goods, raw cotton, cloths, coffee, tobacco, petroleum and raw silk. There has been imported for the first time a number of ploughs and other agricultural implements, as well as woodenware and pumps from the United States, which the Moors are gradually adopting. The duty on all imported goods is limited by treaty to 10 per cent. ad valorem. From the persistent way in which the spirit of industry is crushed out of the people, it is impossible that commerce should flourish in Morocco. It is wonderful that trade has increased even in the degree detailed. Morocco is supposed to be rich in mineral treasures, though very little attention has been given to mining.

Governments, etc.—Morocco is an empire subject to the sultan. It is divided into four territories, and these into districts. The districts are under a kaid, or governor, who collects the taxes. The sultan's power is unlimited. The empire is hereditary and confined to males. The prevailing religion is Mohammedanism. Christianity is tolerated. The means of inland communication are very poor. There are no roads except in the neighborhood of towns, and no wheeled vehicles are used.

In a recent official report made by United States Minister Noyes, of Paris, to the United States State Department, the following language is used:

"The countries lying on the north-west coast of Africa, the islands of the Mediterranean, the Turkish empire, Greece and Morocco, are all favorably disposed toward the United States, and ready to enter into commercial relations with them. American productions most in demand in these countries are cotton goods, petroleum, copper manufactures, iron bars, nails, cutlery, leather, rosin, turpentine, tar, starch, refined sugar, carpets, thread, coal, agricultural implements, glass-ware, india rubber goods, stoves, joiners' tools, fire-arms, household furniture, clocks and watches, brass manufactures, brooms and brushes, lamps, plated-ware, bacon and hams, canned meats and trunks."

THE REGION OF SENEGAMBIA.

(INCLUDING ENGLISH, FRENCH, AND PORTUGUESE POSSESSIONS.)

BY C. C. OTIS, A.B.

French—Sénégamбие. German—Senegambien. Russian, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, Swedish and Arabic—Senegambia.

Location, Size, etc.—This large maritime tract of country in Western Africa derives its name from the two principal rivers, the Senegal and the Gambia. It extends from 10 to 18° north latitude, and from 4° to 17° 30' east longitude, covering an area of about 400,000 square miles. It is bounded on the north and east by the Sahara and Soudan, on the south by Sierra Leone, and on the west by the Atlantic. The population is estimated at from 9,000,000 to 12,000,000. The French, Portuguese and English each have colonies along the coast for purely commercial purposes.

Topography, Climate, etc.—Back from the coast the country is quite mountainous, the highest peaks being about 4,000 feet above the sea. The climate is said to be the hottest in the world, especially along the border of the Sahara, where the mercury often rises to 110° F. in the shade.

Productions, etc.—In some parts the soil is exceedingly fertile, and rice, maize, millet and hemp are extensively grown. The elephant, hippopotamus, buffalo, deer, antelope, wild boar, lion, panther and hyena are natives of the country. There are about 20 separate states, each having its own governor or king. The inhabitants have reached a higher state of civilization than most of their neighbors. Slavery and the Mohammedan religion prevail among them. The British colony of Gambia embraces the Island of St. Mary, at the mouth of the Gambia river. Bathurst is the capital and chief commercial town. Here are schools, hospitals, and the government buildings. The chief articles of export are gold, ivory, hides, tortoise-shell, gum, palm oil, cocoanuts, ginger, rice and cotton. The British have also several forts along the river named, giving them command to some extent of the interior and its trade. Total area of possessions, about 20 square miles. The French government exercises authority over numerous places and districts along the coast, where it maintains forts and carries on trade with the natives. The Portuguese also have a footing at several points, chiefly at Bissao and Cacheco.

(A PROVINCE OF EGYPT.)

BY W. H. M^CCARTHY, A.M.

Arabic and Turkish—Soodan. French—Nubie. German, Swedish and Danish—Nubien. Russian—Nubiia. Italian, Spanish and Portuguese—Nubia.

Location.—Nubia is a country of Eastern Africa. At the north lies Egypt; at the east the Red Sea; at the south, Abyssinia and the Dinka country; at the west the Sahara. It is between 11° and 24° north latitude, and 25° and 26° east longitude, and covers an area of about 360,000 square miles, and has a population of 400,000. Some authorities include only the territory east of the Nile under the name Nubia. The Nile flows through Nubia from Abyssinia to Egypt. Lower Nubia is largely made up of deserts, the great Nubian desert being the largest. The greater part of Upper Nubia is a well watered table land varied by ranges of mountains of no great height. Much of Upper Nubia is irrigated by means of water forced up from the rivers by water-wheels. The climate is very hot, but healthy, owing to the dryness and purity of the atmosphere. Among the animals of Nubia are the hippopotami and crocodiles which are found in the rivers. The grain principally cultivated is the durra, which is used for bread. The stalk of the durra grows to 7 and 8 feet high, and the kernels are as large as hemp-seed. The date is also a very important vegetable product.

Trade, etc.—Various articles of household use are manufactured from the leaves of the date tree, and coarse woolen and cotton cloths are woven. These are almost the sole manufactures of Nubia. The chief exports are grain, honey, musk, ebony, leeches and ivory. Nubia is a province of Egypt and is governed by the rulers of that country. The Nubians hold the Mohammedan creed. They are spoken of by travelers as morally superior to their neighbors, the Egyptians. Some of the most extensive and interesting monumental ruins are found in Nubia along the banks of the Nile half buried in the sand. They go back to the remotest antiquity, and are as fine as almost any in Egypt.

THE ORANGE FREE STATE REPUBLIC.

Danish—Orange Republica. German—Orange Fluss Freistaat. French—République d'Orange. Russian— Oráns Kaia Respublika. Italian—Libero Stato dell'Orange. Spanish and Portuguese—
Estado Libre de Orange. Swedish—Orangeflodsfristaten.

Organization.—In 1834 a large number of Dutch Boers, resident in Cape Colony, became dissatisfied with the British government, and emigrated northward in different directions. Some crossed the Drakensbergen mountains into Natal, others settled along the water-courses of the extended plains between the Orange and Vaal rivers. This country was beyond the boundary of Cape Colony, and the settlers, rapidly increasing in numbers, proceeded to frame laws for self government, repudiating all interference on the part of the colonial authorities. Their proclamation of independence of the British crown was not agreeable to the government; English troops were sent into the country, and after several conflicts the territory was annexed to the British empire, under the title of the "Orange River Sovereignty," and remained six years under the government of the queen's "Special Commissioner." The persistent demand of the Dutch Boers for independence was finally granted in 1854, when they framed a constitution for the government of their little commonwealth which they called the "Orange Free State."
